We are not playing the baby act or saying that we are no worse than anybody else. But we say that this is a question of the construction of the act of congress, and that the construction that has been put upon it by state legislatures which have authorized such combinations, by the Interstate Commerce Commission, whose duty it is to report such matters to congress for their action, by the Department of Justice, upon whom is laid, in very unusual terms, the duty of especially seeing that this anti-trust act is carried out, and the fact that, during all this period, state legislatures, the national government, everybody, so far as these railroad matters are concerned, have believed that this purchase of stock in competing lines, and the leasing of competing railroads, are not within the anti-trust act; that that is a circumstance to which the court always gives the highest weight. A universal, popular, legislative construction of the act is the very best proof of what congress meant by it. That is our position.

The Examiner. Proceed with the testimony of this witness.

The last question was read to the witness.

A. In all cases where the railroad companies issue printed annual reports we take those and compile the statements for publication. In cases where there are no printed annual reports, we provide blank forms calling merely for statistical data. And in cases where our requests for information on our blank forms are ignored, we take the information from the state board of railroad commissioners' reports.

Q. How is the matter prepared for the book from those reports?

A. The statements are made up, based upon the report of the previous year, as printed in the previous issue of the manual, except where some very important changes are necessary, when it is entirely rewritten, and then after it is in galley form, in proof, we send a proof of each statement to the railroad companies of the country, each railroad company.

Q. You send a proof of your statement as to each railroad company to the officials of that company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And on its being returned to you what do you do?

A. Well, whatever corrections they note—we of course examine them carefully to see that they may not have made an error, and if the corrections are all right why, we note them on our set of proofs.

Q. That is your purpose in sending them to the officers of the company, to have them corrected if there are any errors in them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is what you get?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that having been done, I suppose the printing of the book is carefully supervised to guard against error?

A. Oh, yes. The proofs are read two or three times.

Q. How many copies of the book circulate usually?

A. Our high water mark was 6,500; latterly it has been about 5,000, with extra sheets up to say 500 copies printed in case of emergency.

Q. How extensively does it circulate? Among what classes of people or government officials, anything of that kind?

A. Well, all railroad companies, except some of very minor importance, the banks, trust companies, insurance companies, public libraries, all big law firms, boards of trade, chambers of commerce, state officials, national government officials.

Q. What national government officials?

Mr. Richards. Well, I want to testify on that subject myself—that there isn't one of them in the Department of Justice.

Mr. Young. You ought to get an appropriation to buy one.

Mr. Richards. It takes all our money to prosecute the trusts.

Q. The Interstate Commerce Commission?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Ever since its organization?

A. They have taken three copies regularly, as near as I can recollect.

Q. Has it a foreign circulation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In European countries?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what countries in Europe?

A. Well, we have two agents, one in London (that is our chief agent), and one in Amsterdam.

Q. And where do the books go from those agencies?

A. I couldn't say as to that.

Q. What is the reputation of the book for accuracy and as a guide to be depended upon in reference to railroad statistics, history, etc.?

3523 A. It is everywhere recognized as being thoroughly accurate and reliable.

Q. Do you know of any other authority as complete and as accurate as this manual as to the railroads of the country?

A. There is none.

Q. Is there any similar publication at all in this country?

A. Not at all.

Q. I show the witness various volumes purporting to be Poor's Manual of Railroads, extending from 1871 to 1901, and ask him whether those are copies of your work.

3524 A. Yes, sir, all of those volumes that I see are copies of our work.

Q. And prepared in the manner you have stated?

A. Yes, sir.

CROSS-EXAMINATION.

By Mr. Richards:

Q. The preparation of this work is under your supervision?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Of course you could not do the work directly yourself?

3525 A. Not all of it, no, sir.

Q. You said that you obtained this information sometimes from the reports of the railway companies, sometimes from reports made to the state railroad commissioners, and that the abstracts you made you sent to the railroad companies for correction. To what officer of the railway company would you send the report for correction?

A. Usually to the accounting officer, the auditor or comptroller, as the case might be, or perhaps it might be sent to the secretary and treasurer—whoever would make the report to us.

3526 Q. Did the railways always reply to you and correct these reports, or not?

A. In very few instances they refused.

Q. Do you assume to determine whether certain railway lines are parallel and competing or not?

A. No, sir, I don't assume anything of the kind.

Q. Does your Manual contain a statement with respect to the growth of any particular railway system that a certain line which it had taken in, either by consolidation or otherwise, was a parallel and competing line? Do you state that? 3527

A. It gives the terminal points of the line as it existed and a historical statement, and that can be easily determined by anybody studying a map.

Q. Then, if I understand you correctly, your Manual does not contain any statement to the effect that certain railway lines are parallel and competing?

A. We merely give the facts, the history. We pass no opinions whatever, make no comments.

Q. Does it make a reference to the law of the state under which certain lines had been consolidated? 3528

A. In the history it probably may state in a majority of the cases the time the consolidation was made; it would give the date and perhaps state "organized under the laws of" such and such a state. That would be the history of the existing corporation.

Q. Well, it is true with regard to the growth of certain railway systems that a particular line may have been acquired by a system, like the Pennsylvania system, many years ago, when that line was local, that is, wholly within the state,—I mean the acquired line, and that acquired line, after it became the property, by consolidation or purchase of stock of the Pennsylvania Company, may have been extended into another state and become interstate. Is that true? 3529

A. Yes, it may be so.

Q. So that it might now be insisted that that was a parallel and competing line, so far as interstate traffic is concerned,—and it is with interstate traffic that the Federal Government is alone concerned,—while in point of fact, when the line was first taken in, it was local and did not engage in interstate traffic. Is that true?

A. That might be so. 3530

Q. Then, the only method of ascertaining whether a parallel and competing line, with respect to interstate traffic, had been acquired, would be to ascertain by contemporaneous maps just exactly the locality of the line when it was first acquired? It may show differently now, may it not?

A. Well, that is purely a legal question that I do not consider myself competent to discuss.

8531 Mr. Richards. Well, what I was really trying to get at was a matter of railway history. You have had charge of this publication for a great many years, and I understand that they expect to introduce in testimony a great many of these Manuals. I thought you might know something about that, generally. I want to know how to go to work and ascertain the facts myself.

By Mr. Young:

Q. I will ask you whether the statements in the Manuals under the head of the following companies were, before pub-8532 lication, submitted to the respective companies and corrected by them where erroneous. If you will just answer as to each one separately. The Boston & Maine Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Eastern Railway of Massachusetts?

A. Well, that is under the head of the Boston & Maine in our Manual.

Q. In recent years, yes. The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir.

8533 Q. The Old Colony Railroad Company?

A. That is treated the same way as the Eastern.

Q. I mean so long as it was an independent line.

A. Oh, yes. That is, from 1882 up.

Q. The New York & New England, afterwards the New England, so long as it was an independent line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The West Shore Railroad Company?

8534 A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railway Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railway Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Michigan Central Railway Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you treat the Canadian Southern as being under the Michigan Central? 3535

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you merely say Michigan Central as to that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Including under that the statement as to the United Railroads of New Jersey and the Philadelphia & Trenton?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Baltimore & Potomac, Philadelphia, Wilmington & Baltimore? 3536

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Pennsylvania Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Including in that—

A. All the lines.

Q. —the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago?

A. Yes.

Q. The Pittsburgh, Cincinnati & St. Louis?

A. Yes.

Q. The Chicago, St. Louis & Pittsburgh? 3537

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Norfolk & Western Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Illinois Central Railway Company? 3538

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How is it about the Southern Railroad Company? The same thing of that also?

A. Also, yes.

Q. Those that I have named are among the principal systems, in fact, comprise nearly all of the principal systems east of the Mississippi, do they not?

A. Yes, sir.

8539 By Mr. Richards:

Q. To what officers of these companies did you submit the statement which you afterwards published?

A. Well, as I stated before, it is usually to the accounting official, whether it be the auditor or the controller, or it may be the secretary, whoever sends us the information. But as all of those are printed reports, and have a long list of officials, they would go to the auditor or controller.

Q. In the case of all these railways which you have named, you say you have based your statement upon official reports 8540 of the railway company?

A. Their regular annual report to the stockholders.

Q. Of course, you know nothing personally as to the accuracy of the statements in these reports?

A. Only that they are official from the company, that is all I know.

JNO. P. MEANY.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 13th day of November, 1902.

FREDERICK G. INGERSOLL,
Special Examiner.

Mr. Griggs. Mr. Richards, we offer now in evidence these 3541 different copies of Poor's Manual as respects these railroads which we had on the list, from 1871 down to 1902. Now I will say that there are only certain parts of the publication with reference to these different roads that we want to make use of. It is possible for us to take time and stand here and read to the examiner those parts, but I suggest it would save a great deal of time if we would excerpt what we need to use, referring to the book and page in each instance, submit that to you and let that be printed without taking time to state the substance of it here. Of course your objection is in. That will facilitate matters. In the same way we propose to 3542 show—I don't know as we need to offer them in evidence—the statistics of railways in the United States published by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mr. Grover. As reported to congress.

Mr. Griggs. As reported to congress. And we will make some excerpts of the matter in those particular volumes that you want in.

Mr. Richards. I shall not stand in the way, Mr. Examiner, of adopting the most expeditious method of getting this information into the record, subject, of course, to the objection 3543
I make that it is incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant. I don't think that it can properly be proved in the way counsel are trying to prove it. I am not satisfied that the different railroad companies, if they were called upon in court, would say that these statements are perfectly accurate. I don't know what the statements are.

Mr. Griggs. Well, the only question now is whether we shall read to the examiner the parts of these volumes which we desire to use, or whether we shall submit a written transcript at a later day.

Mr. Richards. Well, you can submit a written transcript 3544 of it.

Mr. Day. You are now referring to Poor's Manual.

Mr. Griggs. To Poor's Manual, and also to the statistics of the railways of the United States reported by the statistician of the Interstate Commerce Commission to the Interstate Commerce Commission and reported to congress by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

3545 Mr. Griggs. Solicitor General, I propose that it be stated on the record that, subject to all the objections of the government as to its admissibility, the parts of these publications (Poor's Manual) and the statistics of railways of the United States reported to congress by the Interstate Commerce Commission, so far as we desire to use them, be compiled in a written statement, and filed with the examiner and a copy sent to you, instead of reading them openly to the examiner now.

Mr. Day. And sent to us subject to any objections which the government may wish to enter.

3546 Mr. Griggs. Yes, as to accuracy.

Mr. Day. And competency.

Mr. Griggs. Not as a matter of proof, but simply for use for purposes of illustration, I desire to offer in evidence certain maps.

Mr. Richards. I have no objection to the introduction and use of the maps simply for purposes of illustration.

Mr. Griggs. The maps are as follows:

Map of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad lines, with the lines referred to in different colors, as shown 3547 in the key to the map (defendant's Exhibit 11);

Map of the Boston & Maine line (defendants' Exhibit 13);

Map of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company and Steamboat lines (defendants' Exhibit 16).

The defendants also offer in evidence statement of the highest and lowest prices of Great Northern preferred stock in 3548 each month from January, 1901, to November, 1902, inclusive. (Submitted by consent.)

Mr. Richards. As shown by the publication referred to?

Mr. Griggs. As shown by the publications in the financial reviews.

The statement was marked defendants' Exhibit 17.

Mr. Clough. I now furnish to counsel for the United States 3549 the following documents which I have heretofore been called upon by them to furnish, viz.: Volumes numbered 19 and 20, Official Classification of freight traffic; volume numbered 34 of the Western Classification of freight traffic, being the classification in force on the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern Railways. This classification contains in red ink the changes that have been made in the classification since January 1, 1901. (Handing the documents to Mr. Day.)

Mr. Richards. In this connection, I desire to ask Col. Clough whether he can furnish us with the report made by 3550
Mr. Grover as to the result of his search for a Minnesota charter, prior to the organization of the Northern Securities Company?

Mr. Clough. Since the last examination, I have satisfied myself that the report referred to, made by Mr. Grover, was verbal.

Mr. Richards. Colonel, to whom was that verbal report made?

Mr. Clough. I think both to Mr. Hill and myself.

Mr. Richards. Can you state the substance of it?

Mr. Clough. I stated it in my evidence. 3551

The further taking of testimony in this case was adjourned until the morning of Friday, November 21, 1902, at 11 o'clock, Room 70, Post Office Building.

PROCEEDINGS NOV. 21.

City of New York, November 21, 1902.
Room 70, Federal Building, 11 a. m.

The Examiner. The case of the United States against the 3552
Northern Securities Company et al. was set for hearing this morning. Are you ready to proceed?

Mr. Grover. We have an understanding with Mr. Richards, representing the government, that the case shall be continued until Tuesday morning next, at 11 o'clock.

The Examiner. The case will be continued until Tuesday, November 25, 1902, at 11 o'clock a. m.

City of New York, November 25, 1902.
Room 70, Federal Building.

The hearing was resumed at 11 a. m., pursuant to adjournment.

All parties were represented.

Mr. Young. Mr. Examiner, I offer in evidence extracts from Poor's Manual of Railroads for the years indicated, in regard to various railroad companies. These, I believe, are subject to the same objection that was made to the introduction of Poor's Manual.

3554 Mr. Beck. We will re-state the objection.

Mr. Young, If, on examination by counsel for the complainant, they are found to be erroneous in any particular they are to be corrected to conform to the Manual which they purport to represent.

Mr. Beck. Counsel for the United States renew their objection to this testimony on the ground that neither Poor's Manual nor extracts thereof are competent testimony to prove any fact in the cause; and, in the second place, if competent testimony at all, that the extracts from Poor's Manual, offered 3555 by counsel for the respondents, are irrelevant. Counsel further reserve the right to place upon the record any special objection to such extracts which they may desire to note after reading the same.

The papers produced and offered in evidence by Mr. Young were marked Defendants' Exhibit 18-A, Defendants' Exhibit 18-B, Defendants' Exhibit 18-C, Defendants' Exhibit 18-D, Defendants' Exhibit 18-E, respectively.

Mr. Young. We also offer in evidence certain private statutes of the states of Massachusetts, Maine and New Jersey with reference to railroad companies, the titles of which are 3556 stated in the paper offered, and which paper is marked Defendants' Exhibit 19.

Mr. Beck. Counsel for the United States, while not objecting to the form of proof of these private statutes, yet objects to the same as irrelevant under the issues in this case.

Mr. Young. The defendants offer in evidence the pages and portions of pages enumerated below of the annual reports of the year 1889, and each year subsequent thereto, on the statistics of railways in the United States, made by the Inter- 3557

state Commerce Commission and transmitted to the senate and the house of representatives as an appendix and separate document constituting part of their report, together with the explanatory note printed in each volume as a preface and a table giving classification of railways and mileage for the years referred to, which tables include the pages and parts of pages referred to. They will be marked Defendants' Exhibits 20 and 20-A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I, J, K and L, both inclusive.

Mr. Day. Those are all Interstate Commerce Commission extracts?

Mr. Grover. Yes; with explanatory notes. 3558

Mr. Beck. Counsel for the United States object to this testimony as wholly irrelevant.

Mr. Grover. The defendants offer in evidence a memorandum showing principal changes in freight tariffs, Great Northern Railway system, in the years 1901 and 1902, to date.

Mr. Beck. That is objected to on the ground, in the first place, that the testimony is incompetent; in the second place, that it is irrrelevant for any purpose, as the effect of the combination upon rates is wholly unimportant.

The memorandum was marked Defendants' Exhibit 21. 3559

Mr. Grover. Defendants also offer in evidence a like memorandum in reference to the Northern Pacific.

Mr. Beck. Counsel for the United States renew the objection.

The Examiner. Same objection to the last as to the former.

The memorandum was marked Defendants' Exhibit 22.

Mr. Grover. The defendants offer in evidence pages 45, 46, 47, 48 and 56 of the Fifth Annual Report of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, fiscal year ending June 30, 1901, with the right reserved on the part of the government to offer the whole of said report or such other parts thereof as it may 3560 deem material.

A copy of the report referred to was marked Defendants' Exhibit 23.

Mr. Grover. Defendants also offer in evidence pages 37, 38, 39, 40 and 48 of the Sixth Annual Report of the Northern Pacific Railway Company for the year ending June 30, 1902, with the same reservation of right on the part of the government.

3561 A copy of the report was marked Defendants' Exhibit 24.

Mr. Young. In response to a request of counsel for the government, counsel for the defendants produce and hand to the government counsel the Thirteenth Annual Report of the Great Northern Railway for the year ending June 30, 1902, the government having the right to put the same in evidence if it so desires.

Mr. Grover. Exhibit 5, being Transcontinental Freight Bureau West Bound Tariff, contains many pages. For the purposes of this case reference is to be made to the cover, already marked Exhibit 5, to which is to be attached as part 3562 of the exhibit page 21 of said joint tariff.

Mr. Day. That is, both sides of the cover.

Mr. Grover. Yes, both sides of the cover.

The Examiner. The printed matter on both sides of the cover is offered?

Mr. Grover. Yes, and page 21.

The defendants, having no further testimony to offer at this time, further proceedings in this case were adjourned by the Examiner until the morning of Monday, December 1, 1902, at 11 o'clock, Room 70, Federal Building, City of New York.

3563

Room 70, Federal Building, City of New York,
December 1, 1902, 11 O'clock a. m.

The hearing was resumed at this time pursuant to adjournment, all parties being represented.

The defendants offered as evidence in this case the testimony given by E. H. Harriman, in the City of New York, in the case of the State of Minnesota vs. Northern Securities Company. Said testimony was received without objection, and is as follows:

"E. H. Harriman, being duly sworn as a witness on behalf 3564 of the complainant, testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION.

By Mr. Munn:

Q. Mr. Harriman, you are a member of the board of directors of the Union Pacific and chairman of its executive committee, I believe?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are also officially connected with the board of directors and the executive committee of the allied interests of 3565 the Union Pacific?

A. Nearly all of them.

Q. And you held such positions during the year 1901?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. On or prior to May 9, 1901, had you, acting for the companies or railway interests that you represented, acquired certain stock in the Northern Pacific Railway Company, amounting in round numbers to about 78 million dollars, par value?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that stock stood in your name and that of Mr. 3566
Pierce, holding it for the interests that you represented?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did J. P. Morgan & Company, or any member of that firm, open negotiations with you looking to the purchase or acquisition of such holdings during the fall of 1901?

A. Does it make any difference whether I opened the negotiations with them or they with me? I don't remember. It 3567 was either one or the other. The negotiations were opened. Or they may have been opened by some intermediate party. I don't remember just how it was.

Q. At what time were those negotiations opened?

A. It would be difficult for me to state within a month. It was September or October, I should think.

Q. It was either during the month of September or October, 1901?

A. I should think so.

Q. How long did those negotiations continue before they were finally consummated?

3568 A. I should think about a month or six weeks, possibly two months.

Q. With whom did you have your first dealings in those negotiations, if you remember?

A. I couldn't remember.

Q. Was it with Mr. Bacon of J. P. Morgan & Company?

A I had many talks with Mr. Bacon. I had talks with nearly every member of the firm.

Q. In these negotiations were they acting for themselves or acting with the understanding that these securities or this 3569 stock was to be turned over to some holding company when organized?

A. They never disclosed to me whether they were acting for themselves or somebody else.

Q. Before the negotiations were finally closed was it understood that you were to take some stock in a company to which this stock was to be transferred?

A. That is my recollection.

Q. And was that the Northern Securities Company?

A. It never was designated by any name.

Q. You didn't learn what company was to take it until you 3570 received the stock of that company in exchange?

A. Practically at that time.

Q. Did you understand, from the beginning of these negotiations, that this stock was ultimately to be turned over to some holding company which was to be organized?

A. No, I can't say that there was any understanding at the beginning of the negotiations for a settlement of whatever differences we might have in regard to that stock, whether it was to be taken by them or by a holding company, or how it 3571 was to be paid for. It was only towards the end, when the thing crystallized, that the suggestion was made that payment should be made partly in cash and partly in a holding company stock. I think it was just toward the end of the negotiations when we were considering whether we would break away or get together on it.

Q. Well, did you understand at any time that they were acting for themselves in the matter and expected to take the stock themselves?

A. I had no understanding upon that subject.

Q. They were simply trying to secure this stock on some 3572 basis, then?

A. That is the substance of it.

Q. And it was not until toward the end of the negotiations that you learned they were acting for some holding company?

A. I didn't say I understood they were acting for a holding company. They didn't disclose to me that they were acting for anybody else at all during the negotiations.

Q. Well, you finally learned that the stock was in fact to be turned over to a holding company?

A. There never was anything on their part, it seems to me, 3573 that would lead me to infer that they were to turn that stock over to a holding company. Towards the end, when the matter crystallized, and when we were very nearly at the end of our tether, they offered to pay for these shares in the stock of a holding company so much, and so much in cash. Now, there was nothing said as to whether they would turn this stock over to a holding company or whether they would hold it themselves; but they would give us that holding company's stock in part payment.

Q. When did you learn that? How long before you actu- 3574 ally delivered the stock?

A. Before we delivered our shares?

Q. Yes.

A. It was several days. I don't remember just when. Perhaps two or three days. It may have been within three or four days, or perhaps two days. I have a great deal to do, Mr. Munn, and since our talk the other day I have been trying to 3575 refresh my memory on this very thing; but I was pretty busy in other matters at that time, and have been since.

Q. When you found that you were to take the stock of some other company in part payment for this stock, of course you knew then that they were acting for a holding company, did you not?

A. I don't see how I could know.

Q. Well, did you, Mr. Harriman?

A. No, I don't see how I could.

Q. When did you first learn that this stock was to be deliv-3576 ered to the Northern Securities Company?

A. When it was delivered.

Q. That was the first you knew about that?

A. That is my recollection. The first I knew was when it was delivered to that company.

Q. When did they first make a proposition to you to make payment for this, or part payment for it, in the stock of some other company?

A. I think that was towards the end of our various conferences and negotiations, as I said; within a few days, perhaps, of the time the thing was absolutely closed.

3577 Q. Now, during these various conferences you had when these negotiations were pending what was the talk about payment for your stock? Was it to be paid for in cash, or how were they to pay for it?

A. I don't recollect that there was anything said as to just how it was to be paid for until towards the end.

Q. What did these negotiations relate to then? Whether you would surrender your stock or give it up?

A. Whether we would do anything with our stock except to stand where we were on the basis of holding preferred and common stock.

3578 Q. I suppose when you acquired the stock you supposed you had acquired a controlling interest in the Northern Pacific?

A. Practically that is what we thought.

Q. And did they contend that they had the right to retire this preferred stock which you held without your consent?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That contention was made during these negotiations?

A. I think steps were taken to retire it before the negotia- 3579 tions were ended.

Q. You mean that official action had been taken, or that they told you they were going to retire it?

A. I think action had been taken.

Q. The record shows that the action taken to retire the preferred stock was on November 13, 1901.

A. It was about that time, then.

Mr. Young. And the record shows that your sale was closed after the 15th.

Witness. Then I say it was practically about that time.

Q. When in these negotiations did you first learn that they 3580 intended to retire the preferred stock?

A. I think when the action was taken.

Q. Up to that time, then, you supposed you had a controlling interest in the Northern Pacific by your holdings?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And why were these negotiations pending, then, looking toward a settlement of your disputes, if you had started in to buy a controlling interest in the Northern Pacific and supposed you had it, and no questions were raised about that retirement?

A. Well, of course it was stated to us that this preferred stock could be retired.

Q. Who made those statements?

A. Everybody. It was published in the papers. Statements were made by the directors and by people connected with the company, and published in the papers. I think you will find public statements were made at that time, that that was the intention. But of course the actual steps taken for that purpose were not taken until about the time we made our trade. And if they hadn't been taken and it hadn't been retired, we probably would have been in control. 3582

Q. You understoood, then, during these negotiations and prior to the time you closed the transaction—

A. That there was a probability—

Q. —that there would be an effort made to retire that stock without your consent?

A. A probability of it, yes.

3583 Q. Did Mr. Morgan, or any of the representatives of J. P. Morgan & Company, with whom you negotiated, state to you that they intended to do that?

A. I imagine they did. I don't remember just what—

Q. Well, that was one of the principal inducements that led you to finally surrender your holdings, was it not?

A. Practically.

Q. When did this discussion regarding the retirement of the preferred stock first come up, as you remember it?

A. I think in the summer of 1901.

3584 Q. So you had that in mind, when negotiations were first opened between yourself and the firm of J. P. Morgan & Company, of course?

A. I presume that that was one of the influences. I don't know whether I had it in mind or not. I didn't know just what we would do.

Q. At the time you finally consented to accept in part payment for your holdings stock in a holding company, did you insist upon any basis on which any other stock of the Northern Pacific Railway Company should be acquired by that holding company?

3585 A. No, sir.

Q. You finally agreed to turn in your holdings and receive from the Northern Securities Company upwards of 82 millions in stock of this company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know at that time on what basis this holding company was to take in any other Northern Pacific or Great Northern stock?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. On what basis?

A. $115.

3586 Q. For the Northern Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. And what for the Great Northern?

A. $180.

Q. Did you make any request or demand that they should not take any of the stock of either one of these companies at a higher rate than that?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you understand that they would not? 3587

A. I did not.

Q. Were you willing to surrender your holdings to a company and allow it to determine whether they would exchange their stock with some other holder for twice the amount that you were getting?

A. Not if I supposed they would do it. But there was no stipulation.

Q. Well, you understood they would not?

A. I don't think the thought crossed my mind.

Q. Did they represent to you that that was the basis on which they were going to take in the stock? 3588

A. The statement was made to me that they would put this Northern Pacific stock into a holding company and give us—not this Northern Pacific stock—but that they would give us in part payment a holding company's stock on the basis of $115 for Northern Pacific, and, if Great Northern were taken in, on the basis of $180 for Great Northern. They didn't state how much they were going to take in, or how little they were going to take in. Nor did I ask them to stipulate that they would not take any more than a certain amount or to agree to take a minimum amount. The statement was simply made 3589 that they were going to form a holding company, or had formed a holding company, and would pay us in this stock, and that those were the terms on which it was to be bought.

Q. Did they state to you that if they took in any other stock than what you would surrender to the holding company they would take it on the basis of $115 for the Northern Pacific and $180 for the Great Northern?

A. I don't think that statement was ever made. It was a simple statement that they were going to change these shares of Northern Pacific and Great Northern on such a basis, and that they would make us part payment in that stock. 3590

Q. That is what I want to get at. They told you, then, that certain holders of the stock of the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific were going to exchange their stock for the stock of the Northern Securities Company, on the basis of $115 for the Northern Pacific and $180 for the Great Northern?

A. They didn't say certain ones were, but they were going to form this holding company, and that they would pay me in 3591 the holding company's stock, which stock should be issued on that basis. They didn't say that they had agreed to exchange certain stock.

Q. No, but what I want to get at is this. Didn't you understand from their statements that the basis of exchange, if any was made, was 115 and 180?

A. Yes.

Q. That is, 115 for Northern Pacific and 180 for Great Northern?

A. Yes.

3592 Q. Were you consulted at all regarding the formation of this holding company?

A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't know where it was going to be organized?

A. No, sir.

Q. And had nothing to do with it?

A. No, sir.

Q. You were not consulted about the retirement of the preferred stock, either, were you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you make any inquiries regarding who were to be 3593 the officers of the holding company, or where it was to be incorporated, or the amount of its capital stock, or anything of that kind, before you agreed to accept its shares in part payment for your holdings?

A. I don't know that I made any inquiries. I presume there was considerable talk about it, but I don't remember that I made any inquiry from anybody.

Q. Do you remember any statements made by persons with whom you negotiated or by Mr. Hill or his associates, who ultimately formed this company, as to where it was to be incorporated, or the amount of capital stock, or its officers?

3594 A. All I remember is just as I have stated: a statement made to me that if this trade went through they would pay us in the shares of a holding company which would issue its stock in exchange for Northern Pacific at 115 and Great Northern at 180. And I agreed to take so much of that stock in exchange for the shares of the Northern Pacific we held—all the Northern Pacific we held.

Q. But you made no inquiries as to where the corporation 3595 was to be formed or the amount of its capital stock?

A. I knew, of course, the amount of the capital stock; but I didn't go into the particulars of the formation of the company at all. That may seem strange. But in the enormous transactions we have down here we simply have faith that the man who is doing the thing is doing it properly, or else we don't negotiate or trade with him.

Q. Did you finally consent to surrender your holdings on the basis on which you did because you had made up your mind they would carry out the determination you had heard expressed, to retire the preferred stock, and thus take away 3596 from you the controlling interest in the stock of the Northern Pacific?

A. I think I recollect pretty clearly that from our standpoint we thought it was better for us to accept that price for our stock than to go into a legal contest.

Q. And you understood that if you did not do that you would have a legal contest on that question?

A. Well, we took it for granted, naturally, action having been taken determining to retire the preferred stock.

Q. Well, action was not taken to retire the preferred stock 3597 until your negotiations had nearly reached a conclusion?

A. Yes, but they had not reached a conclusion.

Q. That is, you waited until the very last moment to see if they would do what you understood they would do?

A. Well, we were very patient.

Q. Then if such action had not been taken you would not have surrendered your stock?

A. I don't know. That is a condition we did not have to meet. I don't think I could answer that question fairly, nor do I think it is exactly a fair question; because the board of directors might have determined (if they had not done it) to 3598 have sold our shares for less.

Q. Well, you were acting on behalf of your company largely by yourself at that time, I suppose?

A. Largely.

Q. And your actions were guided by what you have stated?

A. By what I found, the surroundings, yes.

3599 Q. When you began buying this stock for your company or companies you did it with the expectation of acquiring control in the Northern Pacific, of course?

A. Or an influential voice in the management.

Q. And you knew that you did in fact have a majority of the combined stock of the Northern Pacific after you got through with your purchases?

A. Certainly.

Q. And would continue to control that company unless they retired your preferred stock?

A. Or unless we sold it.

3600 Q. Of course you knew, during these negotiations, that Mr. Morgan and Mr. Hill and the stockholders of the common stock of the Northern Pacific who were co-operating with them, or allied with them, claimed to control the Northern Pacific by virtue of a majority of the common stock?

A. Naturally.

Q. Did they claim to you during these negotiations that they had such majority of the common stock?

A. I don't remember that they did. That was the general talk. I don't think it was necessary for them to even make 3601 the statement.

Q. You knew that, of course?

A. Naturally. It was known by everybody. I think it was not necessary for them to make that statement to me, because among the other statements, as I say, about the retiring of the preferred stock, was a statement made and published in the papers.

Q. And they never disclosed to you for whom they were acting until the transaction was ready to be closed?

A. Do you mean Morgan?

Q. Yes.

3602 A. Do you mean the exact company?

Q. Yes.

A. My recollection is that he did not. In fact, I don't think this transaction was closed until practically the very minute the payment was made. I think there was considerable discussion and dispute as to the final payment, and about—I don't remember now whether it was the amount to be paid or whether it was the amount of stock to be delivered; I think it was the amount of stock to be delivered. They supposed 3603 we had somewhat more stock than we really had.

Q. When did you have your stock transferred on the books of the Northern Pacific Railway Company in the name of yourself and Mr. Pierce?

A. I don't remember. It must have been some time before that.

Q. It was prior to the annual meeting in October, wasn't it?

A. I think so, yes.

Q. And you had all your holdings transferred at that time?

A. Practically all. I don't think it was all; I think nearly all was, though. There may have been some of the stock held out; I don't remember.

Q. During these negotiations did the representatives of J. P. Morgan & Company, with whom you dealt, tell you that unless they organized a holding company and this stock was turned over to such holding company, that the transaction would not go through?

A. No, I don't think any such statement was necessary.

Q. Well, was any such statement made?

A. I don't remember that the question ever came up. This was a running negotiation, and it was difficult to tell what either side would do. I think until practically the last minute I didn't know what I would do.

No cross-examination.

(Signed) E. H. HARRIMAN."

3605 It is admitted that at a meeting of the board of directors of the Northern Securities Company, held at 27 Pine street, in the City of New York, on the 15th day of November, 1901, at 2:30 p. m., pursuant to adjournment, of which adjournment written notice had been sent to all directors, the following resolutions were adopted, as shown by the minutes of the meeting:

"Present: Messrs. James J. Hill, George F. Baker, Daniel S. Lamont, N. Terhune, George W. Perkins, W. P. Clough, George C. Clark, John S. Kennedy, D. Willis James and E. T.
3606 Nichols.

"The president occupied the chair.

"The minutes of the adjournment of the directors' second meeting, held at 31 Nassau street, in the City of New York, at 2 o'clock p. m. on November 14, 1901, were then read and approved.

"Upon motion, duly made and seconded, it was unanimously resolved that in case of absence or disability of the president his duties and authority shall be exercised by the respective vice-presidents in the order of their numbers, beginning with the first.

3607 "The president stated that he now had an opportunity of acquiring $37,023,000 par value of the common stock and $41,085,000 par value of the preferred stock of the Northern Pacific Railway Company at an aggregate price of $91,407,500, payable as to $82,491,871 in the fully paid-up and non-assessable shares of this company at par, and as to the remaining $8,915,629 in cash. On motion, and by affirmative vote of all the directors present, it was resolved that the president be and hereby he is authorized in behalf of this company to purchase said stock, namely, $37,023,000 par value of the common stock, and $41,085,000 par value of the preferred stock of the North-3608 ern Pacific Railway Company, at an aggregate price of $91,407,500, payable as to $82,491,871 thereof in the fully paid-up and non-assessable shares of the capital stock of this company at par, and as to $8,915,629 in cash, and that the officers of this company be and hereby they are authorized to issue fully paid-up and non-assessable shares of stock of this company to the amount of $82,491,871, and to pay $8,915,629 in cash in consideration of such $37,023,000 of the common stock and

$41,085,000 of the preferred stock of the Northern Pacific Railway Company. 3609

"Resolved, That the president be and hereby he is authorized at any time to retire at par for cash any and all preferred stock of the Northern Pacific Railway Company that may be acquired by this company, and in case such retirement shall be effected prior to January 1, 1902, to allow interest up to January 1, 1902, at the rate of four per cent per annum on the sum receivable for such preferred stock.

"Resolved, That the president be and hereby he is authorized in behalf of this company to purchase at their par value an amount of the convertible certificates of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, to be issued pursuant to the resolutions of the board of directors of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, passed November 13, 1901, equal to 75-80 of the par amount of any and all common stock of the Northern Pacific Railway Company that shall have been acquired by this company. 3610

"Resolved, That the president be and hereby he is authorized, in case of the purchase by this company of any of the controvertible certificates of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, to convert the same into common stock of the Northern Pacific Railway Company whenever such conversion may be effected. 3611

"Resolved, That the president be and hereby he is authorized to borrow on such terms as he may arrange any moneys required for the purpose of carrying out the foregoing resolutions, and to make all financial arangements and to do all acts and things which he may deem needful in the premises.

"The meeting thereupon, on motion duly made and seconded, was adjourned until 2 o'clock p. m. of Tuesday, November 19, 1901, at the office on the ninth floor of the building No. 27-29 Pine street, New York City." 3612

It is admitted that the proxy committee appointed by the directors of the Northern Securities Company to vote its stock in the Northern Pacific Railway Company was Charles Steele, A. B. Hepburn and George F. Baker, Jr., and the proxies appointed to vote the Northern Securities stock in the Great Northern Railway Company were James N. Hill, E. T. Nichols and Edward Sawyer.

3613 At the annual meeting, 1902, of the Great Northern Railway Company, E. T. Nichols voted the Northern Securities stock in the Great Northern Railway Company. At that meeting of the Great Northern Railway Company, of the stock owned by the Northern Securities Company 458,017 shares standing in the names of the trustees mentioned below were voted. The shares in the Great Northern Railway Company which were standing in the name of the Northern Securities Company were not voted. The total number of shares of Great Northern Railway Company stock voted at that meeting was 3614 650,771; 192,754 shares of Great Northern Railway Company's stock were voted by holders other than the Northern Securities Company or anybody representing it. All votes cast at said meeting were unanimous. The gentlemen in whose names the 458,017 shares stood of Great Northern stock owned by Northern Securities Company were not present. They voted by proxy. E. T. Nichols, secretary of the Northern Securities Company, held the proxies for those shares. The following are the names of those holding shares as trustees for the Northern Securities Company and the number of shares held by each:

H. H. Bourke	100,000
H. E. Hall	100,000
Wm. H. Bruel	100,000
M. R. Brown	11,514
E. Mayglothling	75,399
M. L. Zabriskie	635
Charles A. Pattee	70,469
Total	458,017

3616 At the annual meeting, 1902, of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, A. B. Hepburn voted the stock of the Northern Pacific Railway Company held by the Northern Securities Company.

At a meeting of the directors of the Northern Securities Company, held November 14, 1901, the three incorporators, Mr. George F. Baker, Jr., Abram M. Hyatt and Richard Trim-bell, constituted the board of directors. They adopted a res- 3617 olution as follows:

"Resolved, That the president be and hereby he is authorized for and in behalf of this company to purchase any shares of the preferred capital stock of the Great Northern Railway Company, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the state of Minnesota, that shall be tendered to this company at a price not exceeding $180 for each share of such capital stock of the par value of $100, such price to be payable in the fully paid-up shares of the capital stock of this company at par, the board of directors having adjudged and determined and hereby adjudging and determining that the value of such 3618 shares of the capital stock of the Great Northern Railway Company is at least $180 per share."

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Northern Securities Company, held November 13, 1901, the following resolution was adopted:

"Resolved, That the president be and hereby he is authorized for and in behalf of this company to purchase any shares of the common capital stock of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the state of Wisconsin, that shall be tendered to this 3619 company, at a price not exceeding $115 for each share of such capital stock of the par value of $100, such price to be payable in the fully paid-up shares of the capital stock of this company at par, the board of directors having adjudged and determined and hereby adjudging and determining that the value of such shares of the capital stock of the Northern Pacific Railway Company is at least $115 per share."

3620 The defendants offer as evidence in this case the testimony of W. P. Clough, taken in the City of New York in the case of the State of Minnesota vs. The Northern Securities Company. Said testimony is received without objection, and is as follows:

"W. P. Clough, being first duly sworn as a witness in behalf of the complainant, testified as follows in answer to interrogatories propounded by Mr. Munn:

Q. The records show that you were present at a meeting of the directors of the Northern Securities Company on the 15th 3621 of November, 1901, to which I have already called Mr. Nichols' attention (being the resolution above set forth), where the statement was made by the president of the Northern Securities Company as to his ability or the possibility of acquiring $37,023,000 of the common stock of the Northern Pacific, and $41,085,000 of the preferred stock. You were present at that meeting?

A. I was, yes, sir.

Q. Was there any discussion at that meeting as to the advisability of this purchase and the terms upon which it was to be made?

3622 A. There was no extended discussion.

Q. Well, will you state what discussion took place?

A. If you will be kind enough to let me take those minutes I will explain just what did occur. (Referring to pamphlet containing minutes of the meeting.) This meeting was an adjourned meeting, held at half-past 2 o'clock on the afternoon of the 15th, which, as I remember, was Friday. A little before the hour for the meeting had arrived, (perhaps half an hour or so), one of the partners of J. P. Morgan & Company (my recollection is that it was Mr. Steele) came to the Northern Securities office and said that a negotiation which was 3623 pending at that time between J. P. Morgan & Company and Messrs. Harriman and Pierce, for the purchase of their holdings in Northern Pacific preferred and common, he thought would very shortly come to a conclusion as to terms; that is, the precise terms upon which Harriman and Pierce would sell would be arrived at very shortly. And he said, at the same time, that probably before closing the contract, if one were entered into, Harriman and Pierce might, if the stock were

some action of the board, and suggested that some kind of action should be taken, and inquired about the meeting. I told him that there was to be a meeting that afternoon, but that likely there could not be another meeting on Saturday (which would be the following day) on account of the fact that a number of our directors did not come to their business on Saturday and that a meeting could not be had until the fore part of the week after that day. Then it was suggested that as that was the case and this bargain might come to an early termination and it might be desired to close it up soon, some sort of action 3625 be taken at the meeting to be held that afternoon. And then a sketch was made of a minute entry for the meeting, beginning with the words "The president stated" and ending with the resolution which closes the first paragraph of the 18th page of this printed volume of the minutes. But as the bargain had not yet been concluded, the figures showing either the amount of the stock or the price to be paid could not then be stated, but he thought they would be ascertained before the close of the meeting. So this preamble, commencing with the words, "The president stated," and the resolutions following were prepared just as they are now, with the sums left 3626 blank, and the meeting assembled and, after waiting a little while, no figures were present, and some of the directors being anxious to get away I produced this preamble and resolution and I read the resolution and explained it in a general way to the meeting. And after quite a general expression of opinion among the directors who were present, that a purchase of this stock was very desirable, the resolutions with the blanks and the preamble were adopted. Then we passed to other business. Just as the meeting was breaking up (the other business being finished) I think Mr. Perkins came in (who was a director). I think Mr. Perkins appeared for the first time 3627 near the close of this meeting, after most of the business had been done, and brought in figures showing the amount of preferred and common stock, respectively, that Harriman and Pierce had, and the price to be paid; showing the money and the amount of stock of the Northern Securities Company that was to be paid for it. I looked at it, and it was shown to Mr. Hill, and then it was perceived that the amount of Northern 3628 Pacific stock contained in that statement was appreciably less than the amount of stock which we had all the time supposed they owned. And we declined to close the trade; that is, the Securities Company declined to take the stock from Morgan & Company on that basis. The meeting then adjourned, with the whole matter left open. And, as I understood, negotiations were then resumed between Morgan & Company and Harriman and Pierce, and were concluded some time between Friday afternoon and the following Monday morning (which was the 18th). Then a basis was reached, which is expressed by the figures which now appear in this resolution. The pre-3629 ferred and common stock of the Northern Pacific were brought in and paid for, and the minutes were written up with these numbers inserted as they now appear here. The meeting for the purpose of acting upon this project again had been adjourned until the following Tuesday. It was found that the following Tuesday was the first day we could reasonably expect to get a quorum. So the following Tuesday the minutes of the meeting of the previous Friday with the blanks filled as they now stand, were read and approved by the board of directors. That is the history of the resolution.

3630 Q. Now, Col., that is the only official action taken by the Northern Securities Company for the acquisition of this stock?

A. Yes, sir. That is it, precisely.

Q. And no other authorization or ratification was given or made?

A. No, sir, none at all. When the minutes were read at the meeting of the 19th, and approved, with the resolution as it now appears of record, with the numbers filled in, the transaction had been closed; the Harriman and Pierce stocks had been delivered and paid for by the Northern Securities Company the previous day.

3631 Q. There had been no meeting of the directors or executive committee taking any further action regarding this particular transaction, between the meeting of November 15th and the one of November 17th that you refer to?

A. None whatever.

Q. November 18th, I guess it is.

A. 19th.

Q. November 19th?

A. Yes, sir. The board adjourned from Friday afternoon 3632 until the following Tuesday afternoon."

Counsel for the government have submitted to counsel for the defendants a statement of supposed errors in the extracts of Poor's Manual of Railroads, offered in evidence by the defendants at the last hearing. This statement of supposed errors counsel for defendants will compare and make such corrections as may be necessary to conform the extracts to the manuals.

The defendants rest.

TO HOLDERS OF STOCK OF THE GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY:

The Northern Securities Company, incorporated under the laws of the State of New Jersey, with an authorized capital stock of $400,000,000, and with power to invest in and hold the securities of other companies, has commenced business, 3636 and has acquired from several large holders of stock of the Great Northern Railway Company a considerable amount of that stock.

A uniform price has been paid of $180 per share, in the fully paid stock of this Company, at par. This Company is ready to purchase additional shares of the same stock at the same price, payable in the same manner, and will accept offers made on that basis if made within the next sixty days.

Offers for sale of stock of the Great Northern Railway Company should be made upon the enclosed form, and should be accompanied by the certificates of the stock offered with 3637 transfers duly executed, having United States stamps for transfer tax of two cents per share affixed.

Upon receipt of any such offer, so accompanied, the Northern Securities Company will deliver to the seller of the stock of the Great Northern Railway Company certificates of its own stock to the amount of the purchase price above named, or, if such certificates are not then ready for delivery, its negotiable receipt, obliging it to issue and deliver such certificates as soon as ready. For fractional parts of shares scrip certif- 3638 icates convertible into stock in multiples of $100 will be given.

NORTHERN SECURITIES COMPANY,
By James J. Hill,
President.

TO THE NORTHERN SECURITIES COMPANY, NEW YORK:

The subscriber hereby offers to sell and deliver to the North- 3639
ern Securities Company ———— shares in the capital stock of the Great Northern Railway Company, represented by the certificates hereto attached, for the price of one hundred and eighty dollars ($180) per share, payable in the fully paid stock of the Northern Securities Company, at par, in accordance with the terms of the circular of the latter named Company, dated November 22nd, 1901.

The stock of the Northern Securities Company to be paid in accordance with the foregoing tender should be issued as follows:

Shares. Name. Full address.

Dated ————, 190

(Copy.)

[Defendants' Exhibit 2.]

November 30th, 1901.

Dear Sir:

Replying to your letter of the 23rd instant, asking for further information about the Northern Securities Company, I beg to say that the business of that Company is to deal in high-class securities, to hold the same for the benefit of its shareholders and to do such other acts as will advance the interests of the Companies whose securities it holds.

3641 The powers of the Company do not include the operation of railways, banking, nor buying or selling for others on commission.

The organization of such a Company has been considered for many years by the original promoters of the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway Company, and its successor, the Great Northern Railway Company, who have always remained the largest shareholders therein. These men have deemed it wise to make permanent arrangements for the protection of their interests and for securing a continuous policy in the management of their properties. Believing the 3642 Northern Securities Company will secure the objects named, they have generally sold to it their holdings of Great Northern shares, on the terms stated in the circular.

The traffic of Coal and other local Companies is of great value to the Railway, while the conduct of the business of such Companies is outside of the Railway's corporate powers. The Securities Company will control this large traffic for the Railway and will receive the profits of these separate properties.

The offer contained in the circular came from the request of the large holders of Great Northern, above mentioned, who 3643 desired that all other holders might have the same opportunities as themselves in association with them, and upon the same terms. The writer is of opinion that the offer of the Securities Company is one that Great Northern shareholders can accept with profit and advantage to themselves.

Yours truly,

(Signed) JAS. J. HILL.

THIRTEENTH ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY.

To the Stockholders:

The President and Directors submit the following report for the year ended June 30th, 1902:

FINANCIAL.

CAPITAL STOCK.

There has been no increase in the authorized share capital of the Great Northern Railway Company during the year, and same remains as $125,000,000. 3654

Of the capital authorized there had been issued to June 30th, 1901 (page 6, last year's report)	$98,711,750.00
There have been issued during the year $12\frac{1}{2}$ shares, amounting to.....	1,250.00 in completing previous transactions.
1,400 shares, amounting to.....	140,000.00
have been transferred to the Great Northern Employes' Investment Company, Limited, under the contract referred to on page 7 of Report for the year ended June 30th, 1900. To June 30th, 1902, the Investment Company had subscribed and paid for 4,200 shares ($420,000) under the contract mentioned. 3655
Carried forward	$98,853,000.00

3656 Brought forward $98,853,000.00
250,000 shares, amounting to..... 25,000,000.00
were issued as of August 1st, 1901, in accordance with the President's circular of March 18th, 1901.

Total outstanding June 30th, 1902.....$123,853,000.00

There were held in the Treasury of the Company June 30th, 1902, 5,670 shares of Great Northern stock, not used in acquir-3657 ing the outstanding 4,536 shares of Manitoba stock, and 5,800 shares of Great Northern stock to be issued only to the Investment Company as subscribed for.

The Report last year explained in detail the securities to be acquired. During the year the Company has acquired the $5,000,000 St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba Railway Company's Improvement Bonds referred to last year, and same are held in the Company's Treasury. The adjustment of the accounts made necessary by this acquisition and mentioned in last year's Report (page 7) has been made, and is reflected in the Balance Sheet herewith, page 33.

3658 Instead of purchasing the capital stock ($5,000,000) of the Seattle and Northern Railway Company, as originally intended, it was decided to buy the physical property of that Company, and the same was purchased as of February 1st, 1902, by the Seattle and Montana Railroad Company for the sum of $1,500,000 cash. To enable the Seattle and Montana Railroad Company to make this purchase, action was taken by its stockholders to increase its capital stock from $12,500,000 to $14,000,000, the additional $1,500,000 of stock being bought by the Great Northern Railway Company.

3659 The stocks of the other Companies mentioned on page 6 of last year's Report have not as yet been issued, pending the completion of the lines and the closing of the construction accounts, but this Company has advanced the necessary funds for construction purposes, and is carrying the amounts as advances to apply on stock subscriptions.

BONDED DEBT. 3660

There has been a net increase of $1,292,000 during the year in the bonded debt of the St. Paul Minneapolis and Manitoba Railway Company, outstanding in the hands of the public, as will be seen by reference to table on page 32, made up as follows:

MONTANA EXTENSION MORTGAGE FOUR PER CENT BONDS issued during the year account construction of additional mileage within the State of Montana, as explained in previous reports		$2,278,000
Less the following reductions—
CONSOLIDATED MORTGAGE 4½ PER CENT BONDS redeemed and canceled by the trustee through the operation of the sinking fund, as per detail on pages 38 to 40		$1,012,000
Less bonds issued—
On account of additions and improvements	$26,000
In exchange for St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway Company's second mortgage bonds, surrendered and canceled	357,000
In exchange for St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway Company's Dakota extension mortgage bonds, surrendered and canceled.	49,000
Total issued		432,000
Net reduction in consolidated mortgage 4½ per cent bonds		$580,000
SECOND MORTGAGE SIX PER CENT BONDS, canceled as above		357,000
DAKOTA EXTENSION MORTGAGE SIX PER CENT BONDS, canceled as above		49,000
Total reduction		$986,000
Net increase in St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway Company's bonded debt		$1,292,000

There has been no change during the year in the bonded debt of any of the Proprietary Companies. 3663

The amount of Northern Pacific-Great Northern, Joint C. B. & Q. collateral 4 per cent bonds outstanding June 30th, 1902, is the same as reported last year, $215,153,000 Bonds and $1,400 Scrip. The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railway Company has collected the dividends on the C. B. & Q. R. R. stock, deposited as collateral to secure these bonds, and paid the interest on the bonds, without affecting this Company's Income Account.

GENERAL.

Expenditures were made during the year on the capital accounts of Proprietary Companies for work completed or under construction, as follows:

Eastern Railway Company of Minnesota	$1,417,587.46
Montana Central Railway Company (Credit)	19,298.99
Willmar & Sioux Falls Railway Company	9,717.00
Duluth, Watertown & Pacific Railway Company	1,603.00
Seattle & Montana Railroad Company	2,460,552.68
Duluth Terminal Railway Company	6,040.73
Park Rapids & Leech Lake Railway Company	6,781.12
3665 Minneapolis Union Railway Company (Credit)	10.45
Total	$3,882,972.55

As shown on page 27, there was appropriated out of the net revenue for the year $2,000,000 for the "Fund for Permanent Improvements and Renewals;" and there was charged against that fund $1,820,225.11, the cost of improvements (other than those charged to operation) made during the year to the property leased from the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba Railway Company.

NEW LINES.

The Report last year referred at length to new lines then under construction or contemplated, of which 268.29 miles have been completed, as follows:

Seattle & Northern Ry.,

Anacortes to Rockport, Wash., 54.42 miles taken over by the Seattle & Montana R. R. Co. February 1st, 1902, as explained on page 6.

Dakota & Great Northern Ry.,

3667 Bottineau to Souris, N. D., 12.72 miles, opened for operation October 7th, 1901; Lakota to beyond Edmore, N. D., 27.72 miles, opened for operation July 1, 1902.

These two lines have been leased by the Great Northern Railway Company.

Montana & Great Northern Ry.,

Jennings to Gateway, Mont. (on the International Boundary), 50.98 miles, opened for operation July 10th, 1902.

Crow's Nest Southern Ry., 3668

Gateway to Morrisey Junction, B. C., 44.26 miles, with a spur from Morrisey Junction to Morrisey, B. C., 4.21 miles, opened for operation September 15th, 1902.

Washington & Great Northern Ry.,

Marcus to Boundary, Wash., 27.66 miles, and from the International Boundary to Republic, Wash., 31.92 miles, opened for operation August 17th, 1902.

Vancouver, Victoria & Eastern Ry. and Nav. Co.,

From International Boundary line at Rideau, B. C., to the boundary line near Carson, B. C., 14.40 miles, opened for operation August 17th, 1902. A spur from the main line to Grand Forks, B. C., 1.89 miles, is under construction. 3669

These lines have been built in a thoroughly substantial and permanent manner, and have been equipped with passing tracks, yard tracks, stations, water plants and other buildings.

The work of changing from narrow to standard the gauge of the Great Falls and Canada Railway (now owned by the Montana and Great Northern Railway Company) from Great Falls to Sweet Grass, Montana, 134.37 miles, is now in progress and will be completed about December 1st, 1902. 3670

There has been built during the year at Everett, Wash., 3.35 miles of new main track, forming part of a new connection between the tracks of the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba Railway Company near Lowell and the tracks of the Seattle and Montana Railroad Company at Everett Junction.

During the year the Eastern Railway Company of Minnesota has purchased the line constructed by the Swan River Logging Company, Limited, from Barclay Junction to Virginia, Minnesota, 18.73 miles in length, heretofore operated under contract with privilege of purchase, as mentioned on page 13 of the report for year ended June 30, 1900. 3671

Good progress has been made during the year on the two steamships being built for the Great Northern Steamship Company at New London, Conn., and it is expected they will be launched in December.

REVISION OF LINES.

References were made on pages 14 and 15 of last year's Report to the revision of lines for the purpose of reducing grades and curvature.

Of the work there mentioned, there was completed and opened for operation during the year:

3673 Between Huntley Coulee and Great Falls, Mont., 22.62 miles. The work on this line was especially heavy, and the line has been built in the most substantial and permanent manner.

Between Harrington and Moscow, Wash., 2.89 miles, and Between Moscow and Edwall, Wash., 1.42 miles.

The opening of these new lines has decreased the main track mileage by 3.66 miles.

Work has been continued during the year on the new line from Belleville to Fairhaven, Wash. Track is now being laid on the lower end of this line, and the line is nearly completed.

3674 The length of the new line is about 18.9 miles; of the old line 20.55 miles. The maximum grades on the old line were 2.7 per cent going south and 1.2 per cent going north. On the new line the maximum grade is one-half of one per cent in each direction. The work on the new line has been both heavy and expensive.

A new line has been built between Everett and Marysville, Wash., including "Y," 1.55 miles in length, in place of 1.58 miles of old line, securing a much better crossing of the Snohomish River, over which a new draw bridge has been built. This was referred to on page 17 of last year's Report.

3675 A small change of line has been made near Nyack, Mont., for a distance of 2,670 feet.

To improve the alignment, work is now in progress on a new line between Elmira and Bonner's Ferry, Idaho, about 15.45 miles in length.

LEASE OF THE EASTERN RAILWAY OF MINNESOTA.

To simplify operation and accounting the Great Northern Railway Company leased for a period of ninety-nine years from May 1st, 1902, the lines of railway and property of the Eastern Railway Company of Minnesota. While the Great Northern Railway Company has always owned the capital stock of the Eastern Railway Company, that Company's railways, elevators, etc., prior to May 1st, 1902, had been operated independently.

3677 As rental under the lease, the Great Northern Railway Company pays the interest as it matures, on the Eastern Railway Company's bonds, dividends at the rate of six per cent per annum on the capital stock of the Eastern Company and all taxes and assessments upon the property, gross earnings and income of the Eastern Company, or for which that Company or its property may be liable, levied, assessed or falling due during the term of the lease.

On account of this lease, the Gross Earnings, Operating Expenses, Taxes, Income from Operation and Miscellaneous Income Received of the Eastern Railway Company of Minnesota, 3678 as given in table on page 26, are for the ten months ended April 30th, 1902, only; the Gross Earnings, Operating Expenses, etc., of the lines leased for the months of May and June, 1902, being included in the figures of the Great Northern Railway Company as given in tables on pages 27 and 28.

EQUIPMENT.

By the purchase of the Seattle and Northern Railway, the Seattle and Montana Railroad Company acquired the following equipment: 3679

1 locomotive, 1 passenger coach.
1 baggage and express car, 4 box cars.
10 flat cars and 26 logging trucks.

Same have been carefully inspected and appraised, and taken into equipment account at their appraised value.

3680 The following equipment has been sold or taken out of service during the year:

21 light Great Northern locomotives.

1 light locomotive acquired by the Willmar and Sioux Falls Railway Company in 1900, in purchase of Sioux City and Northern Railroad.

1 sleeping car and 1 poling car.

The Report for last year stated that of the equipment ordered 60 locomotives, 62 passenger cars and 2,000 freight cars had not been received and taken into account at the end of that year.

3681 During the year under review, orders were placed for 40 locomotives, 62 passenger cars, 3,300 freight cars and 5 wrecking cars with steam cranes.

Of the total new equipment undelivered at the close of last year and ordered this year, the following had been received and taken into account at the close of this year:

66 locomotives, as follows:

6 ten-wheel passenger locomotives, 19″x26″ cylinders, weighing 120,000 pounds on drivers.

10 ten-wheel passenger locomotives, 19″x28″ cylinders, weighing 134,000 pounds on drivers.

3682 40 consolidation freight locomotives, 20″x32″ cylinders, narrow fire box, weighing 179,000 pounds on drivers.

5 consolidation freight locomotives, 20″x32″ cylinders, wide fire box, weighing 180,000 pounds on drivers.

5 compound consolidation freight locomotives, 23″ and 33″x32″ two cylinders, weighing 180,000 pounds on drivers.

4 dining cars, 70 feet long.

50 first-class passenger coaches, 60 feet 10 inches long.

2 postal cars, 60 feet 8½ inches long.

3683 6 baggage and express cars, 64 feet 9 inches long; 5 additional equipment and 1 replacing destroyed car.

1,500 forty-feet 80,000 pounds capacity box cars; 1,322 additional equipment and 178 replacing destroyed cars.

300 forty-feet 80,000 pounds capacity flat cars; 223 additional equipment and 77 replacing destroyed cars.

200 forty-feet 60,000 pounds capacity refrigerator cars; 195 additional and 5 replacing destroyed cars.

200 twenty-two ft. 100,000 pounds capacity steel ore cars.

1 Lidgerwood Unloader.

All the above equipment is equipped with air brakes and automatic couplers. 3684

The remaining 34 locomotives, 62 passenger cars, 3,100 freight cars and 5 wrecking cars are now being delivered.

There were built at the Company's shops for additional equipment:

50 four-wheel caboose cars,
15 cinder cars and
6 supply cars.

Some transfers between classes and changes were made in other equipment.

There was expended during the year for equipment $3,137,- 3685
273.92, of which amount $2,696,389.07 was charged to "Equipment Account."

As equipment is destroyed or taken out of service, Operating Expense is charged and "Fund for Replacement of Equipment" is credited with the cost of replacing same. When equipment for replacement is purchased, the cost of same is charged to the account last mentioned.

ADDITIONS AND IMPROVEMENTS.

Crossing gates have been put in at Division and Harrison Streets, N. E. Minneapolis; also at Eighth Street, Moorhead, Minn., with electric signals at Sixth, Seventh and Ninth streets. At Crookston, Minn., a bridge has been built, carrying Eighth Street over our tracks.

The work of enlarging the division terminal at Havre, Mont., referred to last year, has been completed, there having been built a new yard, 23-stall roundhouse with turntable and cinder pit, water supply, 20-pocket coaling station, sandhouse, machine shops with engine and boiler house and transfer 3687 tables, blacksmith and boiler shop, store house, scrap bins and lumber sheds, oil house, freight depot and track scales. The new buildings are of brick, and modern in every respect.

The division yard at Everett, Wash., has also been completed—yard containing 23,100 feet of track, 15-stall brick roundhouse with turntable and cinder pit, water supply, 20-pocket coaling station, brick machine shop, carpenter shop, store house, scrap bins, etc., oil house and sand house.

The yard at Stony Brook, Minn., on the Eastern Railway, has been revised and 6,390 feet of additional track laid, 15 pockets added to the coaling station, the water supply improved and the buildings relocated.

The yards at Butte, Mont., and Rossland, B. C., have been revised and enlarged.

At Church's Ferry, N. D., the junction point of the Cando Branch, a new "Y" track has been laid, several additional yard tracks put in, buildings relocated and a new roundhouse and freight transfer platform, 12′x240′, built.

A track about 14,000 feet long, with several spurs from same, has been put in at Blaine, Wash., to reach industries on the water front.

Many passing tracks between Crookston and Cass Lake, Minn., have been extended to a length of 4,000 feet. The laying of additional passing tracks 3,000 feet long and the extension of old tracks to that length have been continued during the year, and in addition many house tracks and tracks for local industries have been laid. The net increase in side track mileage during the year, including these tracks and such tracks in the new yards mentioned as were laid June 30th, 1902, but not including side tracks on new lines built or acquired during the year, is as follows:

Line leased from St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway Co.	38.48 miles
Line leased from Eastern Ry. Co. of Minnesota	18.41 "
Line leased from Park Rapids & Leech Lake Ry. Co.	.19 "
Duluth Terminal Railway	.03 "
Montana Central Railway	3.10 "
Willmar & Sioux Falls Railway	1.08 "
Minneapolis Union Railway	.01 "
Seattle & Montana Railroad	10.00 "
Spokane Falls & Northern Railway System	1.89 "
Total	73.19 miles

During the year main line tracks have been relaid as follows: 3692 9.378 miles with 80-pound rail, 435.647 miles with 77½-pound rail, 2.413 miles with 75-pound rail and 3.818 miles with 60-pound rail.

The longest stretches of track relaid with 77½-pound rails were 234 miles between Williston, N. D., and Eureka, Montana; 126 miles between Concord and Columbia Falls, Montana; and 31 miles on the line between Breckenridge, Minn., and Larimore, N. D., where work is now in progress on 100 miles additional to complete the relaying of the main tracks between these points.

On new tracks built and tracks relaid tie-plates are being 3693 used as rapidly as they can be secured; the total number of plates in tracks June 30th, 1902, is approximately 6,500,000.

The permanent lining of the Wickes tunnel, on the Montana Central Railway, referred to last year, has been completed, and the track through the tunnel relaid with 77½-pound rails, the distance being included in the figures above given.

The work of building new shops at St. Paul is now in progress, the buildings under construction being:

Machine Shop, 600′x150′, containing 25 pits, 49′ long inside; a tin shop, 46′x73′.

A building 452′2″x235′, containing blacksmith shop 325′ 3694 x146′; boiler shop 191′4″x183′ with 10 pits; flue shop, 76′x52′; truck shop, 76′8″x52′ and tank shop, 235′x87′4″.

Power House, 110′2″x106′6″, containing an engine room, 52′6″x110′2″, and a boiler room 110′2″x54′. Boilers of 1,250 horse power are to be installed in this boiler room.

Transfer Pit, 625′ long, fitted with a 50′ transfer table.

Store House, 400′x100′, two stories. The east 40′ of the building contains the store department offices, and in 3695 the west 50 feet is located the brass foundry.

Iron House, 200′x100′, with a standard gauge track through the centre.

A two-story building, 40′x60′ containing the chemical laboratory and the office of the shops superintendent.

All of the buildings are of brick and of the most modern type.

A brick storehouse, 30′x90′, for materials and supplies, has been built at Larimore, N. D., and the oil house at West Superior shops extended 30 feet.

3696 An electric lighting plant has been installed at West Superior, Wis., for lighting the dock, warehouse, elevators, shops, freight house and division office building.

Dock No. 6 at West Superior, Wis., has been extended 868 feet, additional tracks put in, 600 feet of coal pockets built, and slip on east side of the dock dredged to a depth of 20 feet.

An incline with pontoon and the necessary tracks for a car ferry to New Westminster have been put in at Liverpool, B. C.

The brick passenger station at Spokane, Wash., referred to last year, has been completed. On the second and third floors 3697 are located the offices of the officials of the Western District and the General Offices of the Spokane Falls and Northern Railway System.

New depots have been built at the following stations:

Mayer, Minn.	Sharon, N. D.	Colgate, N. D.
Doran, Minn.	Perth, N. D.	Knox, N. D.
Berwick, N. D.	Kragnes, Minn.	University, N. D.
Elmer, Minn.	Priest River, Ida.	Berthold, N. D.
Portage, Mont.	Wooley, Wash.	Ephrata, Wash.
Interbay, Wash.	Buhl, Minn.	Grandy, Minn.
Brookston, Minn.	Barclay Jct., Minn.	Cohasset, Minn.
Litchfield, Minn.

3698 Depots at sixteen other stations have been enlarged.

A brick freight house, 50′x300′ has been built at Great Falls, Montana, and one 40′x300′ is now under construction at Fargo, N. D.

A freight shed has been built at Lynd, Minn., and one at Stephen, Minn.

An extension has been made to the wool warehouse at Benton, Montana.

A grain warehouse, 60′x160′, has been built at Downs, Wash., and extensions, each 60′x160′, made to the grain ware-3699 houses at Edwall, Harrington and Lamona, Wash.

A new ice house has been built at Sioux City, Iowa, and extensions to the ice houses at Willmar, Minn., and Grand Forks, N. D.

Section houses have been built at the following stations: 3700

Swan River Minn. (2)	Kilva, Mont. (2)	Tagus, N. D.
Tioga, N. D.	Coburg, Mont.	Harlem, Mont. (2)
Malta, Mont. (2)	Kremlin, Mont. (2)	Burnham, Mont.
Hingham, Mont. (2)	Moscow, Wash. (2)	Boulder, Mont.
Odessa, Wash. (2)	Burlington, Wash.	Everett, Wash. (2)
Interbay, Wash.	Portage, Mont.	Ferndale, Wash.
Palermo, N. D. (2)

and an addition has been built to the section house at Saunders, Wis.

Stock yards have been built at: 3701

Grand Rapids, Minn.	Avon, Minn.	Kerkhoven, Minn.
Osakis, Minn.	Sheffield, S. D.	Zimmerman, Minn.
Graceville, Minn.	Yale, S. D.	Hazel, S. D.
Grover, S. D.	Nassau, Minn.	Lynd, Minn.
South Shore, S. D.	Pisek, N. D.	Holloway, Minn.
Cavalier, N. D.	Des Lacs, N. D.	Hannah, N. D.
Stanley, N. D.	Browning, Mont.	Havre, Mont.
Clancy, Mont.	Wooley, Wash.	Everett, Wash.
Litchfield, Minn.

The stock yards at Brandon, Minn., Monticello, Minn., Great Falls, Mont., and Galata, Mont., have been enlarged. 3702

Scales have been placed in the stock yards at Danvers, Minn., and Minot, N. D. Improvements have been made to other stock yards.

Coaling stations equipped with lifting engines and the necessary tracks have been built at Minneapolis Junction, Minn., Smith Lake, Minn., Casselton, N. D., and East Spokane, Wash., replacing stations of an old pattern that had burned. Coaling platforms and sheds have been built at Cambridge, Minn., Silver, Mont., Northport, Wash., and Chewelah, Wash.

Permanent improvements in the water supply are being continued, numerous plants, both additional and replacing others, having been built, and improvements made on existing plants. 3703

Loading platforms have been built at eighteen stations.

3704 Right-of-way fence has been built during the year as follows:

Great Northern Railway	334.26 miles
Eastern Railway of Minnesota	2.21 "
Montana Central Railway	4.84 "
Willmar & Sioux Falls Railway	16.08 "
Duluth, Watertown & Pacific Railway	2.10 "
Seattle & Montana Railroad	1.91 "
Total	361.40 miles

3705 Banks have been widened and raised on 239.02 miles of track, banks restored to grade on 195.40 miles, and track ballasted with gravel on 461.48 miles.

A large amount of hydraulic work and ditching has been done along the Coast Line between Everett and Seattle, Wash.

The replacement of bridges and trestles with steel, or filling them so as to make solid embankments, has been actively followed during the year, the work done being:

	Length of steel bridges built:
	Great Northern Railway (on old lines)	1,094 feet
3706	Eastern Railway of Minnesota	210 "
	Duluth Terminal Railway	200 "
	Total in replacement	1,504 feet
	In addition steel bridges were built on new lines between Huntley, Coulee and Great Falls, Montana	2,018 feet
	Total length of steel bridges built	3,522 feet
	Lineal feet of bridges filled:
	Great Northern Railway	6,498 feet
	Eastern Railway of Minnesota	336 "
	Willmar & Sioux Falls Railway	5,293 "
	Duluth, Watertown & Pacific Railway	213 "
3707	Seattle & Montana Railroad	670 "
	Total	13,010 feet

To provide the necessary waterways in place of bridges filled as above, 12 stone culverts, 24 pipe culverts and 2 box culverts were put in.

So much permanent bridge work has been done during the past few years that the amount to be done each year is rapidly decreasing. 3708

The wooden bridging on the line was still further reduced during the year by the removal or relocation of lines as follows:

Great Northern Railway:
Changes of line between Edwall and Moscow, and Moscow and Harrington, Wash	1,659 feet
Eastern Railway of Minnesota:
Removal of line between Brace Junction and Pokegama Junction	2,265 " 3709
Total	3,924 feet

The following is a close approximation of the quantities of material moved during the year in changes of line, construction of additional lines at Everett, Wash., reduction of grades, widening and raising banks, bridge-filling and ballasting:

In changes of line, construction of additional lines at Everett, Wash., and reduction of grades	1,463,589 cu. yds.
In widening and raising embankments, and generally restoring banks 3710	980,685 "
For filling bridges	460,417 "
For ballasting (gravel)	1,194,446 "
Total	4,099,137 cu. yds.
There were also placed:
Masonry	26,168 cu. yds.
Concrete	21,515 "
Riprap	57,686 "
Total	105,369 cu. yds.

3711

Following the plan of previous years, only such amounts as represented cost of actual additions to the property have been charged to "Additions and Improvements," and the entire amount charged to that account during the year on account of the line leased from the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba Railway Company, or $1,820,225.11, has been transferred to "Fund for Permanent Improvements and Renewals," so that 8712 the Great Northern Railway Company is not carrying on its books, as an asset, the cost of any additions or improvements to the line leased from the Manitoba Company.

All replacements, renewals, etc., have been charged to Operating Expenses. The amount included in "Maintenance of Road and Structures" this year, for extraordinary improvements, etc., is $1,663,812.

The efficiency of the railway as a means of transportation is improving every year.

Attention is called to the increase in the train load of revenue freight and the resulting income per train mile.

VOLUME OF TRAFFIC AND RATES.

The tonnage of revenue freight hauled during the year increased 3,311,552 tons, or 33.363 per cent; freight earnings increased $5,785,363.28, or 21.108 per cent. The number of bushels of wheat hauled East increased 26,987,682 bushels, equal to 809,630 tons. Including this increase, however, there 3714 were 4,587,599 less bushels of wheat hauled this year than during the year ended June 30th, 1900, and the earnings from East-bound wheat traffic this year were $542,685.26 less than during that period.

There was an increase of 1,458,179 gross tons in the amount of iron ore hauled on the Eastern Division.

The increase in freight traffic aside from wheat and iron ore amounted to 1,070,762 tons, and in the earnings to $2,587,894.50. This increase was in general business and over the entire System, except on the Montana Central Railway, where there was a falling off in the volume of freight traffic and 3715 earnings on account of the practical suspension of the mining and manufacturing of copper in Montana for nearly four months. On account of the rapid settlement and development of the country through which the system runs, there has been a large increase in shipments of merchandise and supplies required by the smaller towns. This is shown by the fact that while the tonnage hauled increased 33.363 per cent

as above given, the ton mileage increased but 28.547 per cent. 3716
Or, the average distance each ton was hauled last year was 250 miles, while this year it was 241 miles. This is still further reflected in the comparatively small reduction in the average revenue per ton per mile of .012 cents, or 1.3777 per cent, equal on the ton mileage hauled this year to about $383,000. That is, there has been a greater increase in the volume of the higher class freight than in the lower classes. Effective January 25th, 1902, the rates on all classes of merchandise between stations in Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota were reduced an average of about fifteen per cent.

It is the policy of the Company to reduce freight rates as 3717 rapidly as the volume of traffic and earnings will justify, and to this end the rates on grain, grain products, potatoes, onions and hay, from stations in the State of Washington to Puget Sound, were reduced during August, 1902, an average of ten per cent. Effective August 28th, 1902, the rates on grain and grain products from stations in Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota to Eastern terminals were reduced an average of about ten per cent.

While the ton mileage of revenue freight increased 28.547 per cent, the mileage of loaded freight cars increased but 3718
21.2035 per cent and the mileage of freight hauling trains but 17.3725 per cent, resulting in an increase of 36.301 tons (9.5205 per cent), in the average number of revenue tons per freight train mile, making the average train load of revenue freight 417.595 tons.

The earnings of passenger trains increased $1,869,091.08, or 29.5468 per cent, of which $1,752,840.51 came from passenger fares, $29,272.65 from sleeping cars, $8,220.73 from transportation of mails, $63,183.61 from transportation of express, and the balance from miscellaneous sources.

Although there has been no increase in passenger rates dur- 3719 ing the year, the average revenue per passenger per mile has increased .037 cents, or 1.6157 per cent, caused by the natural increase in local travel due to the settlement of the country and to the prosperous condition of the people.

8720 The large movement of people to the Northwest during the last few years, which still continues without abatement, has resulted in the settlement of a vast area of vacant lands adjacent to the Company's line. During this period more than 5,000,000 acres of Government land in the northern part of North Dakota has been taken under the Homestead Act. It is also satisfactory to note that many of the large farms in this state are being cut up into smaller ones. The immigration into the Western and Pacific States during the past year has continued, and in numbers has exceeded that of any previous year.

8721 The Government having undertaken the reclamation of the semi-arid lands by means of irrigation, a speedy settlement of the same will follow. The farmers from the older states stand ready at the present time to buy all the lands the Government will irrigate at prices that will pay a profit on the cost of the work.

The opening of the new lines hereinbefore referred to, the excellent crop that has just been harvested, and the prosperous condition generally of the territory served by the Company, all indicate that the business of the Company for the 3722 year ending June 30th, 1903, will show a large increase over the year just ended.

The Board respectfully call attention of the shareholders to the Report of the Comptroller, with the customary balance sheet and statistical tables, and to the Report of the Land Commissioner.

COMPTROLLER'S REPORT.

MR. JAMES J. HILL, President:

DEAR SIR: Herewith I beg to submit statements showing results of operation of the Great Northern Railway Company and its proprietary companies for the fiscal year ended June 30th, 1902. 3724

These statements are made in the same form and on the same basis as those submitted with last year's report.

The statements on the pages next following, 24 and 25, show the Earnings, Operating Expenses, Taxes, etc., of the Railway SYSTEM, exclusive of the Spokane Falls & Northern Railway System, which is operated separately. The statement on page 26 shows the division of these amounts between the several railways, and includes as a separate item the same information for the Spokane Falls & Northern Railway System. On pages 27 and 28 are given the Revenue and Income Accounts of the Great Northern Railway COMPANY. 3725

The balance sheet on page 33, like the one published last year, presents a complete statement of the property, capitalization and finances of what is known as the Great Northern Railway Line. The finances, etc., of the Spokane Falls & Northern System and of the Northern Steamship Company are not included, those properties being operated and their finances kept separate and distinct from those of the balance of the system.

J. G. DREW, Comptroller.

3793 REPORT OF LAND COMMISSIONER ST. PAUL, MINNEAPOLIS & MANITOBA RAILWAY CO.

To MR. LOUIS W. HILL, President,

St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Ry. Co.

DEAR SIR: I respectfully submit the following report of operation of the Land Department for the year ended June 30th, 1902:

			Acres.	Acres.
3794	Total acreage of land grant computed at ten sections for each mile of road, as formerly construed by the State of Minnesota.....			3,848,000.00
	Total acreage of land grant, as construed by United States general land office.....			3,479,611.36
	Total acreage deeded to company prior to June 30th, 1902		3,220,760.30
	Less decreed to Northern Pacific R. R. Co. by Supreme Court United States, March 2d, 1891.....	365,860.92
	Decreed to Northern Pacific R. R. Co., in accordance with terms of settlement of November 1st, 1897	48,916.08
3795	Redeeded to United States.....	3,330.02
			418,107.02
	Net acreage deeded.....		2,802,653.28
	Total acreage sold prior to June 30th, 1902....		2,967,261.17
	Less sales canceled.....		303,738.92
	Remaining unsold June 30th, 1902.....			816,089.11

During the year ended June 30th, 1902, 124,179.99 acres of land were sold for $1,129,277.71, an average of $9.09 per acre. There were also sold 819 town lots for $15,003.20, an average price per lot of $18.32.

The number of land sales during the year was 1,412, with an average of about 88.00 acres to each purchase.

Capital Stock of St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Ry. Co.:

The amount entered for 1899 and subsequent years is the difference between the outstanding capital stock of this company, $20,000,000, as given on page 17 of its Report to the Commission each year, and the amount of that stock owned by the Great Northern Ry. Co., and acquired with its own capital stock, as shown on page 37 of the Report made to the Commission each year by the Great Northern Ry. Co.

Funded Debt of St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Ry. Co., Outstanding in Hands of Public:

The figures given may be verified by referring to page 19 of the reports made by the St. P., M. & M. Ry. Co. to the Commission for the year named, deducting in each case from the amount shown on that page the sum of $14,303,030.31, account of St. P., M. & M. Ry. Co.'s Pacific extension bonds owned by the Great Northern Ry. Co. During the years 1897 and 1898 these Pacific extension bonds were deposited as collateral security for the $15,000,000. Great Northern Ry. bonds shown. Since the payment of the Great Northern's bonds with proceeds of additional capital stock, as above explained, the St. P., M. & M. Ry. Pacific extension bonds have been free assets in the Great Northern treasury.

"BOSTON AND MAINE RAILROAD.

"Line of Road.—Boston, Mass., to Portland, Me., 115.50 miles.

"Consolidation, January 1, 1842, of the Boston and Portland, chartered in Massachusetts, March 15, 1833; the Boston and Maine, chartered in New Hampshire, June 27, 1835; and the Maine, New Hampshire and Massachusetts, chartered in Maine, March 12, 1839. Road opened from Wilmington, 3965
Mass., to South Berwick, Me., February 23, 1843. Between Wilmington and Boston the Boston and Lowell R. R. was used until July 4, 1845, when an independent line was opened. * * * The extension to Portland, Me., was opened February 15, 1873.

"On December 22, 1883, this company and the Eastern R. R. Co. entered into an agreement dating from October 1, 1883, and to run for 54 years, by the terms of which the Eastern R. R. Co. transferred to this company, under lease, all its property, rights, franchises and assets of every description, subject 3966 to mortgage dated June 22, 1876. By the terms of the lease it is agreed that the Boston and Maine R. R. Co. shall operate the two systems to the best advantage of each, and shall make such improvements upon the properties as may from time to time become necessary. To meet the cost of such improvements the lessee shall issue improvement bonds, to run for the longest period allowed by law, and to be secured by a sinking fund of not exceeding 1½ per cent. per annum. The combined earnings of the two companies, from all sources, including dividends from investments, etc., shall be used to pay: (1) All expenses of operating both companies, such expenses to include ordinary operating expenses, taxes, interest and sinking fund of improvement bonds, interest on car trust and on loan for improvement of East Boston Wharf property, and $10,000 yearly, payable quarterly, for organization expenses of Eastern R. R. Co., such $10,000 to include $3,000 to be paid 3968 to the trustees under its mortgage. (2) Rentals of leased lines and interest on permanent debt of both companies. (3) From the surplus remaining, the Boston and Maine R. R. Co. shall retain $630,000 [changed in 1886 and subsequent years to $360,000] for its own use. (4) All surplus then remaining up to $100,000 shall be paid to the Eastern R. R. Co. (5) All surplus up to $70,000 shall be retained by the Boston and Maine R. R. Co. (6) All surplus up to $336,000 shall be paid to the Eastern R. R. Co. (7) Any surplus then remaining shall be applied to permanent improvements upon the properties of both companies, pro rata, according to mileage, in-3969 cluding branches and leased roads, so far as such improvements may be required; and the remainder, if any, may be applied to the purchase of the improvement bonds." * * * (Poor's Manual of Railroads, 1885, pp. 51-52.)

"Eastern Railroad of Massachusetts.—Boston, Mass., to New Hampshire State Line, 41.45 miles. * * *

"The Eastern Railroad Company of Massachusetts, chartered April 14, 1836, completed a railroad from East Boston to the New Hampshire State Line, November 9, 1840. * * *

"On the 22d of December, 1883, the company leased its road to the Boston and Maine R. R. Co., the lease to run for 54

"History.—Consolidation, May 9, 1890, of the Boston and Maine, the Eastern, and the Portsmouth, Great Falls and Conway R. R. Cos. * * * Early in 1898 the company was authorized by law to take up the stocks of any of its leased or controlled lines and to effect a merger with the lines thus acquired. Under this authority the Eastern R. R. in New Hampshire was absorbed on June 1, 1899, and the Portsmouth and Dover R. R., Portland, Saco and Portsmouth R. R., and Portland and Rochester R. R." Repeated in Manual for 1901, p. 4. 4012

[Poor's Manual of Railroads, for 1901.]

Manual for 1901, p. 4, repeats matter quoted from Manual for 1900, p. 6, also statements already noted as to lines of Boston and Maine and Maine Central, and stock of Maine Central.

"Consolidation, July 24, 1872, of the New York and New Haven and the Hartford and New Haven R. R. Companies, the former chartered in Connecticut in May, 1844, and in New York in January, 1846, and its road opened in January, 1849. The Hartford and New Haven R. R. Co. was chartered in Connecticut in May, 1833; the road was opened in 1839. The Massachusetts portion of the road was built under the charter of the Hartford and Springfield R. R. Co., April 5, 1839, and completed in December, 1844. By an agreement dated March 17, 1848, the New York and New Haven R. R. uses the New York and Harlem R. R. from Williamsbridge into the City of New York. The rental is paid directly from earnings as they accrue, and does not appear in the operating accounts. The Shore Line R. R. is leased in perpetuity at an annual rental of $100,000, from November 1, 1870. The accounts of this road were kept separately previous to the year 1882. The Harlem River and Portchester R. R. is leased for 99 years from October 1, 1873. On the 1st of October, 1882, the company leased the Boston and New York Air-Line R. R. (which see), and purchased toward the close of that fiscal year a controlling interest in the Hartford and Connecticut Valley R. R. "On October 19, 1892, the company leased, for 99 years from July 1, 1892, the Housatonic R. R. and its leased lines, the Danbury and Norwalk, New Haven and Derby, Berkshire, Stockbridge and Pittsfield, and West Stockbridge R. Rs. A new 4054 lease of the Providence and Worcester has been made direct to this company, superceding the one to the New York, Providence and Boston R. R. Co. The terms of the leases are shown in the companies' lessor statements.

"The company during the past year offered its shares in exchange for stocks of its leased lines, at the rate of share for share of New York, Providence & Boston and Hartford & Connecticut Valley, one share for eight of Housatonic preferred, four shares for thirteen of New Haven & Derby, one share for four of Danbury & Norwalk, two shares for five of New Haven & Northampton and Boston & New York Air-4055 Line, share for share of Naugatuck, and three shares for four of Shore Line stock. In accordance with this offer the New York, Providence & Boston and Hartford & Connecticut Valley have exchanged all of their stocks, and shares of the other companies named have been exchanged as follows: New Haven and Northampton, 24,035 shares out of a total of 24,600; B. & N. Y. Air-Line, 15,725 shares out of a total of 29,985; Shore Line, 8,068 shares out of a total of 10,000; Naugatuck, 9,551 shares out of a total of 20,000; Housatonic, 22,504 out of a total of 28,756 shares preferred stock; Danbury & Norwalk, 8,928 shares out of a total of 12,000; New Haven & Derby, 4056 3,497 shares out of a total of 4,470. Stocks of leased lines held in the company's treasury were also converted into New Haven stock, resulting in $1,332,400. This stock has been sold and the proceeds, amounting to $3,398,555.61, used for the improvement of the property.

"On Feb. 28, 1893, the company entered into an agreement for the lease for 99 years from Mar. 1, 1893, of the Old Colony R. R. System, assuming all obligations of the Old Colony R.

R. Co., and agreeing to pay annual dividends of 7 p. c. on Old Colony stock. An agreement was also entered into for an exchange of stocks on the basis of nine shares of New Haven for every ten shares of Old Colony.

"The exchanges for stock of leased lines before mentioned, together with the issue of convertible debenture certificates, referred to hereafter, and which are convertible at the expiration of ten years into capital stock at par, practically exhausted the authorized capital stock. In order to comply with the terms of the lease of the Old Colony the company, 4058 therefore, obtained authority to increase its capital stock to $100,000,000 (by Act approved Mar. 2, 1893). The total number of shares of Old Colony stock received for exchange is 55,180. The privilege expired Dec. 19, 1893. This company began operating the Old Colony system on July 1, 1893." [Poor's Manual of Railroads, for 1885.]

"New York Central and Hudson River Railroad.

History.—"The New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company was organized by the consolidation, November 1, 1869, of the New York Central and the Hudson River Railroad Companies.

4139 "The New York Central R. R. Co. was organized under a special law passed April 2, 1853, authorizing the consolidation of the railroads between Albany and Buffalo, viz.: the Albany and Schenectady, the Schenectady and Troy, the Utica and Schenectady, the Syracuse and Utica, the Syracuse and Utica Direct, the Rochester and Syracuse, the Buffalo and Lockport, the Mohawk Valley, the Rochester, Lockport and Niagara Falls, and the Buffalo and Rochester. Articles of agreement taking effect as of May 1st, 1853, were filed May 17, 1853; the first board of directors elected July 6, and the whole line delivered to the new company August 1, 1853.

4140 "The Albany and Schenectady R. R., chartered in 1826 as the Mohawk and Hudson, was opened September 12, 1831, and was the first railroad built in the State of New York. The name was changed to A. & S., in 1847. The Schenectady and Troy was chartered in 1836, and opened in 1842. The Utica and Schenectady, chartered in 1833, was opened August 1, 1836. The Syracuse and Utica, chartered in March, 1836, was opened July 3, 1839. The Syracuse and Utica Direct was organized under the general law, and filed articles January 26, 1853. Merged in the N. Y. C. R. R. Co. under the act of 1853. The Rochester and Syracuse was a consolidation (August 1, 1850) of 4141 the Auburn and Rochester and the Auburn and Syracuse. The Auburn and Rochester, chartered in 1836, was opened in August, 1841, and the Auburn and Syracuse, chartered in 1834, was opened in June, 1838. The Direct Line was opened in 1853. The Buffalo and Lockport filed articles April 27, 1852, and was in progress at the date of consolidation. The road was opened in 1854. The Mohawk Valley filed articles January 21, 1851, and December 28, 1852. The company was merged in the New York Central R. R. Co. under the act of 1853. The Rochester, Lockport and Niagara Falls was originally the Lockport and Niagara Falls, chartered in 1834, and opened in 1838. In December, 1850, the R. L. & N. Falls R. R. Co. was organized, and rebuilt the road. The Buffalo and Rochester was a consolidation (December 7, 1850) of the Attica and Buffalo and the Tonawanda. In 1852 this company opened a direct road from Buffalo to Batavia, keeping that part of the Attica and Buffalo line between Attica and Batavia as a branch. The A. & B. was chartered in 1836, and opened in 1842; and 4143

the Tonawanda, chartered in 1832, was opened in 1842.

"The following roads were leased and subsequently merged in the consolidation: The Rochester and Lake Ontario in 1855, for $150,000; The Buffalo and Niagara Falls in 1855, for $658,-921.56; the Lewiston in 1855, for $400,000; and the Saratoga and Hudson River (Athens Branch) in 1867, for $2,000,000. The stock of the consolidated company was issued at par in exchange for the stocks of the lessor companies respectively. The last named road was leased on the 2d of November, 1881, to the New York, West Shore and Buffalo R. R. Co. for 475 years, the rental for the entire period having been commuted 4144 for $400,000.

"The Niagara Bridge and Canandaigua R. R., originally the Canandaigua and Niagara Falls, filed articles March 1, 1851, was opened April 1, 1854, and leased to the New York Central, September 1, 1858, at 6 per cent. on $1,000,000 capital stock.

"The Hudson River R. R. Co. was chartered May 12, 1846, and road opened through its entire length from New York to East Albany, October 3, 1851. Prior to its consolidation in the New York Central and Hudson River R. R. Co. it had taken a lease of the Troy and Greenbush R. R. Co., June 1, 4145 1851, for 7 per cent. on $295,000 capital stock. The lease, which runs during the time of the charter or any extension thereof, was assumed by the consolidated company.

"The New York Central and Hudson River R. R. Co. has added the following lines:

"The New York and Harlem, chartered April 25, 1831; leased for 400 years from April 1, 1873, the rental being 8 per cent.

on stock and interest on bonds. This lease covers the N. Y. and Mahopac; lease dated June 17, 1872; expires Dec. 31, 1971. Rental nominal.

"The Spuyten Duyvil and Port Morris R. R., chartered April 24, 1867; lease dated November 1, 1871; expires December 31, 1970; rental, 8 per cent. on cost, $989,000.

"The Dunkirk, Allegheny Valley and Pittsburgh R. R.; lease dated January 3, 1874; expires January 3, 2273. Rental, 7 per cent. on $2,900,000 bonds, and 3 per cent. on $1,300,000 stock."

4147 (Poor's Manual of Railroads, 1885, pp. 152-3.)

The foregoing historical statements are repeated in the Manual for 1886, pp. 1-3, with the addition of the following:

"The Company has taken a lease of the West Shore Ry. for a period of 475 years from January 1, 1886, at a yearly rental of 4 per cent. on $50,000,000 bonds; the West Shore also, under the terms of the lease, depositing its entire issue of stock, $10,000,000, with this company." Canal owned: Bordentown to New Brunswick, and feeder, 66 miles. The Delaware and Raritan Canal Co. and the Camden and Amboy Railroad Co. were both chartered in February, 1830, the former to construct a canal to connect the Delaware and Raritan Rivers, and the latter to build a line of railroad from the Delaware River to Raritan Bay. In February, 1831, an act was passed authorizing the consolidation of the capital stocks of these two companies, the companies being thus practically consoli-4274 dated, although nominally distinct corporations. The affairs of the companies were managed jointly, by the directors of both, and each was to share equally in profits. Under this joint management, the construction of the works was begun. The main lines of the railroad and canal were completed in 1834, and the branches in 1838. In 1836 the United Companies acquired a controlling interest in the stock of the Philadelphia and Trenton R. R. Co., and entered into an agreement with that company for an equal division of their joint profits.

"In January, 1867, an agreement was entered into between the United Companies and the New Jersey Railroad and Transportation Co., which owned the line between New Brunswick and Jersey City, forming a link in the through New York-Philadelphia route, for a consolidation of interests; and under this agreement the profits were equally divided between the four companies—the Delaware and Raritan Canal Co., the Camden and Amboy, the New Jersey, and the Philadelphia 4276 and Trenton Railroad Companies." 4352 "The company uses the track of the Richmond and Petersburg R. R. to gain entrance into Richmond, and leases to the Norfolk Southern R. R. Co. trackage facilities over the N. & W. R. R. into Norfolk, and the use of the terminal facilities at that point.

"Effective Jan. 22, 1901, the company has acquired control of the Cincinnati, Portsmouth and Virginia R. R. Co., by purchase of practically the entire capital stock of that company. The Norfolk & Western Ry. Co. is now operating the Cincinnati, Portsmouth and Virginia R. R. separately from its own property, but will eventually absorb it by consolidation. (See 4353 statement for C. P. & V. R. R. Co. on page 356.) On April 9, 1901, the stockholders of the Cincinnati, Portsmouth and Virginia R. R. Co. and the Cincinnati Connecting Belt Ry. Co. voted to merge these properties preparatory to transferring them to the Norfolk and Western Ry. Co. The Columbus and Maysville R. R. was acquired by the Cincinnati, Portsmouth and Virginia R. R. "The chief business of the company is the transportation of coal from the first and second anthracite coal fields of Pennsylvania to tidewater in the Delaware River, at Port Richmond, Philadelphia. At this eastern terminus are 23 wharves, extending from 300 to 800 feet into the river, with trestlework and chutes, allowing a direct discharge of coal from the cars into vessels. More than 35 miles of track are distributed on the wharves of the immediate neighborhood. The main line of road winds through the Schuylkill Valley, extending numerous branches east and west into the two southern coal-fields. The Broad Mountain, dividing the two coal fields, is crossed by the different branches at four different points, three of which lead directly into the Mahanoy coalfield, and one into the Wisconisco Basin. The Laurel Run Improvement Co. was chartered May 18, 1871; name changed December 12, 1871, to the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and 4358

On Sept. 23, 1896, the railroads, property and corporate franchises of the Philadelphia and Reading R. R. Co. and the coal lands and property of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Co. included under the gen. mtge. made by those companies under date of Jan. 3, 1888, were sold by the trustees of that mtge. to a committee 4362 representing the reorganization managers. On the same day all the other assets and property of the railroad company and the coal and iron company were sold by the receivers, under the same decree by virtue of which the other sales had been made, and to the same persons. The purchasers at these sales acquired control of the National Company, and conveyed to it a large part of the property purchased by them, first having, on Dec. 7, 1896, changed the name to Reading Co. and in-

Defendants offer in evidence the pages and parts of pages enumerated below of the Annual Reports for the year 1889, and each year subsequent thereto, on the Statistics of Railways in the United States, made by the Interstate Commerce 4386
Commission and transmitted to the Senate and House of Representatives as an appendix and separate document, constituting part of its Annual Report to Congress; also, explanatory note printed in each volume as a preface to the table giving classification of Railways and Mileage for the years referred to, which tables include the pages and parts of pages referred to. Such explanatory notes are in the following form:

"EXPLANATORY NOTE.

"Under the title 'Territorial Assignment of Statistics,' page 10, will be found an explanation of a new feature of the present report, namely, the compilation of railway statistics by ten territorial groups. Notice with respect to Table I that for certain roads lying in more than one group totalized figures for the entire road are given in 'Supplement A,' pages 302 and 303. This table, it will be observed, contains some changes as compared with the 1889 report, as for example, columns 2, 5 and 6 of the preceding report have been omitted, and in their place appear 'Length' of 'Line Owned' and 'Line 4388
Operated,' together with the 'Increase' or 'Decrease' in each case over June 30, 1889.

"For a detailed consideration of railway mileage, pages 12 to 16 inclusive may be examined in connection with the following table. Pages 13 and 14 give a 'Summary of Railway Mileage in the United States by States and Territories,' where a column each is devoted to 'Official' and 'Unofficial' mileage,

4390 'Remarks' column of Table 1, this data being shown in totalized form and by groups. A summarization of data included in 'Supplement B—Corporate Changes for the Year ending June 30, 1890,' pages 304 to 315 inclusive, may be found on page 20, being compared with corresponding information for 1889; and page 21 contains a 'Classification of Railways on the Basis of Operated Mileage, for the Years ending June 30, 1890 and 1889."

"Explaining the arrangement of roads in column 1, it may be stated that all operating roads, not subsidiary to other roads, appear in alphabetical order, printed flush; while all 4391 subsidiary roads, whether making operating reports or not, are indented, being also arranged alphabetically, though it should be said of these that such subsidiary roads as operate their own and possibly other roads for the leading road of a system are usually so arranged under a preceding alphabetical listing of the subsidiary roads operated directly by the controlling company. See pages 154 to 166, Nos. 477 to 551, both inclusive.

"Again, a subsidiary road may have in a similar relation to itself another road, which will appear indented to second 4392 place, and should some road be subsidiary to the last-named company, this third road will be still further indented. To illustrate, on page 104 we find, in alphabetical order 'printed flush,' No. 12, the Boston and Maine Railroad as principal in an operating system, and under it, as subsidiary, on page 106, No. 28, the Boston and Lowell Railroad, 'indented;' No. 31, page 108, the Nashua and Lowell Railroad, presents a road subsidiary to No. 28, and is, therefore, 'indented to second place;' this in turn has subsidiary to itself two other roads, 4393

Nos. 32 and 33, the Peterboro Railroad and the Stony Brook Railroad, which are "still further indented." The object of this arrangement is to show at a glance the proper relation of any road to the immediate road or roads preceding, and this plan is followed throughout all succeeding tables. In subsequent tables, all roads, although the abbreviated names are used, have the same numbers as in Table I, thus facilitating cross-reference. To this statement, however, there is one exception, namely, in 'Supplement B,' pages 304 to 315 inclusive, where the running numbers given are those of the same road 4394 as used in the Second Annual Report, and some of these roads, for the purpose of presenting their statistics up to the date of corporate change within the present year, appear in Table II and following tables, with the same "No." printed in boldfaced type."

Subsidiary road, fixed money rental. Leased Jan. 1, 1865, for 99 years, renewable forever; rental, interest on bonds; included in lease of Little Miami R. R. to Pennsylvania Co.	979
Subsidiary road, contingent money rental. Operated at cost since Oct. 20, 1890; net earnings paid to lessor. The Pennsylvania Co. has controlled road through ownership of entire capital stock since organization, Nov. 22, 1886.	980
Subsidiary road, contingent money rental. Leased Feb. 25, 1878, for 99 years; lessee operates the road at cost and pays net earnings to lessor. Majority of capital stock owned by Pennsylvania Co.	981	5761
Subsidiary road, fixed money rental. There is no corporation known as the Steubenville Extension R. R. Co. The piece of road called the Steubenville Extension, virtually owned by the Pennsylvania Co., was built by the Pennsylvania R. R. Co., and upon the organization of the Pennsylvania Co., in 1871, the latter leased this piece of road for 999 years, paying for the lease a sum equivalent to cost of construction. In 1876 it was subleased for a term of 25 years to the Pittsb., Cin. & St. L. Ry., now the Pittsb., Cin., Chic. & St. L. Ry., at an annual interest rental based upon the original cost.	982
Operating road, subsidiary, other relation. The Pittsb., Cin., Chic. & St. L. Ry. operates the bridge for the Newpt. & Cin. Bridge Co. (used by Louisv. & Nashv. R. R. under trackage arrangement); Pennsylvania Co. owns majority of capital stock.	983
Operating road, subsidiary, other relation. Controlled jointly by Pittsb., Cin., Chic. & St. L. Ry. and Pittsb. & L. Erie R. R. through joint ownership of entire capital stock, as per agreement dated Jan. 25, 1892.	984	5762

Operating road, independent	816
Subsidiary road, other relation. The Cin., Indpls., St. L. & Chic. Ry. furnished all money to construct this road. The Clev., Cin., Chic. & St. L. Ry. now owns all of the securties, operating it as a branch of its own line.	817	5763
		[181]
Subsidiary road, contingent money rental. The Cin., Indpls., St. L. & Chic. Ry. owned all the bonds and a majority of capital stock, and operated the road from May, 1884, applying the net earnings toward payment of interest on bonds. By virtue of the consolidation of Cin., Indpls., St. L. & Chic. Ry. with others, on July 1, 1889, into Clev., Cin., Chic. & St. L. Ry., the rights and obligations were vested in the latter company, which owns the entire capital stock.	818

COMPLAINANT'S EXHIBIT J.

BY-LAWS OF THE NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY (AS AMENDED OCTOBER 7, 1902).

ARTICLE I.—OF STOCKHOLDERS.

SECTION 1.—Annual meeting.

Stockholders' annual meeting.

A meeting of the stockholders of this company shall be held annually, on the first Tuesday of October (and if that be a legal holiday, then on the 6948 next business day), for the purpose of electing directors, and for the transaction of such other business as may properly be brought before the meeting.

SECTION 2.—Special meetings.

Stockholders' special meetings.

Special meetings of the stockholders may be held whenever and as often as a majority of the board of directors or the president may deem expedient; and such majority or said president shall call such meetings upon the written request of the owners or holders of one-quarter in 6949 amount of the capital stock of the company.

SECTION 3.—Notice of meetings.

Notice of meetings.

Written or printed notice of every meeting of stockholders shall be advertised at least once in each week for two weeks immediately preceding such meeting in one or more daily or weekly newspapers published in the cities of Milwaukee and New York, which notice shall, in general terms, state the object of the meeting. At least two weeks before such meeting a copy of such notice shall be mailed from 6950 one of the offices of the company to each stockholder of record who shall have furnished to the company's stock transfer agents in the city where the certificates of such stockholder shall have been issued an address to which such notice may be sent; but failure to mail any such notice shall not invalidate any action taken at such meeting or at any adjournment thereof.

SECTION 4.—Quorum.

Quorum.

To constitute a meeting of stockholders for any purpose there must be present, in person or by proxy, those who can give one-third of all the votes which 6951 could be given by all stockholders entitled to vote at such meeting.

If the holders of the requisite amount of stock shall fail in person or by proxy to attend at the time and place of the meeting, pursuant to a notice duly given, those who do attend may adjourn from time to time without further notice than by announcement to be given at the meeting until holders of the requisite amount of stock shall attend.

SECTION 5.—Voting and inspectors. 6952

Voting.

At all meetings of stockholders every registered owner of shares may vote in person or by proxy, and shall have one vote for every share standing in his or her name on the books of the company. At all elections of directors the voting shall be by ballot, and a majority of the votes cast thereat, either in person or by proxy, shall elect.

Inspectors of election.

The stockholders at each annual meeting shall elect two inspectors of election to serve at the next annual meeting. In case of failure so to elect, or in case of failure of any inspector so elected to act, the president 6953 or the vice-president presiding at the meeting shall fill the vacancies, but no candidate for the office of director shall be appointed to serve as such inspector. Each inspector of election, immediately before entering on the execution of his duties, shall subscribe an oath or affirmation faithfully to execute the duties of inspector at such meeting with strict impartiality and according to the best of his ability; but no failure to take or subscribe such oath or affirmation shall affect the result of any such election. The inspectors shall take charge of the polls, and after the balloting shall make a certificate of the result of 6954 the vote taken.

Any holder of proxies at any time prior to any meeting, but subsequent to the date of the closing of the transfer books, may submit his proxies for examination to the secretary or to such other officer as from time to time may be designated by the board of directors or by the executive committee, and the certificate of the secretary or other officer so designated as to the number of votes represented by such proxies, and as to the regularity thereof, shall be received as presumptive evidence thereof.

ARTICLE II.—BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

SECTION 1.—Number, and time of holding office.

Directors, number of. The business, property, and affairs of this company shall be managed and controlled by a

Directors must be stockholders. board of fifteen directors. Every director shall be, at the time of his election, or before accepting and qualifying as such director, a holder of record of at least one share of the capital stock of the company, and when he shall cease to be such holder of record he shall thereupon 6956 cease to be a director.

Term. The several directors shall be elected each to hold office for one year and until the election and qualification of his successor.

Number of directors may be increased or diminished. The stockholders may at any meeting increase or diminish the number of directors to be elected at the next annual meeting of the stockholders, and the number to be elected shall be specified in the notice of meeting, but shall never be less than five nor more than seventeen.

Polls open one hour. At all elections of directors the polls shall remain open at least one hour.

Directors continue in office until successors are elected. If for any cause any election of directors shall not be had on the day as prescribed in the by-laws, such election may be had on any other day after due notice as in the by-laws provided; and the directors then in office shall continue in office until their successors are duly elected and qualified.

SECTION 2.—Powers and duties.

Board shall annually elect officers, etc. In each year, at a meeting to be held as soon as practicable after the election of directors, the board shall elect the executive committee specified in section 10 of this article, and the officers specified in section 1 of Article III hereof, and may elect or appoint such other officers and agents as they may deem necessary for the proper conduct of the company's business. All officers, agents, and employees shall be removable at the will of the board, but any member present at a meeting may require such removal to be by a majority vote of the entire board.

The board shall determine the compensation to be paid to all officers and agents of the company, and the amount of the bonds to be given by them. 6959

SECTION 3.—Vacancies.

Vacancies, how filled.

Whenever any vacancy shall have occurred in the board or in any office, by death, resignation or otherwise, it shall be filled by the board for the remainder of the current corporate year and until the next annual election, or until a qualified successor be elected.

Directors must signify acceptance within 30 days.

If any person who shall have been elected as a director shall not, within thirty days after the date of the notice of his election, in writing, signify his acceptance of the office, the board of directors may declare a vacancy to exist in respect thereof. 6960

SECTION 4.—Place of meeting.

Directors may meet without the State of Wisconsin.

The directors may hold their meetings and have an office or offices and keep the books of the company, without as well as within the State of Wisconsin, at such place or places as the board may from time to time determine. 6961

SECTION 5.—Meetings of the board.

Meeting of directors.

Meetings of the board shall be held whenever called, by direction of the president or of the vice-president, or of any three of the directors for the time being in office.

The secretary or the assistant secretary shall give notice of each meeting, by mailing the same at least two days before the meeting, or by telegraphing the same at least one day before the meeting, to each director; but such notice may be waived by any director. 6962

Unless otherwise indicated in the notice thereof, any and all business may be transacted at any meeting.

At any meeting at which every director shall be present, even though without notice, any business may be transacted.

6963 SECTION 6.—Quorum.

Quorum. A majority of the board shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business; but, if less than a quorum be present at any duly called meeting, a majority of those present may adjourn the meeting from time to time, or sine die.

SECTION 7.—Order of business.

Order of business. At meetings of the board of directors, business shall be transacted in such order as the 6964 board may by resolution from time to time determine.

SECTION 8.—Executive committee.

Executive committee. The executive committee shall consist of six (6) directors, of whom the president, and in case of his absence from the meeting, the vice-president, shall Powers and duties of. be one ex officio. It shall possess and exercise all the powers of the board of directors, except when the latter is in session, but it may act only by the concurrent vote of not less than four (4) in number. It shall keep a record of all its proceedings, and the same shall be submitted 6965 to the board of directors. The executive committee shall have power to fill any vacancy in its own number, but the director so chosen shall serve as a member of the committee only until the next meeting of the board of directors, or until a successor shall have been elected by the board. The secretary, or, in his absence from the meeting, an assisstant secretary, or other officer or employee of the company, may act as secretary of the committee. A majority of the committee shall be a quorum. Meetings of the executive committee shall be held whenever called by the direction of the president or of the vice-president 6966 or of any two members of the committee.

The secretary or the assistant secretary shall give notice of each meeting by mailing the same, or by telegraphing the same, one day before the meeting, to each member; but such notice may be waived by any member.

Unless otherwise indicated in the notice thereof, any and all business may be transacted at any meeting.

At any meeting at which every member of the committee shall be present, even though without notice, any buiness may be transacted.

SECTION 9.—Other committees. 6967

Other committees.

The board of directors, in its discretion, may appoint other or additional committees for the proper transaction of the business of the company, with such duties and powers as it shall deem proper.

ARTICLE III.—OFFICERS.

SECTION 1.—Executive officers.

Titles of officers.

The executive officers of this company shall be a president (who shall also be a director), 6968 one or more vice-presidents (as the board from time to time may determine), a comptroller, a treasurer, an assistant treasurer, a secretary, an assistant secretary, and two general counsel, one resident in New York, and one resident in St. Paul.

SECTION 2.—General provisions.

Duties and powers in general.

Every executive officer shall perform such duties and exercise such powers as the board may from time to time direct.

Must not hold executive office in other companies.

No officer elected or appointed by the board 6969 shall hold executive office in any other business corporation if the board or the executive committee shall by resolution object thereto.

SECTION 3.—Powers and duties of president.

President.

It shall be the duty of the president to preside at all the meetings of the stockholders and of the board of directors; he may sign and execute all duly authorized instruments in the name of the company; he shall have general control and direction of the business of the company, and he shall do and perform all acts and things incident to the position of president, and such other duties as may be assigned to him from time to time by the board of directors or by the executive committee. 6970

The president shall be ex officio a member of all committees of the board, including the executive committee.

All executive officers shall report to the president.

6971 SECTION 4.—Powers and duties of vice-president and president pro tempore.

Vice-president and president pro tempore. In the absence or inability to act of the president, the vice-president shall perform all the duties and may exercise any of the powers of the president, subject to the control of the board of directors and of the executive committee. The vice-president shall perform such other duties as may be assigned to him from time to time by the board of directors, by the executive committee, or by the president.

6972 In the absence or inability to act of both the president and the vice-president, a president pro tempore may be appointed by the board of directors who shall perform all the duties and may exercise any of the powers of the president, subject to the control of the board of directors and of the executive committee.

The second and any additional vice-presidents shall perform such duties as may be assigned to him or them by the president.

SECTION 5.—Powers and duties of comptroller.

Comptroller. The comptroller shall have direct charge of 6973 the general books and accounts of the company. It shall be his duty to examine the accounts of all officers and employees and to see that the proper returns are made of all receipts from traffic and other sources, and that correct vouchers are turned over to him for all disbursements for any purpose. The comptroller shall also be the custodian of all bonds of officials and agents of the company handling funds.

SECTION 6.—Powers and duties of treasurer.

Treasurer. It shall be the duty of the treasurer to have 6974 the care and custody of all the funds of the company which may come into his hands, and to deposit the same, as such treasurer, in such bank or banks or depository as the board may designate; he shall sign, with such other officer as may be designated for the purpose by the board, all bills of exchange, checks, and promissory notes made by the company, and he shall pay out and dispose of the same under the direction of the board; he shall render a statement of his cash account to the board of directors as often as they shall require the same; he shall enter regularly, in books to be kept by him for that purpose, full and accurate account of all moneys received and paid 6975 by him on account of this company; he shall, at all reasonable times, exhibit his books and accounts to any director of the company, upon application at the office of the company, during business hours; he shall perform all acts incident to the position of treasurer; and he shall give a bond for the faithful discharge of his duties in such sum as the board of directors may require.

SECTION 7.—Powers and duties of secretary.

Secretary. It shall be the duty of the secretary to keep the minutes of all meetings of the board of 6976 directors in a proper book provided for that purpose, and also the minutes of all meetings of the stockholders; he shall attend to the giving and serving of all notices of the company; he shall be the custodian of the seal of the company; he shall have charge of the stock record books and the blank stock certificate books (subject to the provisions of Article IV, section 1), and of such other books and papers as the board may direct, all of which shall at all reasonable times be open to the examination of any director during business hours; and he shall in general perform all the duties incident to the office of secretary. 6977

SECTION 8.—Powers and duties of assistant treasurer.

Assistant treasurer. In the absence or inability to act of the treasurer, the assistant treasurer shall perform all the duties, and may exercise any of the powers, of the treasurer; and he shall perform such other duties as may be assigned to him from time to time by the board of directors or by the executive committee.

SECTION 9.—Powers and duties of assistant secretary. 6978

Assistant secretary. In the absence or inability to act of the secretary, the assistant secretary shall perform all the duties, and may exercise any of the powers, of the secretary; and he shall perform such other duties as may be assigned to him from time to time by the board of directors or by the executive committee.

6979 SECTION 10.—Duties of general counsel.

General counsel. The general counsel resident in St. Paul shall have general charge of the legal business of the company, including the designation and direction of the division, land, and local counsel; and the general counsel in New York may exercise general power of supervision and advice over and through the general counsel in St. Paul, and also shall act in matters referred to him by the board of directors or the executive committee.

6980 ARTICLE IV.—CORPORATE STOCK. CORPORATE SEAL.

SECTION 1.—Stock certificates and transfers.

Stock records and certificate books. (a) The stock record books and the blank stock-certificate books shall be in charge of the transfer agents or officers designated by the board of directors for that purpose.

Form of certificates and signatures required. The stock certificates of the company shall be in such form as the board of directors from time to time may prescribe. Each stock certifi-6981 cate shall be signed by transfer agents appointed by the board of directors and by some officer designated by the board of directors or by the executive committee for that purpose, and shall be countersigned by registrars of transfers appointed by the board. No new certificate shall be issued to a transferee except upon surrender and cancellation of the old certificate.

Issue, transfer, and registration of stock. (b) The board of directors or executive committee may make all necessary arrangements authorizing and regulating the issue and registration of stock certificates, and may provide for the issue of stock certificates in 6982 any one of the cities in which the company's stock shall be transferable, upon cancellation of certificates issued for a like number of shares in any other of the cities in which the company's stock is transferable.

Transfer books. (c) The agents in charge of the transfer books shall keep such books subject to the direction of the board of directors or of the executive committee, and shall prepare for presentation to the annual meeting and to all

List of stockholders. special meetings certified lists of the stockhold- 6983
ers of record on such books; and shall make such reports with reference to the matters in their charge as the board of directors or the executive committee may direct.

Transfers, how made. (d) Shares of the capital stock of the company shall be transferred only upon the proper transfer books by the holder of such shares, in person or by his attorney, upon surrender and cancellation of similar certificates for a like number of shares of the same kind, having indorsed thereon or attached thereto a duly executed assignment thereof and power to transfer the same. 6984

Closing of transfer books. (e) The stock transfer books shall be closed, as may be directed by the board of directors or by the executive committee, for a prescribed period preceding the day appointed for any annual meeting or any special meeting of the stockholders, or for the payment of a dividend; and no transfer of stock shall be made during any period so prescribed.

Lost, stolen, or destroyed certificates. (f) No certificate of shares in the capital stock of the company shall be issued in place of any certificate alleged to have been lost or stolen or destroyed, except upon delivery to the company of a bond of indemnity to 6985 be approved by the board of directors or by the executive committee, and except also upon furnishing such evidence of such loss, theft, or destruction as shall be satisfactory to the board of directors or to the executive committee.

SECTION 2.—Dividends.

Dividends. The board of directors may declare dividends from surplus net earnings of the company whenever they shall deem it expedient in the exercise of a sound discretion. 6986

SECTION 3.—Corporate seal.

Corporate seal. The board of directors shall adopt a suitable seal, containing the name of the company. The secretary shall procure duplicate stamps suitable to make impressions of such seal, one of which shall be in the custody of the secretary in New York and the other in the custody of the assistant secretary in St. Paul; and, when and as directed by special or general resolution of the board of directors, or of the executive committee, the president, any vice-president, the secretary, or any assistant secretary, may and shall use one or the other of such duplicate stamps in impressing such corporate seal upon documents, indentures, and obligations of the company.

ARTICLE V.—AMENDMENTS.

By-laws, how amended, etc.

The by-laws of the company, with the exception of the provisions of Section 1, of Article II, may be altered, amended, or repealed by the vote of a majority of all the directors of the company at any regular or special meeting of the board, provided that notice of the proposed alteration, amendment, or repeal shall have been given at a previous meeting of the board.

COMPLAINANT'S EXHIBIT K.

BY-LAWS OF THE GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY. ADOPTED BY THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS JULY 24, 1896.

ARTICLE I.—Directors and officers.

SECTION 1. The stockholders of the company, at their annual meeting in each year, shall elect by ballot, and from their own number, three directors, each share of stock at such election being entitled to one vote, to be cast by the holder thereof in person or by written proxy; and the persons so elected shall, together with those previously elected whose terms of office have not yet expired, constitute the board of directors of the company.

The directors so elected shall, at their first meeting, elect by ballot, and from their own number, a president and a vice-president; and the board thus organized shall, at the same meeting, elect a secretary and a treasurer, and may, in its discretion, at the same or any other meeting duly convened, appoint an assistant secretary or an assistant treasurer, or both.

The board may also designate three of its members, of whom the president shall be one, to constitute an executive committee, and may, at any meeting duly convened, appoint a general solicitor, general manager, land commissioner, comptroller, chief engineer, and such superintendents or agents as it may deem necessary.

The president, vice-president, secretary, and treasurer, and the directors shall hold their respective offices for one year, and 6991 until their successors shall have been duly elected and qualified. The assistant secretary, the assistant treasurer, general solicitor, general superintendent, chief engineer, land commissioner, comptroller, and such superintendents or agents so appointed may be removed at the pleasure of the board of directors. Any vacancy or vacancies occurring among the officers elected by the board, from death, resignation, or other cause, may be filled for the unexpired term by the board at any meeting thereof, and any vacancy or vacancies so occurring in the board may be filled for the unexpired term by the board at the first meeting follow- 6992 ing such vacancy, or by the president, if no meeting is held within ten days after such vacancy.

SEC. 2. All the business and affairs of the company shall be managed and conducted by or under the direction of the board of directors, and a majority of the members of the board shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business; but any smaller number shall be competent to adjourn sine die, or from day to day.

ARTICLE II.—Meetings.

SECTION 1. The annual meeting of the stockholders shall be 6993 held at the general office of the company, in St. Paul, Minn., on the second Thursday of October in each year, upon notice thereof, given by the secretary, stating the time and place of such meeting, printed in some newspaper published in said St. Paul for ten days prior to the date of such meeting. The election of directors shall be proceeded with on said day, or such other day as such annual meeting shall or may adjourn to. The polls shall be open on the day of election from twelve (12) o'clock m. to three (3) o'clock p. m.

The secretary and two disinterested persons appointed by 6994 the president or chairman of the meeting shall be the inspectors of election, and shall canvass the votes, and make and sign a record of the result upon the minutes of the meeting. Those stockholders, equal to the number to be elected, having the greatest number of votes, shall be deemed and declared duly elected, and the secretary shall immediately notify the persons elected of their election; provided, that in the election of directors and at all other elections or meetings of the company a majority of votes shall govern.

At such election, and in all cases in which stockholders shall vote, the votes shall be delivered in person, or by proxy duly authorized, and each share of full-paid stock shall entitle the holder thereof to one vote.

SEC. 2. Special meetings of the stockholders shall be held at the general office of the company in St. Paul, and may be called by order of the board of directors, or by stockholders holding one-fourth in amount of the capital stock of the company, or by the president, on like notice as that required for annual meetings, and upon written or printed notice to each and every stockholder, to be mailed to his last known address at least ten days before the date of such special meeting, specifying the object of the meeting; and no business shall be transacted at such special meetings except such as shall be particularly set forth in such notice, nor any vote taken unless a majority of all the stock of the company shall be then and there represented either in person or by proxy.

SEC. 3. The first meeting of the newly constituted board shall be held at the general office of the company in St. Paul immediately after the adjournment of the stockholders' meeting on the day of their election, or at the general office of the company in the city of New York, upon eight days' notice of the time and place of meeting, given to each of the directors-elect by the president or secretary of the company. Other meetings of the board may be held upon call, or by adjournment, as hereinafter provided, at the office of the company in St. Paul, or at the office of the company in the city of New York, or at any other general office of the company that may hereafter be duly established. Such meetings may be called by the president or vice-president, on the request of two directors, in writing, and, without such request, may be called by the president whenever, in his judgment, a meeting of the directors shall be necessary or desirable. Eight days' notice of such special meeting shall be given to each director by depositing notice of the time and place of the holding of the same in the post-office, addressed to him at his place of residence.

Provided, however, that any other or shorter notice of any such meeting given to any director shall be deemed regular and 6999 sufficient, if accepted as such by said director.

ARTICLE III.—The president and vice-president.

SECTION 1. The president will, when present, preside at all meetings, either of the board of directors or of the stockholders. In the absence of the president the vice-president will discharge the duties of the president. In case of the absence of both the president and the vice-president the directors or stockholders, as the case may be, may appoint a president pro tempore.

SEC. 2. The president will have and exercise general super- 7000 vision and control over the entire property, business, and affairs of the company. All the officers and agents of the corporation will be responsible to him for the proper and faithful discharge of their several duties and will obey such orders and make such reports to him touching the business of the company under their respective charge as he may from time to time direct; and any superintendent, engineer, agent, or employee of the company may be suspended or discharged by him, if, in his judgment, there be cause for such suspension or discharge, at any time when the board of directors shall not be in session. 7001

All leases, conveyances, and instruments affecting the right of way or other real property of the company, and all contracts with other railways relating to the use of the same, shall be signed by the president and shall not be valid without.

All contracts requiring the corporate seal and all certificates of stock will be signed by him or the vice-president; and he will have such other powers as are incident to the office or may from time to time be prescribed or conferred by the board.

The vice-president, in the absence or in case of the disability of the president, will preside at the meetings of the board of di- 7002 rectors and of the stockholders, may sign all bonds, contracts, and other instruments requiring the corporate seal, and may countersign all contracts and leases originating in the land department.

ARTICLE IV.—The secretary.

The secretary will keep a record of all meetings of the stockholders and of the board of directors and attest the same by his signature. He will have charge of all books, papers, and documents which properly belong to his office. He will sign all 7003 certificates of stock and have charge of the corporate seal and keep the books appertaining to his office. He will keep proper stock transfer and register books, and generally perform such duties and make such reports as the board may direct. In case of his absence or disability, the assistant secretary, if any, will perform his duties, or a secretary pro tempore may be elected in case of the absence of both.

ARTICLE V.—The treasurer.

The treasurer will safely keep and account for all moneys, 7004 funds, or other property which may come into his hands, keeping full and true statements of all financial transactions of the company in his books. He will give bonds, under the direction of the board, for the faithful performance of his duties. He will keep his accounts as treasurer in such banks or places of deposit as the president or the board of directors may direct, and generally will render all such accounts and perform such duties as the board may direct. In case of his absence or disability, the assistant treasurer, if any, shall perform his duties.

7005 ARTICLE VI.—Executive committee.

The duty of the executive committee will be to superintend the transaction of the current administrative business of the company during the intervals between the meetings of the board of directors and to conduct such other matters of business as may from time to time be committed to it by the board. Three members of the committee shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, and without such quorum the committee will not do or attempt any business whatever. They will record their proceedings in full in a book to be kept for 7006 that purpose, and the record of each proceeding will be signed by all the members of the committee participating therein. Such records will be open at all times to the inspection of any member of the board of directors. They will be subject to the control of the board, and they will be produced to the board for its action thereon at any meeting thereof upon the request of any director. Any member of the board may be present at the meetings of the executive committee.

ARTICLE VII.—Stock certificates and transfers. 7007

All certificates for shares of the capital stock will be signed by the president or vice-president and the secretary. They will be numbered in progression, beginning with number one, and each certificate will show upon its face the number of shares for which it is issued and that the stock therein mentioned is transferable only on the books of the company and upon the surrender of such certificate.

Upon the issuance of each certificate an entry thereof will be made in a book called the "register of stockholders," stating the number of such certificate, the name of the stockholder, 7008 and the number of shares to which he is entitled. The transfer of any share or shares of stock may be made by the surrender of the certificate issued therefor and a written assignment thereof, signed by the owner or his duly authorized attorney in fact, upon a book to be called the "register of transfers." Upon such surrender and assignment a new certificate or certificates will be issued to the assignee as he may be entitled; but without such surrender and assignment no transfer of stock will be recognized by the company.

The "register of transfers" will be closed at least ten days 7009 before each annual meeting of the stockholders and at such other times and for such other purposes as may be ordered by the board of directors or by the executive committee; and no assignee of shares will be entitled to vote, as such assignee, at any meeting unless such surrender and assignment shall have been made or tendered before the time specified for the closing of said "registers of transfers."

ARTICLE VIII.—Second vice-president and third vice-president.

In addition to the officers prescribed and required by the 7010 charter of this company, there may be a second vice-president and a third vice-president, who shall be elected by the board of directors in the same manner as is provided in Article I of these by-laws for the election of secretary and treasurer, and who shall hold his office at the pleasure of the board.

The board of directors may invest the respective officers provided for in this article with such powers and authority, and charge them respectively with such duties, not inconsistent with the charter of the company nor with the laws of this State, as it 7011 shall deem proper and necessary in the due and orderly conduct and management of the business and affairs of the company; and it will, by resolution, establish and clearly prescribe and define such powers, authority, and duties, and said officers will have, possess, and exercise all the authority and powers, and be charged with all the duties, thus established, defined, and prescribed.

ARTICLE IX.—Change of by-laws.

These by-laws, or any of them, may be added to, altered,
7012 amended, or repealed by the board of directors at any meeting thereof; and any addition, alteration, amendment, or repeal so made shall be valid and operative until the next annual meeting of the company thereafter, and if not disapproved at such annual meeting will be valid and effectual to all intents and purposes as if adopted by the stockholders at such annual meeting, as well as by the board.

COMPLAINANT'S EXHIBIT L.

7013 BY-LAWS OF NORTHERN SECURITIES COMPANY. ADOPTED BY THE INCORPORATORS NOVEMBER 13, 1901. AMENDED BY THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS NOVEMBER 14, 1901. RATIFIED BY THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS IN AMENDED FORM NOVEMBER 29, 1901.

BY-LAWS OF NORTHERN SECURITIES COMPANY.

ARTICLE I.—Stockholders.

SECTION I. Annual meeting.—A meeting of the stockholders of the company shall be held annually at the principal office of 7014 the company, in the State of New Jersey, at 12 o'clock noon on the second Monday in November in each year, if not a legal holiday, and if a legal holiday then on the next succeeding Monday not a legal holiday, for the purpose of electing directors, and for the transaction of such other business as may be brought before the meeting.

It shall be the duty of the secretary to cause notice of each annual meeting to be published once in each of the four calendar weeks next preceding the meeting in at least one newspaper in each of the following places: Jersey City, N. J., and New York,

N. Y. Nevertheless, a failure to publish such notice, or any 7015 irregularity in such notice or in the publication thereof, shall not affect the validity of any annual meeting, or of any proceedings at any such meeting.

SEC. 2. Special meetings.—Special meetings of the stockholders may be held at the principal office of the company in the State of New Jersey, whenever called in writing or by vote by a majority of the board of directors.

Notice of the time and place of each special meeting shall by the secretary be published once in each of the two calendar weeks next preceding the meeting in at least one newspaper in 7016 each of the following places: Jersey City, N. J., and New York, N. Y. Nevertheless, if all the stockholders shall waive notice of a special meeting, no notice of such meeting shall be required; and whenever all the stockholders shall meet in person or by proxy, such meeting shall be valid for all purposes without call or notice, and at such meeting any corporate action may be taken.

SEC. 3. Quorum.—At any meeting of the stockholders the holders of a majority of all the shares of capital stock of the company, present in person or represented by proxy, shall constitute a quorum of the stockholders for all purposes, unless the 7017 representation of a larger number shall be required by law, and in that case the representation of the number so required shall constitute a quorum.

If the holders of the amount of stock necessary to constitute a quorum shall fail to attend in person or by proxy at the time and place fixed by these by-laws for an annual meeting, or fixed by notice as above provided for a special meeting called by the directors, a majority in interest of the stockholders present in person or by proxy may adjourn, from time to time, without notice other than by announcement at the meeting, until holders 7018 of the amount of stock requisite to constitute a quorum shall attend. At any such adjourned meeting at which a quorum shall be present any business may be transacted which might have been transacted at the meeting as originally notified.

SEC. 4. Organization.—The president, and in his absence, one of the vice-presidents, in order of their numbers, beginning with the first, shall call meetings of the stockholders to order, and shall act as chairman of such meetings. The board of directors 7019 may appoint any stockholder to act as chairman of any meeting in the absence of the president and all the vice-presidents.

The secretary of the company shall act as secretary at all meetings of the stockholders; but in the absence of the secretary at any meeting of the stockholders the presiding officer may appoint any person to act as secretary of the meeting.

SEC. 5. Voting.—At each meeting of the stockholders every stockholder shall be entitled to vote in person, or by proxy appointed by instrument in writing, subscribed by such stockholder or by his duly authorized attorney, and delivered to the 7020 inspectors at the meeting; and he shall have one vote for each share of stock standing registered in his name at the time of the closing of the transfer books for said meeting. The votes for directors, and, upon demand of any stockholder, the votes upon any question before the meeting, shall be by ballot.

At each meeting of the stockholders a full, true, and complete list, in alphabetical order, of all of the stockholders entitled to vote at such meeting, and indicating the number of shares held by each, certified by the secretary or by the treasurer, shall be furnished. Only the persons in whose names shares of stock 7021 stand on the books of the company at the time of the closing of the transfer books for such meeting, as evidenced by the list of stockholders so furnished, shall be entitled to vote in person or by proxy on the shares so standing in their names.

Prior to any meeting, but subsequent to the time of closing the transfer books for such meeting, any proxy may submit his powers of attorney to the secretary or to the treasurer for examination. The certificate of the secretary or of the treasurer as to the regularity of such powers of attorney, and as to the number of shares held by the persons who severally and respectively 7022 executed such powers of attorney, shall be received as prima facie evidence of the number of shares represented by the holder of such powers of attorney, for the purpose of establishing the presence of a quorum at such meeting, and of organizing the same, and for all other purposes.

SEC. 6. Inspectors.—At each meeting of the stockholders the polls shall be opened and closed; the proxies and ballots shall be received and be taken in charge; and all questions touching the qualification of voters and the validity of proxies, and the acceptance or rejection of votes, shall be decided by two inspectors. Such inspectors shall be appointed by the board of directors 7023 before or at the meeting, or, if no such appointment shall have been made, then by the presiding officer at the meeting. If for any reason any of the inspectors previously appointed shall fail to attend, or refuse or be unable to serve, inspectors in place of any so failing to attend, or refusing or unable to attend, shall be appointed in like manner.

ARTICLE II.—Board of directors.

SECTION 1. Number, classification, and term of office.—The 7024 business and the property of the company shall be managed and controlled by the board of directors.

As provided in the certificate of incorporation, the directors shall be classified in respect of the time for which they shall severally hold office, by dividing them into three classes, each class consisting of one-third of the whole number of the board of directors. The directors of the first class shall be elected for a term of one year; the directors of the second class shall be elected for a term of two years; and the directors of the third class shall be elected for a term of three years. At each annual election the successors to the directors of the class whose terms 7025 shall expire in that year shall be elected to hold office for the term of three years, so that the term of office of one class of directors shall expire in each year.

The number of the first board of directors shall be three, but the number of directors may be altered from time to time, and so soon as deemed advisable by the first board of directors shall be increased to fifteen by the alteration of these by-laws.[a]

In case of any increase of the number of directors, the additional directors shall be elected by the directors then in office; one-third of such additional directors for the unexpired portion 7026 of the term of one year; one-third for the unexpired portion of the term of two years; and one-third for the unexpired portion of the term of three years; so that each class of directors shall be increased equally.

[a]At a meeting of the board, held 10 a. m. November 14, 1901, these by-laws were amended by striking out this paragraph and inserting in place thereof the words: "The number of the board of directors shall be fifteen, but the number of directors may be altered from time to time by the alteration of these by-laws."

Every director shall be a holder of at least one share of the capital stock of the company. Each director shall serve for the term for which he shall have been elected and until his successor shall have been duly chosen.

At all elections of the directors the polls shall remain open for at least one hour, unless every registered owner of shares has sooner voted in person or by proxy or in writing has waived the statutory provision.

SECTION 2. Vacancies.—In case of any vacancy in the directors of any class through death, resignation, disqualification, or other cause, the remaining directors, by affirmative vote of a majority thereof, may elect a successor to hold office for the unexpired portion of the term of the director whose place shall be vacant and until the election of his successor.

Such vacancy shall be filled upon and after nominations therefor shall have been made by the finance committee.

SECTION 3. Place of meeting, etc.—The directors may hold their meetings and may have an office and keep the books of the company (except as otherwise may be provided for by law) in such place or places in the State of New Jersey or outside of the State of New Jersey as the board from time to time may determine.

SECTION 4. Special meetings.—Special meetings of the board of directors shall be held whenever called by the president or by one-third of the directors for the time being in office.

The secretary shall give notice of each special meeting by mailing the same at least five days before the meeting, or by telegraphing the same at least three days before the meeting, to each director; but such notice may be waived by any director. At any meeting at which every director shall be present, even though without any notice, any business may be transacted.

SECTION 5. Quorum.—A majority of the board of directors shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, but if at any meeting of the board there be less than a quorum present, a majority of those present may adjourn the meeting from time to time.

SECTION 6. Order of business.—At meetings of the board of directors business shall be transacted in such order as from time to time the board may determine by resolution.

At all meetings of the board of directors, the president, or in 7031 his absence one of the vice-presidents, in order of their numbers, beginning with the first, shall preside.

ARTICLE III.—Executive committee.

SECTION 1. The board of directors may elect from the directors an executive committee. The president shall ex officio be chairman, and in his absence, one of the members, in the order of their election, shall act as chairman.

The board of directors shall fill vacancies in the executive committee by election from the directors. 7032

All action by the executive committee shall be reported to the board of directors at its meeting next succeeding such action, and shall be subject to revision or alteration by the board of directors: Provided, That no rights or acts of third parties shall be affected by any such revision or alteration.

The executive committee shall fix its own rules of proceeding, which rules shall be subject to approval by the board, and shall meet where and as provided by such rules, or by resolution of the board of directors, but in every case the presence of a majority shall be necessary to constitute a quorum. 7033

In every case the affirmative vote of a majority of all of the members of the committee shall be necessary to its adoption of any resolution.

During the intervals between the meetings of the board of directors, the executive committee shall possess, and may exercise, all the powers of the board of directors in the management and direction of the business and affairs of the company in such manner as the executive committee shall deem best for the interests of the company, in all cases in which specific directions shall not have been given by the board of directors. 7034

ARTICLE IV.—Officers.

SECTION 1. Officers.—The executive officers of the company shall be a president, a vice-president, or more than one vice-president, a treasurer, and a secretary, all of whom shall be elected by the board of directors.

The board of directors may appoint such other officers as they shall deem necessary, who shall have such authority and shall perform such duties as from time to time may be prescribed by the board of directors.

The powers and duties of the treasurer and secretary may be exercised and performed by the same person.

In its discretion, the board of directors, by the vote of a majority thereof, may leave unfilled for any such period as it may fix by resolution any office except those of president, treasurer, and secretary.

All officers and agents shall be subject to removal at any time by the affirmative vote of a majority of the whole board of directors. All officers, agents, and employees, other than officers appointed by the board of directors, shall hold office at the discretion of the committee or of the officer appointing them.

SECTION 2. Powers and duties of the president.—The president shall preside at all meetings of the stockholders and of the board of directors, and by virtue of his office he shall be a member of the executive committee. Subject to the board of directors, or to the executive committee, if any be elected, he shall have general charge of the business of the company, may sign and execute all authorized bonds, contracts, or other obligations in the name of the company, and, with the treasurer, or an assistant treasurer, may sign all certificates of the shares in the capital stock of the company. He shall do and perform such other duties as from time to time may be assigned to him by the board of directors.

SECTION 3. Vice-presidents.—Each vice-president shall have such powers, and shall perform such duties, in addition to those mentioned in the by-laws, as may be assigned to him by the board of directors or the executive committee.

SECTION 4. Powers and duties of treasurer.—The treasurer shall have custody of all the funds and securities of the company which may have come into his hands; when necessary or proper, he shall indorse on behalf of the company for collection, checks, notes, and other obligations and shall deposit the same to the credit of the company in such bank or banks or depositary as the board of directors or the executive committee may designate; he shall sign all receipts and vouchers for payments made to the company; jointly with the president or a vice-president, or such other officer as may be designated by the board or executive committee, he shall sign all checks made by the company, and shall pay out and dispose of the same under 7039

the direction of the board or of the executive committee; he shall sign, with the president or a vice-president, or such other person or persons as may be designated for the purpose by the board of directors or the executive committee, all bills of exchange and promissory notes of the company; he may sign, with the president or a vice-president, all certificates of shares in the capital stock; whenever required by the board of directors or by the executive committee, he shall render a statement of his cash account; he shall enter regularly, in books of the company to be kept by him for the purpose, full and accurate 7040 account of all moneys received and paid by him on account of the company; he shall, at all reasonable times, exhibit his books and accounts to any director of the company upon application at the office of the company during business hours, and he shall perform all acts incident to the position of treasurer, subject to the control of the board of directors or of the executive committee.

He shall give security for the faithful discharge of his duties in such sum as the board of directors or the executive committee may require. 7041

SECTION 6. Assistant treasurers.—The board of directors or the executive committee may appoint an assistant treasurer or more than one assistant treasurer. Each assistant treasurer shall have such powers and shall perform such duties as may be assigned to him by the board of directors or by the executive committee.

SECTION 7. Powers and duties of secretary.—The secretary shall keep the minutes of all meetings of the board of directors and the minutes of all meetings of the stockholders, and also the minutes of all committees, in books provided for that pur- 7042 pose; he shall attend to the giving and serving of all notices of the company; he may sign, with the president or a vice-president, in the name of the company all contracts authorized by the board of directors or by the executive committee, and when so ordered by the board of directors or executive committee, he shall affix the seal of the company thereto; he shall have charge of the certificate books, transfer books, and stock ledgers, and such other books and papers as the board of directors or the executive committee may direct, all of which shall, at all reasonable times, be open to the examination of any director, upon application at the office of the company during business hours; and he shall in general perform all the duties incident to the office of secretary, subject to the control of the board of directors and of the executive committee.

SECTION 8. Assistant secretaries.—The board of directors or the executive committee may appoint one or more assistant secretaries. Each assistant secretary shall have such powers and shall perform such duties as may be assigned to him by the board of directors or by the executive committee.

SECTION 9. Auditor.—The auditor shall be the principal officer in charge of the accounts of the company, and shall perform such duties as from time to time may be assigned to him by the board of directors or the executive committee.

ARTICLE V.—Capital stock—seal.

SECTION 1. Certificates of shares.—Certificates for shares of the capital stock of the company shall be in such form, not inconsistent with the certificate of incorporation, as shall be prepared or be approved by the board of directors. The certificates shall be signed by the president or a vice-president, and also by the treasurer or an assistant treasurer.

All certificates shall be consecutively numbered. The name of the person owning the shares represented thereby, with the number of such shares and the date of issue, shall be entered on the company's books.

No certificate shall be valid unless it be signed by the president or a vice-president, and by the treasurer or an assistant treasurer.

All certificates surrendered to the company shall be canceled, and no new certificate shall be issued until the former certificate for the same number of shares of the same class shall have been surrendered and canceled.

SECTION 2. Transfer of shares.—Shares in the capital stock of the company shall be transferred only on the books of the company by the holder thereof in person, or by his attorney, upon surrender and cancellation of certificates for a like number of shares.

SECTION 3. Regulations.—The board of directors, and the executive committee also, shall have power and authority to make all such rules and regulations as, respectively, they may 7047 deem expedient concerning the issue, transfer, and registration of certificates for shares of the capital stock of the company.

The board of directors or the executive committee may appoint one or more transfer agents and a registrar of transfers, and may require all stock certificates to bear the signature of one of such transfer agents and of such registrar of transfers.

SECTION 4. Closing of transfer books.—The stock transfer books shall be closed for the meetings of the stockholders and for the payment of dividends during such periods as from time to time may be fixed by the board of directors or by the execu- 7048 tive committee, and during such periods no stock shall be transferable.

SECTION 5. Dividends.—The board of directors may declare dividends from the surplus or net profits of the company over and above the amount which from time to time may be fixed by the board as the amount to be reserved as working capital.

SECTION 6. Working capital.—The directors shall not be required in January in each year, after reserving over and above its capital stock paid in, as a working capital for said corporation, such sum, if any, as shall have been fixed by the 7049 stockholders, to declare a dividend among its stockholders of the whole of its accumulated profits exceeding the amount so reserved, and pay the same to such stockholders on demand; but the board of directors may fix a sum which may be set aside or reserved, over and above the company's capital paid in, as a working capital for the company, and from time to time they may increase, diminish, and vary the same in their absolute judgment and discretion.

SECTION 7. Corporate seal.—The board of directors shall provide a suitable seal containing the name of the company, 7050 which seal shall be in charge of the secretary, if and when so directed by the board of directors or by the executive committee. A duplicate of the seal may be kept and used by the treasurer, or by any assistant secretary or assistant treasurer.

ARTICLE VI.—Amendments.

SECTION 1. The board of directors shall have power to make, amend, and repeal the by-laws of the company, by vote of a majority of all the directors, at any regular or special meeting 7051 of the board: Provided, That notice of intention to make, amend, or repeal the by-laws, in whole or in part, shall have been given at the next preceding meeting; or without any such notice, by a vote of two-thirds of all of the directors.

A land grant of about 43,000,000 acres, and Sundry bonds, stocks, and accounts, representing interests in terminal, express, coal, and navigation companies.

This property is represented by fifty-four corporations, which have issued $380,000,000 of bonds and stocks, of which all are now outstanding, and $271,949,044, including defaulted interest to December 31, 1896, are owned directly by the public.

The present fixed annual interest and sinking fund charges amount to..... $10,905,690.00 7064

The adjusted net income from all sources applicable to these fixed charges has been:

For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895.. 6,015,846.62

And during the past five years has averaged 7,801,645.78

The plan for independent reorganization of the property has been drawn upon the following basis:

First.—The abandonment of Chicago as the eastern terminus and the limitation of the railway on the east by the Mississippi River and the Great Lakes. 7065

The bonds and stocks of the Chicago and Northern Pacific Railroad Company and the Chicago and Calumet Company, or their successor companies, remaining as Northern Pacific assets, will be disposed of when they can be sold advantageously, and their proceeds applied to the benefit of the property.

Second.—The ultimate union of main line, branches, and terminal properties through direct ownership by a single company.

So far as practicable the ownership in fee or otherwise of the equipment, branch line, and terminal properties (other than the Portland terminal) will be acquired and vested in the new company and covered by its new mortgages. 7066

Third.—The reduction of the fixed annual charges to less than the minimum earnings under probable conditions.

The net income applicable to fixed charges has fluctuated from $10,067,408.37 in the fiscal year 1891–92 to $4,449,999.04 in 1893–94. The average of the past five years has been $7,801,645.78.

The smallest results were brought about by the well-known 7067 combination of currency panic, floods, social disorders, and short crops, all of which are unlikely to occur again at any one time.

The net income during the last fiscal year, 1894–95, as shown on page 20, was	$5,657,483.49
To which should be added allowance for extraordinary expenses of the receiverships, of	358,363.13
Thus making the adjusted net income of that year	6,015,846.62

7068 The gross earnings of the present fiscal year show an increase of about 16 per cent over the gross earnings for the same period of the previous year.

The fixed annual charges under the plan of reorganization, when fully carried out (exclusive of bonds reserved for new construction), will amount to $6,052,660.

Fourth.—Ample provision for additional capital as required in a series of years for the development of the property and for the greater facilities necessitated by an increased business.

In their report of September last, the receivers state "that provision should be made for extraordinary expenditures in the 7069 next five years of $9,000,000, in order to place the property on an equal footing with its rivals for economical operation."

RAILWAY SYSTEM AND ITS MORTGAGE LIENS.

The railroad of the Northern Pacific system is composed of—

Main line	45.73%	2,152.35 miles.
Branches	54.27%	2,554.09 miles.
	100 %	4,706.44 miles.

7070 The general first, second, and third mortgage bonds are secured by liens in their respective order upon the land grant and upon the main-line railroad, as above.

The consolidated mortgage bonds are secured by a fourth lien upon the land grant and upon the main-line railroad, and also by the pledge of first-mortgage bonds upon various branch lines, having an aggregate length of 1,415.85 miles.

None of the four mortgages cover (except by leasehold) any of the terminal properties owned by the St. Paul and Northern Pacific Railroad Company, the Northern Pacific Terminal Company of (Portland) Oregon, or the Northern Pacific and Mani- 7071

toba Terminal (Winnipeg), all of which are owned by separate organizations.

There are other branch roads comprising 1,138.24 miles, the bonds of which are directly owned by the public.

UNITED STATES LAND GRANT.

The public lands granted by the United States to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company under its charter July 2, 1864, amounted to 12,800 acres to the mile of track in the States of Minnesota and Oregon and 25,600 acres per mile in the inter- 7072 mediate Territories.

It is estimated that under this grant the company is entitled to receive about 43,000,000 acres, of which 22,823,115 acres have been selected as belonging to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company. Of these, United States patents, vesting the title to the fee of such lands in the company, have been received for 15,939,189 acres.

The operations of the land department, as shown on page 21, during the past five years shows that from all sources (exclusive of proceeds of sales applicable to the preferred stock, or by 7073 trustees of prior mortgages to their interest and sinking funds)

the total income was	$3,076,308.37
while the expenses and taxes amounted to	1,304,145.39
leaving for the sinking fund of the general first mortgage only	1,772,162.98
while for the same period the requirements thereunder amounted to	3,272,860.00
This deficiency in proceeds from land sales amounting to	1,500,697.02 7074 was supplied from the net earnings of the operating department of the railroad company.

Of late the diminution of sales of lands applicable to this and other mortgages has thrown upon the transportation earnings of the company the burden of their sinking-fund charges.

These charges, with the other sinking-fund obligations to the public, amounting to $1,463,763 per annum, will be entirely relieved by the full operation of the plan of reorganization.

None of the new bonds will be subject to drawing or compulsory redemption prior to their regular maturity, a feature now quite generally recognized by investors as most desirable. At the same time they will, after the retirement of the present general first-mortgage bonds, receive all benefits of the land sales through the mortgage provision that one-half the proceeds thereof, not exceeding $500,000 in any one year, shall be used in the purchase, at not exceeding 110 per cent, and the cancellation of prior lien 4 per cent bonds, and when these are not obtainable, then in the purchase, at not exceeding 100 per cent, and the cancellation of general lien 3 per cent bonds, and that the remainder shall be used for betterments and additions to the mortgaged property.

As it now stands, the system in its form of incorporation and capitalization is a development without method or adequate preparation for growth. Scarcely any single security is complete in itself. The main-line mortgages cover neither feeders nor terminals. The terminal mortgages may be bereft of their main-line support. The branch-line bonds are dependent upon the main line for interchange of business, and the main line owes a large part of its business to the branch lines.

The principal object of the reorganization committee has been to preserve the integrity of the system. The plan now presented for the reorganization of the property is founded upon the idea that its unification means its preservation and prosperity, both of which, it is believed, can now be thus permanently accomplished with the best possible security and results for all interests.

The conversion of the general first-mortgage bonds upon the terms set forth in the plan is recommended by Messrs. J. P. Morgan & Co., August Belmont & Co., and Winslow, Lanier & Co., who originally issued those bonds, as well as by the German committee of general first-mortgage bondholders.

The plan has been prepared with the approval and cooperation of Messrs. J. P. Morgan & Co. and the Deutsche Bank.

The plan has received the approval of the representatives of a majority of the bondholders of the three main-line mortgages in process of foreclosure (the general second, general third, and consolidated mortgages), and of other important interests affected by the terms of reorganization.

It has also received the approval of the interests represented 7079 by the protective committee.

Messrs. J. P. Morgan & Co. and the Deutsche Bank have formed the necessary syndicate of $45,000,000, and Messrs. J. P. Morgan & Co. will act as reorganization managers.

NEW YORK, March 16, 1896.

PLAN FOR THE REORGANIZATION OF THE NORTHERN PACIFIC SYSTEM.

CONDITIONS OF PARTICIPATION.

Participation under this plan of reorganization in any respect whatsoever is dependent on the deposit of securities with one 7082 of the depositaries, Messrs. J. P. Morgan & Co., 23 Wall street, New York; Messrs. Drexel & Co., Fifth and Chestnut streets, Philadelphia; the Deutsche Bank, Berlin, and its branches at Frankfort-on-Main, Bremen, Hamburg, Munich, and London, within such time as may be fixed by notice, and will embrace only securities so deposited.

No securities will be received on deposit unless in negotiable form, and bonds must carry all unpaid coupons.

Pursuant to the arrangement with a syndicate hereinafter stated:

As consideration for shares of the new company as hereinafter indicated, depositors of preferred stock must also pay $10 per share for new preferred and common stock, and depositors of common stock must pay $15 per share for new common stock.

The payments by depositors of such common and preferred stock must be made at the offices of Messrs. J. P. Morgan & Co., New York, or Messrs. Drexel & Co., Philadelphia, or of the Deutsche Bank, Berlin and London, at the option of each depositing stockholder, in not less than three installments, at least thirty days apart, when and as called for by advertisement in each instance at least twice a week for two weeks in two of the daily papers of general circulation published in the cities of New York, Philadelphia, London, and Berlin, respectively.

All payments must be receipted for by one of the depositaries on the certificates of deposit.

Failure to pay any installment when and as payable will subject the deposited stock and all rights on account of any prior payments to forfeiture, as hereinafter provided.

Holders of certificates of the Mercantile Trust Company of New York for general second, general third, and consolidated mortgage bonds, deposited under the existing bondholders' agreement of February 19, 1894, will be entitled to the benefits of this plan without the issue of new receipts or certificates, provided, that if hereafter required by the managers and within the time limited therefor, such existing certificates be produced to one of the depositaries and stamped as assenting to this plan.

All holders of general second, general third, and consolidated mortgage bonds who have not already deposited their bonds with the Mercantile Trust Company of New York under the existing bondholders' agreement, shall, by delivery of their bonds to the depositaries, be deemed to deposit their bonds under said bondholders' agreement, and for the bonds deposited, will receive certificates of said trust company issued under that agreement, duly stamped by one of the depositaries as assenting to this plan.

The depositaries will issue negotiable receipts for all other securities deposited with them.

The holders of receipts heretofore issued by the New York 7087
Security and Trust Company of New York for general second mortgage bonds, and by the New York Guaranty and Indemnity Company for general third mortgage bonds, must surrender the same to one of the depositaries and must obtain suitable new certificates hereunder in exchange therefor, in order to entitle them to any benefit of this plan. Bonds represented by such receipts not actually delivered to the depositaries will not be entitled to participation herein.

NEW RAILROAD COMPANY. 7088

At the discretion of the managers, the various properties will be sold under one or more of the several mortgages in default, or otherwise dealt with, and a successor company will be organized.

Pending their use for reorganization purposes, the securities deposited hereunder will be delivered by the depositaries to one or more trust companies, to be held by them respectively subject to the order and control of the managers.

All securities deposited under the plan are to be kept alive so long as deemed necessary for the purpose of reorganization. 7089

NEW STOCKS AND BONDS.

The new company is to authorize the following securities:

First. Prior lien one hundred-year 4 per cent gold bonds for $130,000,000.[a]

These bonds are to be secured by a mortgage upon the main line, branches, terminals, land grant, equipment, and other property, embraced in the reorganization as carried out, and also upon all other property thereafter acquired by the use of any of the bonds to be issued under both the new mortgages. 7090

The present general first mortgage covers only the main line, land grant, and the equipment so far as owned by the company.

[a] Bonds will be issued in the following denominations: Coupon bonds of $500 and $1,000, with privilege of conversion into registered bonds of $1,000 and $10,000.

All interest will be payable quarterly, and both principal and interest will be payable in United States gold coin of the present standard of weight and fineness, without deduction for any taxes which the railroad company may be required to pay or retain therefrom.

7091 The proceeds of the lands applicable to the new bonds after the retirement of the general first mortgage bonds (as provided below) will be applied, one-half, but not in any one year exceeding $500,000, to the purchase of the prior lien 4 per cent bonds at not exceeding 110 per cent, and their cancellation, and the remainder, under carefully guarded restrictions in the mortgage will be used for betterments and additions to the property pledged as security for the bonds.

Whenever these bonds can not be purchased at the maximum price, the unapplied land proceeds for that year will be used to 7092 purchase the general lien 3 per cent bonds at not exceeding 100 per cent and their cancellation.

These bonds are to be appropriated approximately as follows:

To retire an equal amount of general first mortgage bonds..	$41,879,000
To provide for the conversion and, so far as necessary, for the sinking fund of the general first mortgage bonds (any amount not so used to be added to the reserve for new construction, etc.)	14,657,650
For the payment of receivers' certificates and equipment trust, and the conversion of the collateral trust notes and general second mortgage bonds	40,040,350
7093 Total present issue under the plan	96,577,000
Reserved to provide at their maturity for an equal amount of bonds of the St. Paul and Northern Pacific Railroad Company	8,423,000
Estimated amount to be reserved for new construction, betterments, equipment, etc., under carefully guarded restrictions in the mortgage, and to the extent of not exceeding $1,500,000, per annum	25,000,000
Total authorized issue	130,000,000

Second. General lien 150 year 3 per cent gold bonds,[a] limited in amount to $60,000,000, in addition to a reserve for the 7094 100 year 4 per cent prior lien mortgage of $130,000,000.

These bonds are to be secured by a mortgage second in lien to the prior lien mortgage, and covering the same property.

[a] Bonds will be issued in the following denominations: Coupon bonds of $500 and $1,000, with privilege of conversion into registered bonds of $1,000 and $10,000.

All interest will be payable quarterly, and both principal and interest will be payable in United States gold coin of the present standard of weight and fineness, without deduction for any taxes which the railroad company may be required to pay or retain therefrom.

They are to be appropriated approximately as follows: 7095

For the conversion of the general third mortgage bonds, dividend certificates, and the consolidated mortgage and branch line bonds under the plan	$56,000,000
Estimated amount to be reserved under carefully guarded restrictions in the mortgage, for new construction, betterments, equipment, etc	4,000,000
Total issue in excess of prior lien bonds	60,000,000
Reserved to provide for the prior lien bonds at their maturity in 100 years	130,000,000
Maximum amount of both mortgages	$190,000,000

Third. Preferred stock, 4 per cent noncumulative, limited in amount, under this plan, to not exceeding $75,000,000, which amount can be increased only with the consent of the preferred and common stockholders, as hereinafter set forth. All the preferred stock will be in shares of $100 each, and will be registered and transferable, at the option of the holder, either in New York or at the Deutsche Bank, Berlin. Dividends upon stock registered in Berlin may be collected there at the rate of 4.20 marks per dollar.

Each share of this preferred stock will be entitled to non- 7097 cumulative dividends to the extent of four per cent per annum, payable quarterly out of surplus net earnings in each fiscal year before any dividends for such year shall be paid on the common stock, and without deduction for any United States, State, or municipal taxes that the railroad company may at any time be required to pay or retain therefrom.

In any fiscal year in which four per cent dividends shall have been declared on both preferred and common stock, all shares, whether preferred or common, shall participate equally in any further dividends for such year. 7098

Provision will be made that after the termination of the voting trust hereinafter provided for, the preferred stock is to have the right to elect a majority of the board of directors of the new company whenever for two successive quarterly periods the full and regular quarterly dividends upon the preferred stock, at the rate of four per cent per annum are not paid in cash.

The right will be reserved by the new company to retire this stock, in whole or in part, at par, from time to time, upon any first day of January during the next twenty years.

7099 The preferred stock will be appropriated approximately as follows:

For conversion and adjustment of various main line and branch line mortgage bonds and the defaulted interest thereon, and other purposes, as provided in the plan	$72,500,000
Estimated amount which may be used for reorganization purposes or may be available as a treasury asset of the new company	2,500,000
	$75,000,000

Fourth. Common stock to the amount of not exceeding 7100 $80,000,000, in shares of $100 each.

This stock will be appropriated approximately as follows:

For purposes of reorganization, as provided in the plan	$77,500,000
Estimated amount which may be used for reorganization purposes or may be available as a treasury asset of the new company	2,500,000
	$80,000,000

VOTING TRUST.

In furtherance of this independent reorganization and the administration of the property and of the securities, both classes 7101 of stock of the new company (except such number of shares as may be disposed of to qualify directors) are to be vested in the following five voting trustees: J. Pierpont Morgan, Georg Siemens, August Belmont, Johnston Livingston, and Charles Lanier.

In the event of the death of any person designated as a voting trustee, prior to the creation of the voting trust, the vacancy shall be filled as provided in the reorganization agreement hereunto annexed, and which is comprised in and forms part of this 7102 plan, with the same force and effect as though herein set forth at length. The stock shall be held by the voting trustees and their successors, jointly (under a trust agreement prescribing the powers and duties to be exercised by them, or by a majority of them, and the method of filling vacancies), for five years, although the voting trustees, in their discretion, may deliver the stock at any earlier date. Until delivery of stock is made by the voting trustees, they shall issue stock trust certificates entitling the registered holders to receive, at the time therein provided, stock certificates for the number of shares therein stated, and in the meanwhile to receive payments equal to the dividends collected by the voting trustees upon a like number of shares, 7103 which shares, however, with the voting power thereon, shall be vested in the voting trustees until the stock shall become deliverable, as provided in such trust agreement and certificates of the voting trustees.

RESTRICTIONS AS TO ADDITIONAL MORTGAGE DEBT AND PREFERRED STOCK.

Provision is to be made that no additional mortgage shall be put upon the property to be acquired hereunder, nor the amount of the preferred stock authorized under this plan be increased, 7104 except, in each instance, after obtaining the consent of the holders of a majority of the whole amount of the preferred stock, given at a meeting of the stockholders called for that purpose, and the consent of the holders of a majority of such part of the common stock as shall be represented at such meeting, the holders of each class of stock voting separately. During the existence of the voting trust the consent of holders of like amounts of the respective classes of beneficial certificates shall also be necessary for the purposes indicated. 7105

APPLICATION OF SECURITIES.

The following details show the disposition to be made under the plan of the securities of the new company:

As a consideration for the property and securities to be conveyed or delivered to the new company, or which, pursuant to the plan, the new company shall acquire, it is contemplated that the new company shall deliver the new bonds and stock, 7109 excepting the new bonds to be reserved to take up such of the existing securities as are not disturbed, and such final amounts as shall be reserved for the future use of the new company.

The requisite deliveries of the new securities to depositors and subscribers under the plan will thus be provided for.

GENERAL FIRST-MORTGAGE BONDS.

Privilege of conversion.

The present general first-mortgage bonds mature in 1921, but 7110 are redeemable by compulsory drawings at any time at 110 per cent from the proceeds of land sales or the fixed annual contribution by the company to the sinking fund.

These compulsory redemptions in the past have been a disturbing factor in all calculations for investment purposes, and the inauguration of a new and vigorous policy for the sale of the lands may be expected from this time forward greatly to increase the amount of such redemptions.

In some years these redemptions have required large contributions from the operating department, to the extent even of the entire amount of the sinking fund, a sum which would pro- 7111

vide for the annual interest on about $19,000,000 of prior-lien bonds as now proposed. It is manifestly to the benefit of the holders of general first-mortgage bonds to secure an investment of longer continuance, and it is also to the benefit of all subsequent securities to diminish this unnecessarily large burden of annual fixed charge.

To relieve the bondholders from these calls for redemption, which prevent their bonds from reaching the high price they would otherwise command, and to relieve the company from the burden of the sinking-fund requirements and permit the 7112 use of a portion of the proceeds of land sales for the benefit of the property,

Holders of the general first-mortgage bonds are now offered the privilege of converting or exchanging their bonds for the new prior lien 100-year 4 per cent gold bonds at the rate of $1,000 old bonds (coupon or registered) for $1,350 of new bonds.

To avail of this offer, holders must deposit their bonds as provided on page 7 hereof.

Bonds deposited for conversion under this privilege will be 7113 entitled to receive on April 1st next a cash payment of $30 per $1,000 bond so deposited in lieu of the six months' interest that would mature July 1 next on such bond. The first coupon on the prior-lien bonds offered in exchange for general first-mortgage bonds will be payable October 1 next, and in case of any delay in the reorganization, payments equal to the amount of such new coupons will be made on that date and quarterly thereafter until the new bonds are delivered. These payments will, in the absence of other provision, be made by the syndicate, which will reimburse itself out of the present general first- 7114 mortgage coupons as collected.

The right is expressly reserved to modify these terms or to terminate the privilege at any time and without notice.

The old bonds now outstanding are at the rate of about $20,466 per mile. The prior-lien bonds, including those reserved for the St. Paul and Northern Pacific bonds (but not including those to be reserved for new construction, etc.), will, on the basis of 4,706 miles, amount to about $22,310 per mile, 7115 and will cover all the equipment and the branches and terminals as proposed under the plan.

It is not sought in any way to enforce a conversion of the present general first-mortgage bonds, and this offer is made solely upon the belief that on the terms proposed such conversion, while advantageous to the company, is also manifestly to the advantage of bondholders so converting.

The fixed charges for interest and sinking funds on the present general first and divisional mortgage bonds are at the rate of $1,618 per mile per annum, while it is estimated that they 7116 will amount to only $929 per mile per annum on the prior lien bonds.

The advantage is obvious of a mortgage resting upon a complete and entire system, including main line and all branches brought into the new company, together with terminals, land grant and equipment, and having over $200,000,000 of bond and share capital behind it, securing a gold bond running for one hundred years, as compared with a bond at all times liable to compulsory retirement, and secured by only part of the system.

NORTHWEST EQUIPMENT COMPANY.

The shares deposited under the plan to be purchased at par flat as of June 1, 1896, payable with interest from that date at 6 per cent per annum, at any time, in the discretion of the managers, on or before completion of reorganization.

COLLATERAL TRUST NOTES.

Those deposited under the plan to receive—

3 per cent in cash May 1, 1896, and 4 per cent in cash
7118 January 1, 1897.

100 per cent in prior lien 4 per cent bonds.

20 per cent in preferred stock trust certificates.

GENERAL SECOND MORTGAGE BONDS.

Those deposited under the plan to receive—

4 per cent in cash within sixty days after the plan has been declared operative.

118½ per cent in prior lien 4 per cent bonds.

50 per cent in preferred stock trust certificates.

GENERAL THIRD MORTGAGE BONDS. 7119

Those deposited under the plan to receive—

3 per cent in cash within sixty days after the plan has been declared operative.

118½ per cent in general lien 3 per cent bonds.

50 per cent in preferred stock trust certificates.

DIVIDEND CERTIFICATES.

Those deposited under the plan to receive—

3 per cent in cash within sixty days after the plan has been declared operative. 7120

118 per cent in general lien 3 per cent bonds.

50 per cent in preferred stock trust certificates.

CONSOLIDATED MORTGAGE BONDS.

Those deposited under the plan to receive—

1½ per cent in cash within sixty days after the plan has been declared operative.

66½ per cent in general lien 3 per cent bonds.

62½ per cent in preferred stock trust certificates.

Except as collected out of the coupons, the managers will 7121 have a lien upon deposited securities for cash advanced as above provided, after the plan shall have been declared operative.

Interest on all new bonds to be delivered in exchange for old securities will, unless otherwise stated, accrue from January 1, 1897, and will be payable on or before completion of reorganization.

Equitable cash settlements will be made for fractional amounts of new bonds and stocks accruing to depositors.

BRANCH ROAD BONDS. 7122

Holders of the bonds issued by the following companies are requested to communicate with Messrs. J. P. Morgan & Co., New York, or with the Deutsche Bank, Berlin, giving the amount of their holdings, and stating whether held in bonds or certificates of deposit:

Central Washington Railroad Company.

Cœur d'Alene Railway and Navigation Company.

7123 Duluth and Manitoba Railroad Company (Minnesota division).
Duluth and Manitoba Railroad Company (Dakota division).
Helena and Red Mountain Railroad Company.
James River Valley Railroad Company.
Northern Pacific and Montana Railroad Company.
Northern Pacific and Manitoba Railway Company terminal bonds.
Seattle, Lake Shore and Eastern Railroad Company.
7124 Spokane and Palouse Railway Company.

None of these branch roads (Seattle, Lake Shore and Eastern alone excepted) owns any considerable amount of equipment; all require more or less expenditure for the restoration of their track, roadbed, stations, etc., to proper condition; all are deficient in their rights of way; some have general traffic all the year, while others are dependent mainly upon the special business of a few months annually; and some earn varying rates of interest upon their cost.

In order to deal equitably with the holders of these branch 7125 bonds, it is deemed necessary to consider each case separately, and upon its own individual merits.

After hearing from a large proportion of each class of these bondholders steps will be taken to arrive at some fair basis of adjustment, for which general lien 3 per cent bonds and new preferred stock trust certificates have been reserved under this plan.

PREFERRED STOCK.

Upon completion of the reorganization, the reorganization
7126 managers, in behalf of the syndicate, will deliver to each depositor of one share ($100) of preferred stock—

$50 in new preferred stock trust certificates and 50 in new common stock trust certificates, in consideration of his payment therefor of $10 per share, as provided on page 7 of this plan.

COMMON STOCK.

Upon completion of the reorganization the reorganization managers, in behalf of the syndicate, will deliver to the depositor of each share ($100) of old common stock one share ($100) of new common stock trust certificate, in consideration of his payment therefor of $15 per share, as provided on page 7 of this plan. 7127

In addition to the payment of all defaulted interest to January 1, 1897, in cash and new mortgage bonds, the holders of the three main line mortgage bonds in default will receive a considerable increase of principal with the following annual income:

Old securities.	Fixed interest.				Income contingent upon dividends on new 4% preferred stock.		Total income.		7128

The compensation to be paid to Messrs. J. P. Morgan & Co. and the Deutsche Bank for their respective services as managers and as depositaries of securities has been fixed at one-quarter (¼%) of one per cent upon the par value of the securities deposited under the plan and of the new securities issued in exchange therefor, but not, in any event, to exceed $1,000,000 in all for such compensation to both parties.

7131 SYNDICATE.

A syndicate has been formed by Messrs. J. P. Morgan & Co., of New York, and the Deutsche Bank, of Berlin, to the subscribed amount of $45,000,000, to provide the amounts of cash estimated as necessary (1) to carry out the terms of the plan of reorganization, and (2) to furnish the new company with cash working capital and with a sum estimated at $5,000,000 for early use in betterment and enlargement of its property.

FEBRUARY 10, 1896.

JOHN SCOTT, Comptroller.

REORGANIZATION AGREEMENT, MARCH 16TH, 1896. 7147

An agreement made this 16th day of March, 1896, between Edward D. Adams, John C. Bullitt, Louis Fitzgerald, Charles H. Godfrey, John D. Probst, James Stillman, Ernst Thalmann (hereinafter called the Reorganization Committee), parties of the first part;

The Mercantile Trust Company, party of the second part;

J. P. Morgan & Co. (a copartnership), parties of the third part (hereinafter called the Managers);

Holders of mortgage bonds of the Northern Pacific Railroad 7148 Company (hereinafter called the Railroad Company), holders of certificates of the Mercantile Trust Company for general second, general third, and consolidated mortgage bonds, holders of collateral trust notes and dividend certificates of the railroad company, and the mortgage bonds of various branch railroads hitherto known as parts of the Northern Pacific Railroad System, and holders of the preferred and common stock of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, who shall become parties to this agreement, of the fourth part (hereinafter called Depositors);

The Deutsche Bank, of Berlin, in evidence of its active support of the reorganization and of its acceptance of appointment as depositary thereunder, party of the fifth part; and

August Belmont, Brayton Ives, George R. Sheldon, and Charlemagne Tower, jr., a committee in behalf of various interests in the Northern Pacific Railroad Company (hereinafter called the Protective Committee), in evidence of their active support of the reorganization thereof according to the plan provided herein, as parties of the sixth part;

Whereas by an agreement dated February 19, 1894, known 7150 as the Bondholders' Agreement, the parties of the first part were, by certain holders of the general second, general third, and consolidated mortgage bonds of the railroad company, appointed a committee for the reorganization of said company; and

Whereas the plan referred to in this agreement has been proposed by the reorganization committee for the reorganization of the railroad company;

7151 Now, therefore, it mutually is agreed by and between the respective parties hereto as follows:

First. A printed copy of this agreement, signed by a majority of the members of the reorganization committee and of the protective commitee, and by the parties of the second and third parts hereto, and by or for the party of the fifth part, shall be lodged with J. P. Morgan & Co., New York, and a duplicate, signed in like manner, shall be lodged with the Deutsche Bank, of Berlin. Each of said copies shall be taken as a complete and original instrument, but both shall constitute but one agreement.

7152 The foregoing plan is, and shall be, taken to be a part of this agreement, with the same effect as though each and every provision thereof had been embodied herein, and said plan and this agreement shall be read as parts of one and the same paper; but no estimate, statement, explanation or suggestion contained in the said plan or this agreement, or in any circular issued, or which may hereafter be issued, by the depositaries or by the committee or by the managers, is intended, or is to be accepted, as a representation or warranty, or as a condition of deposit or assent under the plan and this agreement, and no defect or error

7153 shall release any deposit under this plan and agreement, or affect or release any assent thereto, except by written consent of the managers.

Holders of the bonds, collateral trust notes, dividend certificates, and of the preferred and common stock of the railroad company, and of the stock of the Northwest Equipment Company and of the mortgage bonds of various branch railroads hitherto known as parts of the Northern Pacific Railroad system, or any of them, may become parties to this plan and agreement by depositing their securities with the depositaries upon the 7154 terms and conditions specified in the plan and this agreement, or hereafter defined, and within the periods which shall be fixed or limited by the managers.

Such holders must in all cases deposit the certificates for their stock, or their bonds, or other securities, with such transfers, assignments, and powers of attorney as may be required by the managers in order to vest in them, and to enable them to transfer, the complete and absolute title to such stocks or bonds or other securities; and the depositors agree respectively at any time, on demand of the managers, to execute any and all other 7155 transfers, assignments, or writings required for vesting the complete ownership of the bonds and stock deposited hereunder in the managers, or their nominees.

All depositors of securities (excepting assenting certificate holders as hereinafter designated) shall receive certificates of deposit in form to be prescribed by the managers, specifying the respective bonds or stocks deposited, and the holders of such certificates of deposit shall be entitled (subject to any provisions contained in such certificates) to the rights and benefits, and only to the rights and benefits, specified in the plan and 7156 this agreement, as accruing to the holders of the bonds or stocks of the class represented by such certificates respectively, or granted by the managers, pursuant to the powers conferred upon them; and thereafter the holder of any such certificate, or of any certificate issued in lieu thereof or in exchange therefor, shall be subject to the plan and this agreement and entitled to have and exercise the rights of the original depositor under the certificate issued to him in respect of the securities therein mentioned.

The plan and this agreement prepared and adopted by the 7157 reorganization committee in exercise of the power, and in performance of the duty imposed upon said reorganization committee under the said bondholders' agreement of February 19, 1894, is in the form and contains the terms, powers, and conditions which to the committee seem equitable and fair; and, in accordance with the provisions of said bondholders' agreement, are now lodged at New York with the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company and The Mercantile Trust Company, at Berlin with the Deutsche Bank, and at London with the branch of the Deutsche Bank, which has been appointed by said reorganiza- 7158 tion committee as agent therefor, and also with said reorganization committee at its office, No. 15 Broad street, in the city of New York, at each of which places copies are left for distribution to bondholders; and a brief publication of the fact of the adoption and filing of such plan of reorganization will be made for at least two weeks in one or more daily newspapers published in the cities of New York, London, and Berlin, and in the absence of express dissent in writing, filed within twenty days after the expiration of such publication (in compliance with the provisions of the second article of said bondholders' agreement), the assent to and ratification of the plan and this agreement shall be conclusively and finally assumed, conferred, and given by each and every certificate holder not so expressly dissenting herefrom. But, nevertheless, the managers, at their option, at any time, may by notice published in the manner hereinafter provided in article twelfth hereof, exclude from the operation of the plan and this agreement, and from any and all interest thereunder, any and all bonds represented by any such certificate issued under such bondholders' agreement, unless within the time and in the manner required in such public notice such certificate shall have been submitted to one of the depositaries hereunder for stamping, and by one of such depositaries shall have been stamped as expressly assenting to the plan and this agreement.

Holders of general second, general third, and consolidated mortgage bonds not already deposited under the bondholders' agreement of February 19, 1894, shall, by the delivery of their bonds to the depositaries, be deemed to have deposited their bonds under said bondholders' agreement, and for the bonds deposited will receive certificates of the Mercantile Trust Company of New York, issued under that agreement, which may be stamped by one of the depositaries as assenting to the plan and this agreement.

All bonds represented by any such certificate, the holder of which shall have acquiesced as above provided, unless stamping of such certificates shall be required by the managers, as above provided, and all bonds represented by any certificate stamped as aforesaid, shall be subject to, and included within, the provisions of this plan and agreement as fully and irrevocably as though directly deposited hereunder, and the managers shall irrevocably possess and from time to time may exercise all rights of the holders of bonds represented by such certificates, subject to the terms thereof, including the right to abandon or terminate the said former agreement and all further proceedings thereunder.

All such certificates so acquiescing or so stamped are herein designated "Assenting Certificates," and the holders thereof are designated "Assenting Certificate Holders."

Such certificates of deposit and such assenting certificates and the interests represented thereby shall be transferable only sub- 7163

ject to the terms and conditions of the plan and this agreement, and in such manner as the managers shall approve; and upon such transfer, all rights of the deposit or in respect of the deposited bonds or stock represented by such certificates, together with all installments paid by the depositors of such stock, or their transferees, and all rights under the certificates of deposit or assenting certificates transferred, shall pass to the transferee, and the transferees and holders of such certificates of deposit or of such assenting certificate shall for all purposes be substituted in place of the prior holders, subject to this 7164 agreement. All such transferees, as well as the original holders of certificates of deposit or of assenting certificates, shall be embraced under the term "Depositors," whenever used herein. Each certificate of deposit or assenting certificate may be treated by the reorganization committee, by the managers, and by the depositaries as a negotiable instrument, and the holder for the time being may be deemed to be the absolute owner thereof, and of all rights of the original depositor of the bond or stock in respect of which the same was issued, and neither the depositaries nor the reorganization committee nor the managers shall 7165 be affected by any notice to the contrary. By accepting any such certificate, or by presenting any Mercantile Trust Company certificate to be stamped hereunder, every recipient or holder thereof shall thereby become party to the plan and this agreement with the same force and effect as though an actual subscriber hereto. The term depositor, as well as the term assenting certificate holder, whenever used herein, is intended, and shall be construed, to include not only persons acting in their own right, but also trustees, guardians, committees, agents, and all persons acting in a representative or fiduciary capacity, 7166 and those represented by or claiming under them, and partnerships, associations, joint-stock companies, and corporations. No rights hereunder shall accrue in respect of any securities hereinbefore mentioned unless, nor until, the same shall have been subjected to the control of the managers and to the operation of the plan and this agreement as herein provided.

The depositaries shall receive the deposited stocks and bonds, and shall deliver the same to one or more trust companies in the city of New York, and the same shall be held by them, respectively, subject to the order and control of the managers.

The managers may, in their discretion, fix or limit the period or periods within which holders of bonds or stock, or other securities, or any class thereof, may deposit their securities, and within which they or holders of Mercantile Trust Company certificates may become parties to the plan and this agreement, and the periods within which the installments of cash payable by depositing holders of preferred and common stock must be paid, and, in their discretion, either generally or in special instances, may extend or renew the period or periods so fixed or limited, on such terms and conditions as they may see fit.

Holders of securities not deposited, or of the Mercantile Trust Company certificates, not becoming parties hereto, in the manner herein provided, by stamping, if so required, within the periods respectively fixed or limited therefor, will not be entitled to deposit the same or to become parties to this agreement, or to share in the benefits thereof, and shall acquire no rights thereunder, except upon obtaining the express consent of the managers, who may withhold or give such consent, in their absolute discretion, and such terms and conditions as they may see fit.

The several installments of cash, payable by depositing stockholders as provided in the plan and this agreement, must be paid to the respective depositaries, and must be receipted for by such depositaries on the respective certificates of deposit issued for such stock. The deposititing stockholders agree that all such installments of cash may be used, at any time, by the managers, for any of the purposes of the plan and this agreement. Depositors of stock and holders of certificates of deposit for deposited stock respectively agree that prompt payment of the several installments of cash payable by them, respectively, on the terms of the plan and this agreement is an essential condition to their acquisition of new stock by purchase under the plan and this agreement, and that any depositor or any holder of a certificate of deposit for stock who shall fail to make prompt payment of any installment of cash payable as provided in the plan within the periods fixed or limited by the managers for such payment, shall forthwith and without further or other notice or action cease to have any rights, or to be entitled to any benefits hereunder, and in every such case the deposited stock and any cash paid as above provided, prior to the date of 7171 such default, shall vest in and belong to the managers, and may be used for any of the requirements of carrying out the plan and this agreement, and that no such defaulting depositor or certificate holder shall be entitled to the return or repayment thereof, or to have any further interest or rights in respect thereof. The managers, however, in their discretion, may waive any such default and accept payment of overdue installments due from any depositor at any time before final settlement of accounts with the syndicate.

The managers may, in their discretion, for the purpose of 7172 carrying out the plan and this agreement, call in for deposit any of the undisturbed main-line bonds mentioned in the plan, and may cause any mortgage securing the same to be foreclosed, and may cause other similar bonds having similar security, or the prior-lien bonds reserved therefor under the plan, to be issued in exchange for such bonds.

Second. The depositors and assenting certificate holders hereby irrevocably request the managers to endeavor to carry into practical operation the plan and this agreement, in its entirety or in part, to such extent and in such manner and with such addi- 7173 tions, exceptions, and modifications as the managers shall deem to be for the best interests of the depositors and assenting certificate holders, or of the properties finally embraced in the reorganization. Each and every depositor and assenting certificate holder, for himself and not for any other, does hereby sell, assign, transfer, and set over to the managers as copartners, and to the survivor and survivors of them, and to their successors, each and every bond, share of stock, security, or obligation, or evidence thereof deposited hereunder, or represented by an assenting certificate, and every depositor and assenting certifi- 7174 cate holder hereby agrees that the managers shall be, and they are hereby, vested with all the rights and powers of owners of the stock, bonds, securities, and obligations deposited hereunder, or represented by such assenting certificates, including the right to transfer the same into their own name, as a copartnership and as managers, or into the name of any other person or persons whom they may select; and (without limiting the foregoing provision) it is hereby declared that the managers shall be fully authorized to vote thereon at any meeting of stockholders or bondholders or creditors; to use every such stock, bond, receipt security, or obligation as fully and to the same extent as the owner or holder thereof; to declare due the principal of any bond or other obligation deposited hereunder, and to revoke any such declaration whenever made; to call or attend, and, either in person or by proxy, to vote at any and all meetings of stockholders or bondholders or creditors of any corporation however convened; to terminate or to seek to dissolve or modify any trust, contract, or lease, in whole or in part; to apply for the determination of the validity thereof, or for the removal of any trustees or the substitution of other trustees, or to take any other steps in respect of any trust, contract, or lease, or under any provision thereof; to purchase at any time or times, at such prices as they shall deem proper, or to pay, compromise, or settle with the holders of any coupons, notes, or other indebtedness or obligations of any of the railroad companies, or any receiver's certificates or obligations issued, or which may be issued or incurred by the receivers thereof, and to apply for that purpose any moneys received from the sale of trust certificates for stock in the new company, or which may otherwise be received or raised by the reorganization committee or by them; to borrow money for any of the purposes of this agreement, and to charge or pledge any deposited securities, property purchased, or new securities to be issued, for the payment of any moneys borrowed; to give all bonds of indemnity or other bonds, and to charge therewith the securities deposited hereunder, or any part thereof; to institute or to become parties to any legal proceeding; to apply for receivers, or for the removal of receivers and the substitution of other receivers, or for the termination of any receivership and the delivery of any property to its owners; to settle any litigation now or at any time existing or threatened, in whole or in part, with plenary power to enter into arrangements for decrees, or for facilitating or hastening the course of litigation, or in any way to promote the consummation of the plan; to do whatever, in the judgment of the managers, may be necessary to promote or to procure the sale as an entirety, or the joint or separate sales of any lands, grants of lands, property, or franchise herein concerned, wherever situated; to adjourn any sale of any property or franchise, or of any portion or lot thereof, at discretion; to bid, or to refrain from bidding, at any sale, either public or private, either in separate lots or as a whole, for 7179

any property or franchises, or any part thereof, whether or not owned, controlled, or covered by any deposited security, or by the bonds represented by any assenting certificate, including or excluding any particular rolling stock, or other property, real or personal, and at, before, or after any sale, to arrange and agree for the resale of any portion of the property which they may decide to sell rather than to retain; to hold any property or franchises purchased by them, either in their name or in the name of persons or corporations by them chosen for the purposes of this agreement, and to apply any security embraced 7180 hereunder in satisfaction of any bid, or toward obtaining funds for the satisfaction thereof; and the term property and franchise shall include any and all railroads, railroad and other transportation lines, branches, leaseholds, lands, rights in lands, mining rights, stocks, or other interests in corporations in which the railroad company has any interest of any kind whatever, direct or indirect. The amount to be bid or paid by the managers for any property or franchises shall be absolutely discretionary with them; and in case of the sale to others of any property or franchises, the managers may receive out of the proceeds of such 7181 sale, or otherwise, any dividend in any form accruing on any securities held by them.

Third. The managers may procure the organization of one or more new companies, or they may adopt or use any existing or future companies, and they may cause to be made such consolidations, leases, sales, or other arrangements, and may make or cause to be made such conveyances or transfers of any properties or securities acquired by them, and may take such other proceedings as they may deem proper for the purpose of creating the new securities provided for in this plan and agreement, 7182 and for carrying out all or any of the provisions thereof. Said managers shall further be authorized to receive and dispose of, in accordance with any of the provisions of this plan and agreement, the new securities to be created, and said managers may vote upon all the stock of such new corporation for all purposes in their judgment necessary to carry out the plan, until the same shall be transferred to the voting trustees, or to the depositors and assenting security holders, who shall be entitled to receive the same.

Fourth. The managers may construe the plan and this agreement; and their construction thereof or action thereunder, in good faith, shall be final and conclusive. They may supply any defect or omission, or reconcile any inconsistency in such manner and to such extent as shall be necessary to carry out the same properly and effectively, and they shall be the sole judge of such necessity. They shall be the sole and final judge as to when and whether the assent of enough parties interested in the railroad company shall have been obtained to warrant them in carrying the same, or any part, into effect, and they shall have power, whenever they shall deem proper, to abandon or to alter, modify, or depart from the plan of reorganization, or any part thereof. They may at any time or times, after any such partial abandonment, restore to the plan any abandoned part or parts thereof, and may seek to carry the same into effect as fully as if such part or parts had not been abandoned. They may also attempt to carry the plan into effect rather than abandon or modify the same, even though it be manifest that, as carried out, the plan must depart from the original plan, or from some part thereof. But in case of any intentional change or modification or departure from the plan which, in their judgment, shall materially affect any of the several classes of depositors, or their mutual relations, a statement of such proposed change, modification, or departure shall be filed with the depositaries, and notice of the fact of such filing shall be given as hereafter provided in article twelfth; and within two weeks after final publication all holders of the outstanding certificates for such particular class or classes of securities affected thereby may surrender their respective certificates therefor and withdraw securities of such particular class or classes, or the proceeds thereof, or substitutes therefor then under the control of the managers, to the amount indicated in such certificates, and all assenting certificate holders may require cancellation of their assent and release herefrom of the securities represented by their assenting certificates: Provided, however, That in every case of withdrawal or cancellation the certificate holders, or the assenting certificate holders, shall respectively make payment of their shares of the expenses of the reorganization committee and of the managers, as apportioned by the latter. Every depositor of securities not so surrendering and withdrawing, and every assenting certificate holder not withdrawing his assent, within such two weeks after 7187

final publication, shall be deemed to have assented to the proposed changes or modifications, and whether or not otherwise objecting, shall be bound thereby as fully and effectively as if he had actually assented thereto. Any changes or modifications finally made by the managers shall be part of the plan and this agreement, and all provisions and references concerning the plan shall apply to the plan so changed or modified. In case the managers shall finally abandon the entire plan, the stocks and bonds deposited hereunder, or their proceeds, or any stocks, bonds, securities, or claims or representatives thereof, then under 7188
the control of the managers, shall be delivered to the several depositors in amounts representing their respective interests, upon surrender of their respective certificates and payment of such actual expenses as shall have been incurred by the reorganization committee and managers, which latter shall have power to determine and to apportion upon the several classes of securities deposited hereunder the share of expense to be borne by each security. In case of such abandonment, in like manner, and upon like payment of expenses, any assent of the assenting certificate holders shall be released by the managers, and until 7189 so released the general second, general third, and consolidated mortgage bonds represented by the assenting certificates shall be subject to their ratable share of such expense.

In any such case, any moneys paid by the depositing stockholders, or any coupons, receiver's certificates, or other obligations, claims, or property acquired therewith, or the proceeds thereof, when received, remaining after deducting therefrom the share of the expenses incurred by the managers under this agreement apportioned upon such depositing stockholders, shall be equitably distributed or adjusted among the respective holders 7190 of certificates of deposit therefor; but the depositing stockholders, or holders of such certificates of deposit, shall have no claim for the repayment of any such moneys, except to the extent of their ratable shares of such moneys, or their proceeds, remaining in the hands of the managers after payment of such expenses.

In every such case of withdrawal, any cash paid or advanced, as provided in the plan, to depositors of bonds, notes, or dividend certificates, or certificates of deposit therefor, or assenting

7191 certificates, and any interest paid or advanced to holders of certificates of deposit or assenting certificates in respect of deposited bonds, notes, or dividend certificates represented by such certificates of deposit or assenting certificates, or in respect of the new bonds to be issued in exchange therefor under the plan, must be repaid by the holders of such certificates before the deposited bonds, notes, or dividend certificates represented by such certificates of deposit or assenting certificates, shall be surrendered in exchange therefor; but any interest collected by the managers on deposited securities will in such case of withdrawal 7192 be accounted for by the managers to the holders of the certificates of deposit for such securities or of assenting certificates.

Fifth. The managers may proceed under the plan and this agreement, or any part thereof, with or without foreclosure, and in case of foreclosure may exercise any power, either before or after foreclosure sale; and in every case all the provisions of the plan and this agreement shall equally apply to and in respect of any physical properties embraced under the reorganization, and to and in respect of any securities representing any such property, it being intended that for all purposes thereunder any such 7193 property, and any security representing such property, may be treated or accepted by the managers as substantially identical. In case any separate plan shall, in the opinion of the managers, become necessary or expedient to effect the reorganization of any subordinate or other company, the managers may promote and participate in any such reorganization, and may deposit thereunder any secureties thereby affected.

In case of any claim, lien, or obligation not herein fully provided for and affecting the railroad company or any property or franchises thereof, the managers may, from time to time (sub-7194 ject, however, to article sixth hereof), make such compromise in respect thereto or such provision therefor as they may deem suitable, using therefor any securities not expressly required for settlement with depositors, or not expressly reserved for liens or obligations specified in the plan, but the total amount of new securities to be created, as set forth in the plan, shall not be thereby increased.

Any action contemplated in the plan and this agreement to be performed on or after completion and reorganization, may be taken by the managers at any time when they shall deem the 7195 reorganization advanced sufficiently to justify such course, and the managers, as they may deem necessary, may defer the performance of any provision of the plan and this agreement, or may commit such performance to the new company.

They may also in their discretion set apart and hold in trust, or place in trust with any trust company, any part of the new securities to be issued and cash which may be received from sales of new securities, or otherwise, as they may deem judicious for the purpose of securing the application thereof for any of the purposes of the plan and this agreement. 7196

Sixth. The managers may, from time to time, make contracts with any person, syndicate, or corporation for the purpose of carrying this agreement into effect, and by loan, guaranty, or by the sale of the new securities to be created, or otherwise, on such terms, conditions, and rates as said managers may deem proper; may obtain any moneys required to carry out the plan and this agreement, including such sums as the managers may deem expedient to provide for the uses of the new company; and for the performance of any contract said managers may charge the deposited securities and the new securities to be issued, and may 7197 pledge the same for the payment of any moneys borrowed and interest thereon, and other performance of any other obligations incurred under the powers herein conferred. The managers may employ counsel, agents, and all necessary assistance, and may incur and discharge any and all expenses by them deemed reasonable for the purposes of this agreement. They may prescribe the form of all securities and of all instruments at any time to be issued or entered into. They may create and provide for all necessary trusts and may nominate and appoint trustees thereunder, excepting that the reorganization committee 7198 shall make any appointment in lieu of or in succession to Georg Siemens, and that the protective committee shall make any appointment in lieu of, or in succession to, August Belmont, prior to the actual reception of stock by the voting trustees. They may, at public or private sale, or otherwise, dispose of any bonds and trust certificates for stock of the new company left in their hands because of any failure to make deposits hereunder. In so disposing of any such new securities thus left on their hands, they may use the same or the proceeds thereof for the purpose of carrying out the reorganization in such manner as they may deem expedient and advisable. At the time of the creation of the new securities, or as soon thereafter as may be, the managers may take such action (either by creating lesser amounts of securities or otherwise) as they may deem necessary to guard against the issue of such particular securities in any manner or to any extent inconsistent with the purposes of the plan.

Seventh. Messrs. J. P. Morgan & Co., as managers, shall act as a copartnership, and in case of any change in said firm, the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., as from time to time constituted, shall continue as managers, with all the powers, rights, and title vested in the managers hereunder. Neither the committees nor the managers nor the depositaries assume any personal responsibility for the execution of the plan, or of this agreement, or any part of either, nor for the result of any steps taken or acts done for the purposes thereof, the managers, however, undertaking in good faith to endeavor to execute the same. No member of the reorganization committee, nor any depositary, nor the managers shall be personally liable for any act or omission of any agent or employee selected in good faith, nor for any error of judgment or mistake of law, nor in any case except for his, its, or their own individual, willful malfeasance or neglect; and no member of the reorganization committee shall in any case be personally liable for the act or omission of any other member nor for the acts of any depositary or of the managers, nor shall any depositary or the managers be personally liable for the acts or defaults of the reorganization committee, or of any other depositary or of any trust company. The managers may act through any committees or agents and may delegate any authority as well as discretion to any such committee or agent, and the members of such committee or such agents may be allowed a reasonable compensation for their services hereunder, and the managers shall be entitled to the compensation stated in the plan. Any member of the managers or depositaries, or any member of either committee, at any time, may be a voting trustee and may be or become pecuniarily interested in any contracts, property, or matters which this agreement concerns, including participation in or under any syndicate agreement, whether or not mentioned in the plan. Any direction given by the managers shall be full and sufficient authority for any action of the depositaries or of any trust com- 7203 pany or of any other custodian or of any committee or agent.

The reorganization committee shall be entitled to reasonable compensation. It may discharge any and all reasonable expenses by it incurred for any of the purposes of this agreement or of the agreement of February 19, 1894. Its accounts shall be filed with the board of directors of the new company, and the same as filed shall be final, binding, and conclusive upon all parties having any interest therein. The compensation of the said reorganization and the protective committee and their expenses shall be paid as part of the expenses of the reorgani- 7204 zation.

Eighth. The managers may negotiate and contract with any and all companies or persons for obtaining or granting running powers, terminal facilities, exchanges of property, or any other convenience which they may deem necessary or desirable to obtain or to grant, and may make contracts therefor binding upon such new company, and generally may ratify and make such purchases, contracts, stipulations, or arrangements as will, in their opinion, operate directly or indirectly to aid in the preservation, improvement, development, or protection of any prop- 7205 erty now constituting the Northern Pacific system, of which the railroad company or any subordinate company has contracted to acquire, or to prevent or avoid opposition to or interference with the successful execution hereof.

Ninth. The accounts of the managers shall be filed with the board of directors of the new company within one year after its organization shall have been completed, unless a longer time be granted by the said board. The accounts, when approved by such board of directors, shall be final, binding, and conclusive upon all parties having any interest therein, and thereupon the 7206 managers shall be discharged. The acceptance of new securities by any depositor or any assenting certificate holder shall estop such acceptor from questioning the conformity of such securities in any particular to any provisions of the plan; and the acceptance of new securities by the holders of a majority in amount of the certificates of deposit and assenting certificates for any class of securities shall in each case respectively estop all holders of certificates of deposit and assenting certificates for securities of that class.

7207 Tenth. The enumeration of specific powers hereby conferred shall not be construed to limit or to restrict general powers herein conferred or intended so to be; and it is hereby distinctly declared that it is intended to confer on the managers, and each depositor hereunder, and each assenting certificate holder hereby confers on the managers, in respect of all securities deposited or to be deposited, or securities represented by assenting certificates, and in all other respects any and all powers which the managers may deem necessary or expedient in or toward carrying out or promoting the purposes of the plan and 7208 this agreement in any respect, even though any such power be apparently of a character not now contemplated; and the managers may exercise any and every such power as fully and effectively as if the same were herein distinctly specified, and as often as, for any cause or reason, they may deem expedient. The methods to be adopted for or toward carrying out this agreement shall be entirely discretionary with the managers.

The bonds and other obligations deposited under the plan and this agreement, or represented by assenting certificates, and all receivers' certificates, coupons, and claims purchased or other-7209 wise acquired under this agreement shall remain in full force and effect for all purposes, and shall not be deemed satisfied, released, or discharged by any delivery of new securities; and no legal right or lien shall be deemed released or waived, but said bonds and other claims, and any judgments upon any of such claims, including claims and judgments for deficiencies and all liens and equities shall remain unimpaired, and may be enforced by the managers or by the new company or by any or other assign of the managers until paid or satisfied in full or expressly released. Neither the managers nor any bondholders or creditors 7210 of the railroad company, by executing this agreement or by becoming parties thereto, release, surrender, or waive any lien, right, or claim in favor of any stockholders or other creditors of such company, and all such liens, rights, or claims shall vest unimpaired in the managers and in the new company or its assigns, severally and respectively; and any purchase or purchases by or on behalf of the managers or the new company, under any decree for the enforcement of any such lien, right, or claim, shall vest the property purchased in the managers or the new company, free from all interest or claim on the part of any such stockholders, creditors, or other parties. No right is 7211 conferred, nor any trust, liability, or obligation (except the agreements herein contained in favor of the holders of certificates of deposit or assenting certificates hereunder) is created by the plan and this agreement, or is assumed hereunder or by or for any new company in favor of any bondholder or any other creditor, or of any holder of any claim whatsoever against the railroad company, nor in favor of any company now existing or to be formed hereafter (whether such claim be based on any bonds, stocks, securities, lease, guaranty, or otherwise), with respect to any securities deposited under this agreement or any 7212 moneys paid to or received by managers or by the committee or depositaries hereunder, or with respect to any property acquired by purchase at any foreclosure sale, or with respect to any new securities to be issued hereunder, or with respect to any other matter or thing.

Eleventh. All moneys paid under or with reference to the plan and this agreement shall be paid over by the depositaries to the managers, who shall, as bankers, hold the same subject to application for any of the purposes of the plan and this agreement, as may be most convenient, and as from time to time may be 7213 determined by the managers, whose determination as to the propriety and purpose of any such application shall be final, and nothing in the plan shall be understood as limiting or requiring the application of specific moneys to specific purposes. Any obligation in the nature of floating debt or otherwise against any company or property embraced in the plan, either as proposed or carried out, or any securities held as collateral for any such obligation, may be acquired or extinguished or held by the managers at such times, in such manner, and upon such terms as they may deem proper for the purposes of reorganization, but nothing in 7214 the plan and this agreement contained is intended to constitute, nor shall it constitute, any liability or trust in favor or in respect of any such obligation.

Twelfth. All calls for the presentation of certificates for stamping, for the deposit of bonds and stocks, for the payment to be made by depositing stockholders, or for the surrender of certificates; all notices fixing or limiting any period for the deposit of securities or for such payments, or for the presentation of certificates for stamping, and all other calls or notices hereunder, except when otherwise provided, shall be inserted in the New York Times and the New York Tribune, or in two other daily papers of general circulation published in the city of New York; in the London Times and News, or in two other daily papers of general circulation published in the city of London, and in two daily papers of general circulation published in the city of Berlin, twice in each week for two successive weeks, beginning on any day of the week. Any call or notice whatsoever, when so published by the managers or by the Deutsche Bank, shall be taken and considered as though personally served on all parties hereto, and upon all parties bound hereby, as of the respective dates of insertion thereof, and such publication shall be the only notice required to be given under any provision of this plan and agreement; and all German translations of the plan and this agreement and of any call or notice thereunder shall be made under the direction or with the approval of the Deutsche Bank, and when so made shall be sufficient for publication in Germany; but in case of any discrepancy between such translation and the English original, the latter shall control, and, notwithstanding such discrepancy, shall bind all parties in interest. When a call or notice shall have been advertised as above specified in New York, or in London, or in Berlin, publication shall be complete as regards all holders of certificates of deposit and assented receipts issued or stamped by the depositaries in the city in which such publication shall have been made, and no further publication shall be required in such city.

Thirteenth. The plan and this agreement shall bind and benefit the several parties, including the depositors hereunder, their and each of their survivors, heirs, executors, administrators, successors, and assigns.

Fourteenth. In order fully to subject to every provision of the plan and this agreement, all general second, general third, and consolidated mortgage bonds now or hereafter represented by assenting certificates of the Mercantile Trust Company, and to obtain therefor all benefits hereunder, the Mercantile Trust Company of New York becomes a party hereto, and each assenting certificate holder hereby confers upon it full power and authority, either with or without the termination of the said bondholders' agreement of February 19, 1894, to hold subject to the plan and this agreement and to deliver to the managers 7219 or upon their order the bonds represented by any such assenting certificate, and full power and authority from time to time thereafter to make, execute, and perform (such power and authority by it to be exercised when requested by the managers) such further or other instruments, agreements, and transfers as may be required hereunder in respect of any bonds represented by any such assenting certificates.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF a majority of the reorganization committee, the managers, the Mercantile Trust Company of New York, the Deutsche Bank, and the protective committee have 7220 caused these presents to be duly executed, and all other parties hereto have deposited securities or, as above set forth, have assented hereto in respect of certificates of the Mercantile Trust Company.

7222 SPECIAL EXAMINER'S RETURN, WITH REPORT.

In the circuit court of the United States for the district of Minnesota, third division.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, COMPLAINANT,
v.
NORTHERN SECURITIES COMPANY, THE GREAT Northern Railway Company, The Northern Pacific Railway Company, James J. Hill, William P. Clough, D. Willis James, John S.
7223 Kennedy, J. Pierpont Morgan, Robert Bacon, George F. Baker, and Daniel S. Lamont, defendants.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
District of Minnesota, ss.

I, Frederick G. Ingersoll, the duly appointed special examiner to take and return the testimony in the case of United States of America, complainant, against the Northern Securities Company, the Great Northern Railway Company, the 7224 Northern Pacific Railway Company, James J. Hill, William P. Clough, D. Willis James, John S. Kennedy, J. Pierpont Morgan, Robert Bacon, George F. Baker, and Daniel S. Lamont, defendants, do hereby certify that, pursuant to the consent, agreement, and stipulation of the solicitors for the respective parties hereto, I appeared, on the 15th day of September, 1902, at the United States attorney's office in the post-office building in the city of New York, and was then and there attended by the solicitors for the respective parties to said cause, and did then and there at said time and place, and at certain other times
7225 and places in said report mentioned, take and report all the testimony of all the witnesses produced before me by all of the parties to this cause, as well as all proceedings connected therewith; that at all said times and places each of the several witnesses, being of lawful age, before testifying was by me duly cautioned and sworn to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, relative to the matters in controversy in this cause.

That pursuant to the consent and agreement of the respective 7226 parties to this cause the testimony of the witnesses produced before me were, under my direction, taken down stenographically by Robert S. Taylor, a skillful stenographer, and by him reduced to writing. That the reading to each witness of his testimony, after such reduction to typewriting, by the undersigned, in the presence of the parties or counsel, was, by consent of all the parties to this cause, waived; each witness read his testimony, and after correcting the same to conform to the facts, thereafter signed and swore to the same in the presence of the examiner, save and except only the testimony of the 7227 witness William P. Clough, taken in the city of New York on the part of the complainant, on the 25th day of September, 1902; that the witness Clough read over such testimony when reduced to writing, but inadvertently neglected to sign the same, and that such omission by the witness was thereafter, by consent of all the parties to this cause, duly waived.

That the report to which this certificate is affixed contains a full, true, and complete record of all the testimony taken, exhibits introduced, and proceedings had at such times and places; that the exhibits offered by the solicitors for the complainant, as well as those offered by the solicitors for the de- 7228 fendants, are filed by me with this report in the office of the clerk of the United States circuit court for the district of Minnesota; that the exhibits introduced by the complainant were marked as follows: Complainant's Exhibit A, Complainant's Exhibit B, Complainant's Exhibit C, Complainant's Exhibit D, Complainant's Exhibit E, Complainant's Exhibit F, Complainant's Exhibit G, Complainant's Exhibit H, Complainant's Exhibit I, Complainant's Exhibit J, Complainant's Exhibit K, Complainant's Exhibit L, Complainant's Exhibit M, Com- 7229 plainant's Exhibit N, Complainant's Exhibit O, Complainant's Exhibit P, and Complainant's Exhibit Q; that the exhibits introduced by the defendants were marked by me Defendant's Exhibits 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18A, 18B, 18C, 18D, 18E, 19, 20, 20A, 20B, 20C, 20D, 20E, 20F, 20G, 20H, 20I, 20J, 20K, 20L, 21, 22, 23, and 24; that there is no Exhibit 9 in the case.

7230 That whatever copies of originals appear among said exhibits it was expressly stipulated and agreed by the solicitors for the respective parties that such copies might stand for and be used as the originals thereof as fully and completely as if the originals were filed.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand this ——— day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and three.

Special Examiner.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, COMPLAINANT,
v.
NORTHERN SECURITIES COMPANY, THE GREAT Northern Railway Company, The Northern Pacific Railway Company, James J. Hill, William P. Clough, D. Willis James, John S. Kennedy, J. Pierpont Morgan, Robert Bacon, George F. Baker, and Daniel S. Lamont, defendants. 7238

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
District of Minnesota, ss:

I, Frederick G. Ingersoll, the duly appointed special examiner to take and return the testimony in the case of United States of America, complainant, against the Northern Securities Company, the Great Northern Railway Company, the Northern Pacific Railway Company, James J. Hill, William P. 7239
Clough, D. Willis James, John S. Kennedy, J. Pierpont Morgan, Robert Bacon, George F. Baker, and Daniel S. Lamont, defendants, do hereby certify that, pursuant to the consent, agreement, and stipulation of the solicitors for the respective parties hereto, I appeared, on the 15th day of September, 1902, at the United States attorney's office in the post-office building in the city of New York, and was then and there attended by the solicitors for the respective parties to said cause, and did then and there at said time and place and at certain other times and places in said report mentioned take and report all the tes- 7240 timony of all the witnesses produced before me by all of the parties to this cause, as well as all proceedings connected therewith. That at all said times and places each of the several witnesses, being of lawful age, before testifying was by me duly cautioned and sworn to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth relative to the matters in controversy in this cause.

That pursuant to the consent and agreement of the respective parties to this cause, the testimony of all the witnesses produced

7241 before me was, under my direction and with the approval of all the parties, taken down stenographically by Robert S. Taylor, a skillful stenographer, and was by him reduced to typewriting. That the reading to each witness of his testimony, after such reduction to typewriting, by the undersigned in the presence of the parties or counsel was, by consent of all the parties to this cause, waived; each witness read his testimony, and after correcting the same to conform to the facts, thereafter signed and swore to the same in the presence of the examiner—save and except only the testimony of the witness William P. Clough, 7242 taken in the city of New York on the part of the complainant on the 25th day of September, 1902; that the said witness Clough read over such testimony when reduced to writing, but inadvertently neglected to sign the same, and that such omission by the witness was thereafter, by consent of all the parties to this cause, duly waived.

That the report to which this certificate is affixed contains a full, true, and complete record of all the testimony taken, exhibits introduced, and proceedings had at such times and places; that the exhibits offered by the solicitors for the com-
7243 plainant, as well as those offered by the solicitors for the defendants, are filed by me with my report in the office of the clerk of the United States circuit court for the district of Minnesota; that the exhibits introduced by the complainant were marked as follows: Complainant's Exhibit A, Complainant's Exhibit B, Complainant's Exhibit C, Complainant's Exhibit D, Complainant's Exhibit E, Complainant's Exhibit F, Complainant's Exhibit G, Complainant's Exhibit H, Complainant's Exhibit I, Complainant's Exhibit J, Complainant's Exhibit K, Complainant's Exhibit L, Complainant's Exhibit M, Complainant's Ex-
7244 hibit N, Complainant's Exhibit O, Complainant's Exhibit P, and Complainant's Exhibit Q; that the exhibits introduced by the defendants were marked by me Defendants' Exhibits 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18A, 18B, 18C, 18D, 18E, 19, 20, 20A, 20B, 20C, 20D, 20E, 20F, 20G, 20H, 20I, 20J, 20K, 20L, 21, 22, 23, and 24; that there is no Exhibit 9 in the case.

That whatever copies of originals appear among said exhibits, it was expressly stipulated and agreed by the solicitors for the respective parties that such copies might stand for and be used as the originals thereof as fully and completely as if the orig- 7245 inals were filed.

I further certify that, as requested by all the parties to this cause, I have caused all the proceedings herein to be printed and bound, as provided by the rules of this court; that the printed record of such proceedings constitutes five volumes, which are numbered 1 to 5 inclusive. That for greater certainty, and at the request of said parties, I have prepared this original certificate and caused the same to be inserted at the close of volume 5 of said printed record.

I further certify that I have carefully compared all of the fore- 7246 going papers in this record, to wit: Order appointing the special examiner, oath of special examiner, stipulation for the taking of testimony, stipulation appointing the stenographer, oath of stenographer, proceedings before the examiner in the city of New York, September 15, 1902, proceedings before the examiner in the city of New York, September 16, 1902, proceedings before the examiner in the city of New York, September 25, 1902, the testimony of James J. Hill, and the testimony of Charles S. Mellen taken from volume 1 of the special examiner's transcript in the Peter Power case, the testimony of John S. Kennedy, 7247
G. W. Perkins, W. P. Clough, Jacob H. Schiff, Charles Steele, and J. P. Morgan taken from volume 2 of the special examiner's transcript in the Peter Power case, all as set forth in volume 1 of the printed record herein, with the originals thereof on file in the office of the clerk of this court, and that the same and all thereof are true and correct copies of said originals; also the testimony of R. H. Relf, with the exhibits pertaining thereto, taken from pages 1 to 88, both inclusive, of the record in the Peter Power case, together with complainant's Exhibits A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, and I, and the testimony of E. H. Harriman, 7248 given in Chicago before the Interstate Commerce Commission as set forth on pages 78 to 115, inclusive, of the printed record of said proceedings of the Interstate Commerce Commission; the testimony of W. P. Clough given in the city of New York, September 25, 1902; all of which last-mentioned papers are set forth and are contained in volume 2 of the printed record herein, with the originals thereof, and that the same and all thereof are true and correct copies of said originals.

7249 That said complainant's Exhibit I is the map bound into the printed record at the end of said volume 2; that said exhibit has been erroneously marked by the printer as Exhibit 13.

Also that volume 5 of the printed record herein contains complainant's Exhibits J, K, L, M, N, O, P, and Q, and that I have compared said exhibits with the originals thereof, and that the same, as set forth in said printed record, are true and correct copies of said originals and the whole thereof.

That said volumes 1, 2, and 5 contain all of the complainant's testimony and exhibits herein.

7250 That volume 3 of the printed record herein contains the testimony of the witnesses James J. Hill, Frederick Weyerhauser, George B. Harris, W. P. Clough, Charles S. Mellen, E. N. Saunders, George P. Meany, E. H. Harriman, and defendant's Exhibits 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 10, 17, 19, 21, 22, 23, and 24, together with all the proceedings before me in behalf of the defendants, save and except the exhibits hereinafter mentioned; that said volume 3 as printed is a true and correct copy of the originals of all the papers and proceedings in said volume set forth and of the whole thereof, and that the same and each 7251 thereof have been by me duly compared.

That volume 4 of said printed record contains the defendants' Exhibits 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 18A, 18B, 18C, 18D, 18E, 20, 20A, 20B, 20C, 20D, 20E, 20F, 20G, 20H, 20I, 20J, 20K, and 20L, and that the said exhibits as printed are true and correct copies of the originals and of the whole thereof.

That said printed volumes 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5 contain true and correct copies of all the proceedings in this case, together with a copy of my original report and return and the certificate of the clerk of the court as to the correctness thereof.

7252 In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand this —— day of January, A. D. 1903.

Special Examiner.

Mr. John W. Griggs argues the cause to the court on behalf of the defendants.

And here the court takes a recess until two o'clock.

The court resumes proceedings at two o'clock p. m.

Mr. John W. Griggs resumes and concludes his argument of the cause to the court on behalf of the defendants.

Mr. David T. Watson argues said cause in reply on behalf of the complainant.

And the hearing of said cause not being concluded at the hour of adjournment, it is by the court ordered that further proceedings herein be and the same hereby are postponed and continued until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

Ordered that this court do now adjourn until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

Term Minutes, January Term, A. D. 1903—March 21st, 1903.

SATURDAY MORNING, ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA:

Circuit Court, Eighth Circuit, District of Minnesota, Third Division.

At a session of the third division of the circuit court of the United States of America for the district of Minnesota, held at the city of St. Louis, Missouri.

Court opened pursuant to adjournment.

Present: Hon. Henry C. Caldwell, circuit judge; Hon. Walter H. Sanborn, circuit judge; Hon. Amos M. Thayer, circuit judge; Hon. Willis Van Devanter, circuit judge; Henry D. Lang, clerk.

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
vs.
NORTHERN SECURITIES COMPANY ET AL. } C. Equity. No. 789.

This day come again the parties to this cause by their respective solicitors and the hearing thereof is resumed and continued as follows, to-wit:

Mr. James M. Beck one of the solicitors for the complainant moves the court for further time within which to file briefs herein on behalf of the complainant, whereupon after due consideration, it is by the court ordered, that the complainant herein have not to exceed three days from this date within to file the briefs of Messrs. James M. Beck and David T. Watson two of the solicitors for the complainant herein, on behalf of the complainant. Upon the agreement and consent of the solicitors for the respective parties hereto, it is by the court ordered that a copy of the Wall Street Journal of Saturday, June 1st, 1901, may be and the same hereby is permitted to be offered in evidence as an additional exhibit on behalf of the complainant, the same to be filed herein and printed as a part of the complainant's record for hearing in equity in this cause.

Mr. David T. Watson thereupon resumes and concludes his argument of this cause to the court in reply on behalf of the complainant.

And after hearing the arguments and statements of the solicitors for the respective parties and being fully advised in the premises, the said cause is duly submitted to, and by the court taken under advisement.

Ordered that this court do now adjourn until Monday morning at ten o'clock.

Insertion—Page 341, Volume I.

The following article appeared in "The Wall Street Summary," a newspaper published in the city of New York, in the issue of June 1, 1901. By agreement of the parties to this action, this is inserted in connection with Mr. Morgan's testimony on page 341, volume I. Mr. Steele, at page 287, volume I, also refers to the same article.

"It is officially announced that an understanding has been reached between Northern Pacific and Union Pacific interests, under which the composition of the Northern Pacific board will be left in the hands of J. P. Morgan. Certain names have already been suggested, not now to be made public, which will especially be recognized as representative of the common interests. It is asserted that complete and permanent harmony will result under the plan adopted between all interests involved."

"Before Caldwell, Sanborn, Thayer and Devanter, circuit judges.

"THAYER, circuit judge, stated the conclusions of the court:

"This is a bill, exhibited by the United States, to restrain the violation of an act of Congress approved July 2, 1890 (26 St. 209, c. 647), entitled 'An act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies,' which is commonly termed the Sherman anti-trust act. The case was heard before a circuit court composed of the four circuit judges of the eighth circuit, pursuant to the provisions of a recent act of Congress approved Feb. 11, 1903, which requires such cases to be heard 'before not less than three of the circuit judges' of the circuit where the suit is brought, when the Attorney General files with the clerk of the court wherein the case is pending, a certificate that it is one of 'general public importance.' Such a certificate has been filed and in accordance with the mandate of the statute the case 'has been given precedence over others and in every way expedited.'

"From admissions made by the pleadings as well as from much oral testimony, we reach the following conclusions as respects matters of fact:

"Two of the defendants, namely, The Northern Pacific Railway Company and The Great Northern Railway Company, are the owners respectively of lines of railroad which extend from the cities of Duluth, St. Paul and Minneapolis in the State of Minnesota, thence across the continent to Puget sound. These roads are and in public estimation have ever been regarded as, parallel and competing lines. For some years at least after they were built, they competed with each other actively for transcontinental and interstate traffic.

"In the spring of the year 1901 they united in purchasing about 98 per cent. of the entire capital stock of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railway Company, and became joint sureties for the payment of bonds of the last named company, whereby the purchase was accomplished, which were to run twenty years and bear 4 per cent. interest per annum. The amount of stock so acquired was of the par value of about $107,000,000 and as it was purchased at the rate of $200 per share, the bonded indebtedness of the two companies was thus increased to the extent of $200,000,000.

"Subsequent to the acquisition of the stock of the Burlington Company and in the summer of the year 1901, certain large and influential stockholders of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern Companies, who had practical control of the two roads and who have been made parties defendant to the present bill, acting in concert with each other, conceived the design of placing a very large majority of the stock of both of the last named companies in the hands of a single owner. To this end these stockholders arranged and agreed with each other to procure and cause the formation of a corporation under the laws of the State of New Jersey, which latter company, when organized, should buy all or at least the greater part of the stock of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern Companies. The individuals who conceived and promoted this plan agreed with each other to exchange their respective holdings of stock in the last named railroad companies for the stock of the New Jersey company, when the same should be fully organized, and to use their influence to induce other stockholders in their respective companies to do likewise, to the end that the New Jersey company might become the sole owner of the whole or at least a major portion of the stock of both railroad companies.

"In accordance with this plan the defendant, The Northern Securities Company (hereafter termed the securities company), was organized under the laws of the State of New Jersey on Nov. 13, 1901, with a capital stock of $400,000,000, that sum being the exact amount required to purchase the total stock of the two railroad companies at the price agreed to be paid therefor. When the securities company was organized, it assented to and became a party to the scheme that had been devised by its promoters before it became a legal entity.

"Very shortly after its organization the securities company acquired a large majority of all the stock of the Northern Pacific Company at the rate of $115 per share, paying therefor in its own stock at par. At the same time it acquired about 300,000 shares of the stock of the Great Northern Company from those stockholders of that company who had been instrumental in organizing the securities company, paying therefor at the rate of $180 per share and using its own stock at par to make the purchase.

"The securities company subsequently made further purchases of stock of the Great Northern Company, at the same rate, and in about three months had acquired stock of the latter company amounting at par to about $95,000,000, using for that purpose its own stock to the amount of about $171,000,000. The securities company was enabled to make the subsequent purchase of stock from stockholders of the Great Northern Company not immediately concerned in the organization of the securities company, by the advice, procurement and persuasion of those stockholders of the Great Northern Company who had been instrumental in organizing the securities company and had exchanged their own stock for stock in that company shortly after its organization. At the present time the securities company is the owner of about 96 per cent. of all the stock of the Northern Pacific Company and the owner of about 76 per cent. of all the stock of the Great Northern Company.

"The scheme which was thus devised and consummated led inevitably to the following results: first, it placed the control of the two roads in the hands of a single person, to-wit, the securities company, by virtue of its ownership of a large majority of the stock of both companies; second, it destroyed every motive for competition between two roads engaged in interstate traffic which were natural competitors for business, by pooling the earnings of the two roads for the common benefit of the stockholders of both companies; and, according to the familiar rule that every one is presumed to intend what is the necessary consequence of his own acts when done willfully and deliberately, we must conclude that those who conceived and executed the plan aforesaid intended, among other things, to accomplish these objects.

"The general question of law arising upon this state of facts is whether such a combination of interests as that above described falls within the inhibition of the anti-trust act or is beyond its reach. The act brands as illegal 'every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States or with foreign nations.'

"Learned counsel on both sides have commented on the general language of the act, doing so, of course, for a different purpose, and the generality of the language employed is, in our judgment, of great significance. It indicates, we think, that Congress, being unable to foresee and describe all the plans that might be formed and all the expedients that might be resorted to, to place restraints on interstate trade or commerce, deliberately employed words of such general import as, in its opinion, would comprehend every scheme that might be devised to accomplish that end.

"What is commonly termed a 'trust' was a species of combination organized by individuals or corporations for the purpose of monopolizing the manufacture of, or traffic in, various articles and commodities which was well known and fully understood when the anti-trust act was approved. Combinations in that form were accordingly prohibited; but Congress, evidently anticipating that a combination might be otherwise formed, was careful to declare that a combination in any form, if in restraint of interstate trade or commerce, that is, if it directly occasioned or effected such restraint, should likewise be deemed illegal.

"Moreover, in cases arising under the act, it has been held by the highest judicial authority in the nation, and its opinion has been reiterated in no uncertain tone, that the act applies to interstate carriers of freight and passengers as well as to all other persons, natural or artificial; that the words 'in restraint of trade or commerce' do not mean in unreasonable or partial restraint of trade or commerce but any direct restraint thereof; that an agreement between competing railroads which requires them to act in concert in fixing the rate for the carriage of passengers or freight over their respective lines from one State to another, and which, by that means, restricts temporarily the right of any one of such carriers to name such rates for the carriage of such freight or passengers over its road, as it pleases, is a contract in direct restraint of commerce within the meaning of the act, in that it tends to prevent competition; that it matters not whether, while acting under such a contract, the rate fixed is reasonable or unreasonable, the vice of such a contract or combination being that it confers the power to establish unreasonable rates and directly restrains commerce by placing obstacles in the way of free and unrestricted competition between carriers who are natural rivals for patronage; and finally, that Congress has the power under the grant of authority contained in the Federal Constitution to regulate commerce, to say that no contract or combination shall be legal which shall restrain interstate trade or commerce by shutting off the operation of the general law of competition. United States vs. Trans-Missouri Freight Ass'n, 166 U. S. 290; United States vs. Joint Traffic Ass'n, 171 U. S. 505; Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. vs. United States, 175 U. S. 211.

"Taking the foregoing propositions for granted because they have been decided by a court whose authority is controlling, it is almost too plain for argument that the defendants would have violated the anti-trust act if they had done, through the agency of natural persons, what they have accomplished through an artificial person of their own creation. That is to say, if the same individuals who promoted the securities company, in pursuance of a previous understanding or agreement so to do, had transferred their stock in the two railroad companies to a third party or parties and had agreed to induce other shareholders to do likewise, until a majority of the stock of both companies had been vested in a single individual or association of individuals, and had empowered the holder or holders to vote the stock as their own, receive all the dividends thereon, and prorate or divide them among all the shareholders of the two companies who had transferred their stock—the result would have been a combination in direct restraint of interstate commerce because it would have placed in the hands of a small coterie of men the power to suppress competition between two competing interstate carriers whose lines are practically parallel.

"It will not do to say that so long as each railroad company has its own board of directors they operate independently and are not controlled by the owner of the majority of their stock. It is the common experience of mankind that the acts of corporations are dictated and that their policy is controlled by those who own the majority of their stock. Indeed, one of the favorite methods in these days, and about the only method, of obtaining control of a corporation is to purchase the greater part of its stock. It was the method pursued by the Northern Pacific and Great Northern Companies to obtain control of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad; and so long as directors are chosen by stockholders, the latter will necessarily dominate the former and in a real sense determine all important corporate acts.

"The fact that the ownership of a majority of the capital stock of a corporation gives one the mastery and control of the corporation was distinctly recognized and declared in Pearsall vs. Great Northern Railway, 161 U. S. 646, 671. The same fact has been recognized and declared by other courts. Pennsylvania R. Co. vs. Commonwealth, 7 Atl. (Pa.), 368, 371; Farmers Loan & Trust Co. vs. New York & Northern Railway Co., 150 N. Y., 410, 425; People ex rel. vs. Chicago Gas Trust Co., 130, 111, 268, 22 N. E. Rep., 798, 802. In opposition to this view counsel cite Pullman Car Co. vs. Missouri Pacific Co., 115 U. S., 587, 596, but in that case the meaning of the word controlled, as used in a private contract, was the point under consideration, and what was said on the subject cannot be held applicable to cases arising under the anti-trust act when the point involved is whether the ownership of all the stock of two competing and parallel railroads vests the owner thereof with the power to suppress competition between such roads. We entertain no doubt that it does. Indeed, we regard suppression of competition, and to that extent a restraint of commerce, as the natural and inevitable result of such ownership.

"What has been done through the organization of the securities company accomplishes the object, which Congress has denounced as illegal, more effectually perhaps than such a combination as is last supposed. That is to say, by what has been done the power has been acquired (and provision made for maintaining it) to suppress competition between two interstate carriers who own and operate competing and parallel lines of railroad. Competition, we think, would not be more effectually restrained than it now is under and by force of the existing arrangement, if the two railroad companies were consolidated under a single charter.

"It is manifest, therefore, that the New Jersey charter is about the only shield which the defendants can interpose between themselves and the law. The reasoning which led to the acquisition of that charter would seem to have been that while as individuals the promoters could not, by agreement between themselves, place the majority of the stock of the two competing and parallel railroads in the hands of a single person or a few persons, giving him or them the power to operate the roads in harmony and stifle competition, yet that the same persons might create a purely fictitious person termed a corporation, which could neither think nor act except as they directed, and by placing the same stock in the name of such artificial being, accomplish the same purpose. The manifest unreasonableness of such a proposition and the grave consequences sure to follow from its approval, compel us to assume that it must be unsound, especially when we reflect that the law as administered by courts of equity, looks always at the substance of things—at the object accomplished, whether it be lawful or unlawful—rather than upon the particular devices or means by which it has been accomplished.

"So far as the New Jersey charter is concerned, the question, broadly stated, which the court has to determine, is whether a charter granted by a State can be used to defeat the will of the national legislature as expressed in a law relating to interstate trade and commerce over which Congress has absolute control. Presumptively, at least, no charter granted by a State is intended by the State to have that effect or to be for such a purpose; and in the present instance it is clear that the State of New Jersey did not intend to grant a charter under cover of which an object denounced by Congress as unlawful, namely, a combination conferring the power to restrain interstate commerce, might be formed and maintained because the enabling act under which the securities company was organized, expressly declares that three or more persons may avail themselves of the provisions of the act and 'become a corporation for any lawful purpose.' Laws of New Jersey, 1899, p. 473. This language is not merely perfunctory; it means, obviously, that whatever powers the incorporators saw fit to assume they must hold and exercise for the accomplishment of lawful objects. The words in question operate, therefore, as a limitation upon all the powers enumerated in the articles of association which were filed by the promoters of the securities company, so that however extensive and comprehensive these powers may seem to be, the State of New Jersey has said, you shall not exercise them so as to set at defiance any statute lawfully enacted by the Congress of the United States or any statute lawfully enacted by any State wherein you see fit to exercise your powers.

"But aside from this view of the subject, if the State of New Jersey had undertaken to invest the incorporators of the securities company with the power to do acts in the corporate name which would operate to restrain interstate commerce, and for that reason could not be done by them acting as an association of individuals—then we have no doubt that such a grant would have been void under the provisions of the anti-trust act or at least that the charter could not be permitted to stand in the way of the enforcement of that act.

"The power of Congress over interstate commerce is supreme, far-reaching, and acknowledges no limitations other than such as are prescribed in the Constitution itself. Gibbons vs. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 197; County of Mobile vs. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, 696, 697; Champion vs. Ames, — U. S. — (decided Feb. 23, 1903). No legislation on the part of a State can curtail or interfere with its exercise; and in view of re*g*eated decisions, no one can deny that it is a legitimate exercise of the power in question for Congress to say that neither natural nor artificial persons shall combine or conspire in any form whatever to place restraints on interstate trade or commerce. United States vs. Transmissouri Freight Association, 166 U. S. 290; United States vs. Joint Traffic Association, 171 U. S. 505; Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. vs. United States, 175 U. S. 211.

"It is urged, however, that such a combination of adverse interests as was formed, and has been heretofore described, was lawful and not prohibited by the anti-trust act because such restraint upon interstate trade or commerce, if any, as it imposes, is indirect, collateral and remote and hence that the combination is not one of that character which the Congress of the United States can lawfully forbid. The following cases are relied upon to sustain the contention: United States vs. E. C. Knight Co., 156 U. S. 1; Hopkins vs. United States, 171 U. S. 578; Anderson vs. United States, 171 U. S. 604.

"It is pertinent, therefore, to inquire in what way the existing combination that has been formed does affect interstate commerce. It affects it, we think, by giving to a single corporate entity, or more accurately, to a few men acting in concert and in its name and under cover of its charter, the power to control all the means of transportation that are owned by two competing and parallel railroads engaged in interstate commerce; in other words, the power to dictate every important act which the two companies may do; to compel them to act in harmony in establishing interstate rates for the carriage of freight and passengers; and generally to prescribe the policy which they shall pursue. It matters not, we think, through how many hands the orders come by which these aims are accomplished or through what channels; the power was not only acquired by the combination but it is effectually exercised and it operates directly on interstate commerce, notwithstanding the manner of its exercise, by controlling the means of transportation, to wit, the cars, engines and railroads by which persons and commodities are carried, as well as by fixing the price to be charged for such carriage.

"The cases cited above and on which reliance is placed to sustain the view that the restraint imposed is merely indirect, remote, incidental or collateral, are not relevant for, as was fully explained in Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. vs. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 238, 240, 243, one of these cases (United States vs. E. C. Knight Company) dealt only with a combination within a State to obtain a practical monopoly of the manufacture of sugar and it was held that the combination only related to manufacture and not to commerce among the States or with foreign nations; that the fact that an article was manufactured for export to another State, did not make it an article of interstate commerce before transportation had begun or necesarily subject it to Federal control; and that the effect of the combination then under consideration, on interstate commerce, was at most only incidental and collateral. But while commenting on its previous decision in United States vs. E. C. Knight Co., the court took occasion to say, in Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. vs. United States, 175 U. S. 246, that when a contract is made for the sale and delivery of an article in another State, the transaction is one of interstate commerce although the vendor has also agreed to manufacture the article so sold; and that combinations to control or monopolize such transactions would be in restraint of interstate commerce.

"In the other cases (Hopkins vs. United States and Anderson vs. United States) it was held that the business of the members of the Kansas City live stock exchange, which was under consideration by the court, was not interstate commerce and that the act did not affect them and that even if they were so affected, the particular agreement which was involved did not operate as a restraint of interstate commerce.

"We fail to find, in either of these cases, any suggestion that a combination such as the one in hand, the object and necessary effect of which is to give to a single person or to a coterie of persons full control of all means of transportation owned by two competing and parallel lines of road engaged in interstate commerce, as well as the power to fix the rate for the transportation of persons and property, does not directly and immediately affect interstate commerce. No combination, as it would seem, could more immediately affect it.

"Again, it is urged, tentatively, that if the existing combination which the Government seeks to have dissolved, is held to be one in violation of the anti-trust act and unlawful, then the act unduly restricts the right of the individual to make contracts, buy and sell property, and is invalid for that reason. With reference to this contention it might be suggested (as it has been by the Government) that as the situs of the stock which the securities company has bought is in the States of Wisconsin and Minnesota, which respectively chartered the Northern Pacific and Great Northern Companies, and as the stock owes its being to the laws of those States, and as each State has forbidden the consolidation of competing and parallel lines of railroad therein and has likewise prohibited any consolidation of the 'stock and franchises' of such roads—the contention last mentioned is entitled to little consideration in the case at bar.

"But waiving and ignoring this suggestion, the arguments advanced in behalf of the defendants is met and answered, so far as this court is concerned, by the decision in Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. vs. United States, 175 U. S. 228–229, where it is said inter alia:

"Under this grant of power to Congress (the power to regulate commerce between the several States and with foreign nations) that body, in our judgment, may enact such legislation as shall declare void and prohibit the performance of any contract between individuals or corporations where the natural and direct effect of such a contract will be, when carried out, to directly, and not as a mere incident to other and innocent purposes, regulate, to any substantial extent, interstate commerce. * * * We do not assent to the correctness of the proposition that the constitutional guaranty of liberty to the individual to enter into private contracts, limits the power of Congress and prevents it from legislating on the subject of contracts of the class mentioned. * * * It has been held that the word 'liberty' as used in the Constitution was not to be confined to the mere liberty of persons but included, among others, a right to enter into certain classes of contracts for the purpose of enabling the citizen to carry on his business; * * * But it has never been, and in our opinion ought not to be held, that the word included the right to enter into private contracts upon all subjects no matter what their nature and wholly irrespective, among other things, of the fact that they would, if performed, result in the regulation of interstate commerce, and in violation of an act of Congress upon that subject. The provision of the Constitution does not, as we believe, exclude Congress from legislating with regard to contracts of the above nature while in the exercise of its constitutional right to regulate commerce among the States. On the contrary, we think the provision regarding the liberty of the citizen is to some extent limited by the commerce clause of the Constitution and that the power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce comprises the right to enact a law prohibiting the citizen from entering into those private contracts which directly, and substantially, and not merely indirectly, remotely, incidentally and collaterally, regulate to a greater or less degree commerce among the States. We cannot so enlarge the scope of the language of the Constitution regarding the liberty of the citizen as to hold that it includes or that it was intended to include a right to make a contract which in fact restrained and regulated interstate commerce notwithstanding Congress, proceeding under the constitutional provision giving to it the power to regulate that commerce, had prohibited such contracts.

"These observations, as a matter of course, preclude further controversy over the power of Congress to limit to some extent the right to make contracts when enacting laws for the regulation of commerce between the States.

"Learned counsel for the defendant further contend as follows: That the anti-trust act was not intended to include or prohibit combinations looking to the virtual consolidation of parallel and competing lines of railroad although such a combination operates to stifle competition; that no relief can be granted to the Government in this instance because the combination or conspiracy of which it complains has accomplished its purpose, to-wit, the organization of the securities company and the lodgment of the majority of the stock of the two railroads in its hands before the bill was filed; and finally that the combination proven was one 'formed in aid of commerce and not to restrain it,' in other words, that it was formed to enlarge the volume of interstate traffic and thus benefit the public.

"The court cannot assent to either of these propositions.

"The first, we think, is clearly untenable for the reasons already stated and fully disclosed in the decisions heretofore cited.

"Concerning the second contention, we observe that it would be a novel, not to say absurd, interpretation of the anti-trust act to hold that after an unlawful combination is formed and has acquired the power which it had no right to acquire, namely, to restrain commerce by suppressing competition and is proceeding to use it and execute the purpose for which the combination was formed, it must be left in possession of the power that it has acquired, with full freedom to exercise it. Obviously the act, when fairly interpreted, will bear no such construction. Congress aimed to destroy the power to place any direct restraint on interstate trade or commerce, when by any combination or conspiracy, formed by either natural or artificial persons, such a power had been acquired; and the Government may intervene and demand relief as well after the combination is fully organized as while it is in process of formation. In this instance, as we have already said, the securities company made itself a party to a combination in restraint of interstate commerce, that antedated its organization, as soon as it came into existence, doing so of course under the direction of the very individuals who promoted it.

"Relative to the third contention, which has been pressed with great zeal and ability, this may be said: It may be that such a virtual consolidation of parallel and competing lines of railroad as has been effected, taking a broad view of the situation, is beneficial to the public rather than harmful. It may be that the motives which inspired the combination by which this end was accomplished were wholly laudable and unselfish; that the combination was formed by the individual defendants to protect great interests which had been committed to their charge; or it may be that the combination was the initial and a necessary step in the accomplishment of great designs which if carried out as they were conceived would prove to be of inestimable value to the communities which these roads serve and to the country at large.

"We shall neither affirm nor deny either of these propositions because they present issues which we are not called upon to determine, and some of them involve questions which are not within the province of any court to decide, involving as they do, questions of public policy which Congress must determine. It is our duty to ascertain whether the proof discloses a combination in direct restraint of interstate commerce—that is to say, a combination whereby the power has been acquired to suppress competition between two or more competing and parallel lines of railroad engaged in interstate commerce. If it does disclose such a combination, and we have little hesitation in answering this question in the affirmative, then the anti-trust act, as it has been heretofore interpreted by the court of last resort, has been violated and the Government is entitled to a decree.

"A decree in favor of the United States will accordingly be entered to the following effect: Adjudging that the stock of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern Companies, now held by the securities company, was acquired in virtue of a combination among the defendants, in restraint of trade and commerce among the several States, such as the anti-trust act denounces as illegal; enjoining the securities company from acquiring or attempting to acquire further stock of either of said companies; also enjoining it from voting such stock at any meeting of the stockholders of either of said railroad companies or exercising or attempting to exercise any control, direction, or supervision or influence over the act of said companies or either of them by virtue of its holding such stock; enjoining the Northern Pacific and Great Northern Companies respectively, their officers, directors and agents, from permitting such stock to be voted by the Northern Securities Company or any of its agents or attorneys on its behalf, at any corporate election for directors or officers of either of said companies and likewise enjoining them from paying any dividends to the securities company on account of said stock or permitting or suffering the securities company to exercise any control whatsoever over the corporate acts of said companies or to direct the policy of either; and finally, permitting the securities company to return and transfer to the stockholders of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern Companies, any and all shares of stock of those companies which it may have received from such stockholders in exchange for its own stock, or to make such transfer and assignment to such person or persons as are now the holders and owners of its own stock originally issued in exchange for the stock of said companies."

Decree.

This cause came on to be heard at this term and was argued by counsel (Hon. Philander C. Knox, the Attorney General, Mr. D. T. Watson, special counsel, Mr. James M. Beck and Mr. W. A. Day, Assistant Attorneys General and Mr. John M. Freeman, appearing for the United States, and Mr. George B. Young, Mr. John W. Griggs, Mr. M. D. Grover, Mr. C. W. Bunn, Mr. Francis Lynde Stetson and Mr. David Willcox, appearing for the defendants); and thereupon, upon consideration of the evidence and the arguments,

"It was ordered, adjudged and decreed as follows, to wit:

"That the defendants above named have heretofore entered into a combination or conspiracy in restraint of trade and commerce among the several States, such as an act of Congress, approved July 2, 1890, entitled 'An act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies' denounces as illegal.

"That all the stocks of the Northern Pacific Railway Company and all the stock of the Great Northern Railway Company, now claimed to be owned and held by the defendant, The Northern Securities Company, was acquired and is now held by it in virtue of such combination or conspiracy in restraint of trade and commerce among the several States.

"That the Northern Securities Company, its officers, agents, servants and employés be and they are hereby enjoined from acquiring, or attempting to acquire further stock of either of the aforesaid railway companies;

"that the Northern Securities Company be enjoined from voting the aforesaid stock which it now holds or may acquire and from attempting to vote it, at any meeting of the stockholders of either of the aforesaid railway companies and from exercising or attempting to exercise any control, direction, supervision or influence whatsoever over the acts and doings of said railway companies or either of them by virtue of its holding such stock therein.

"That the Northern Pacific Railway Company and the Great Northern Railway Company, their officers, directors, servants and agents be and they are hereby respectively and collectively enjoined from permitting the stock aforesaid to be voted by the Northern Securities Company, or in its behalf, by its attorneys or agents at any corporate election for directors or officers of either of the aforesaid railway companies,

"and that they, together with their officers, directors, servants and agents, be likewise enjoined and respectively restrained from paying any dividends to the Northern Securities Company on account of stock in either of the aforesaid railway companies which it now claims to own and hold;

"and that the aforesaid railway companies, their officers, directors, servants and agents, be enjoined from permitting or suffering the Northern Securities Companies or any of its officers or agents, as such officers or agents, to exercise any control whatsoever over the corporate acts of either of the aforesaid railway companies.

"But nothing herein contained shall be construed as prohibiting the Northern Securities Company from returning and transferring to the Northern Pacific Railway Company and the Great Northern Railway Company, respectively, any and all shares of stock in either of said railway companies which said, The Northern Securities Company, may have heretofore received from such stockholders in exchange for its own stock; and nothing herein contained shall be construed as prohibiting the Northern Securities Company from making such transfer and assignments of the stock aforesaid to such person or persons as may now be the holders and owners of its own stock originally issued in exchange or in payment for the stock claimed to have been acquired by it in the aforesaid railway companies.

"It is further ordered and adjudged that the United States recover from the defendants its costs herein expended, the same to be taxed by the clerk of this court, and have execution therefor.

United States Circuit Court, District of Minnesota.

UNITED STATES
v.
NORTHERN SECURITIES COMPANY ET AL.

On application for allowance of appeal and supersedeas.

SANBORN, Circuit Judge:

"The defendants in this case have the right under the acts of Congress to appeal from the decree of the circuit court to the Supreme Court. They have claimed that right. Ordinarily those who have the right to review a judgment or decree of the circuit court also have the right upon giving a proper bond to supersede the effect of the judgment or decree during the pendency of the appeal. But where, as in the case at bar, the decree awards an injunction the ordinary supersedeas stays proceedings, but does not raise the injunction.

"To enable the courts to prevent unnecessary loss or injury to the parties to litigation in such cases the Supreme Court provided by rule 93 that when an appeal is allowed from a final decree granting an injunction a judge who took part in the decision may make an order suspending the injunction during the pendency of the appeal upon such terms as to bond or otherwise as he may consider proper for the security of the opposite party. It is the customary practice for the courts to exercise this power whenever their action will not injuriously affect the rights of the party who has secured the injunction. In this case that party is the United States. The main purpose and effect of the decree are to prevent the Northern Securities Company from controlling and operating the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railroads, and to accomplish this end it enjoins that company from exercising any control over their operation and from acquiring or voting any of the stock of the railroad companies, and it also enjoins the railroad companies from paying to the Northern Securities Company any dividends on their stock. This is not an application to suspend this injunction. The defendants ask only that the part of the injunction which forbids the payment of the dividends be suspended during the pendency of the appeal.

"These dividends do not belong, and cannot in any event be paid to the United States. It does not claim to have, and it has not any pecuniary interest in them. Its purpose in prosecuting this suit and its interest in this injunction are only thereby to enforce the law against illegal combinations in restraint of trade and to prevent the Northern Securities Company from controlling, directing, owning, operating or interfering with the competing railroads. This interest, it will be noticed, is protected by that portion of the injunction which forbids the management or control of these railroads by the Northern Securities Company, and forbids it from voting or acquiring any stock of these railroad companies. This portion of the injunction, indeed every part of the decree and of the injunction, is in force and will continue in force during the pendency of this appeal in any event. During this time the United States has and will have under this portion of the decree, which will not be modified or suspended, a complete remedy for any violation of the Sherman anti-trust act, should it occur, both by proceedings for contempt under this injunction and by proceedings under the penal clause of the Sherman anti-trust act.

"The appeal in this case will probably be determined by the Supreme Court about November, 1903. It is not perceived how the payment or the retention of these dividends during the pendency of this appeal can injuriously affect any right of the United States in this litigation, and the only question here is whether these dividends shall be piled up in the treasuries of the railway companies or paid to the stockholders, to whom they legally belong, and who must ultimately receive them whichever way the final decision in this case may be.

"These dividends will ultimately go to the stockholders of the Northern Securities Company whether paid as they are earned or after the final decision. If the railroad companies are permitted to pay their dividends to the securities company, that company will pay them over to its stockholders. The decree permits the stockholders of the securities company to exchange their stock for the stock of the railroad companies for which it was issued. If the Supreme Court affirms this decree, the stockholders of the Northern Securities Company can exchange their stock for the stock of the railroad companies and can draw these dividends upon the latter. If the Supreme Court reverses the decree, the same parties can draw these dividends upon their Northern Securities stock. The retention of the dividends by the railroad companies, while the appeal is pending, would not enhance or speed the enforcement of any legal right of the United States, while it might inflict unnecessary loss and injury upon the stockholders who are justly entitled to receive these dividends as soon as they are earned.

"The order of the court will accordingly be that the operation of that portion of the decree which enjoins the railway companies from paying the dividends upon their stock which is held by the Northern Securities Company be suspended during the pendency of the appeal upon the giving of an approved band in the sum of $50,000 by or on behalf of the defendants, conditioned that they will prosecute their appeal with effect, and will pay all damages that shall result to the United States by reason of the order."

(Endorsed:) Opinion on application to suspend portion of injunction. Filed April 20th, 1903. Henry D. Lang, clerk, by Louise B. Trott, deputy.

vs.
NORTHERN SECURITIES COMPANY ET AL.

Mr. C. A. Houpt, district attorney, for the United States.
Mr. George B. Young, Mr. C. W. Bunn and Mr. M. D. Grover for the defendants.

It is ordered, that upon the giving of an approved bond to the United States by or on behalf of the defendants in the sum of fifty thousand dollars conditioned to prosecute their appeal with effect and to pay all damages which may result to the United States from this order, that portion of the injunction contained in the final decree herein which forbids the Northern Pacific Railway Company and the Great Northern Railway Company, their officers, directors, servants and agents from paying dividends to the Northern Securities Company on account of stock in either of the railway companies which the securities company claims to own and hold is suspended during the pendency of the appeal allowed herein this day. All other portions of the decree and of the injunction it contains remain in force and are unaffected by this order.

(Endorsed:) Order allowing appeal. Filed April 20th, 1903. Henry D. Lang, clerk, by Louise B. Trott, deputy.

Circuit Court of the United States, District of Minnesota, Third Division.

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Petitioner,
vs.
NORTHERN SECURITIES COMPANY, THE GREAT NORTHERN RAILway Company, The Northern Pacific Railway Company, James J. Hill, William P. Clough, D. Willis James, John S. Kennedy, J. Pierpont Morgan, Robert Bacon, George F. Baker, and Daniel Lamont, Defendants.

Now comes the defendants above named and allege that in the proceedings of the circuit court of the United States for the district of Minnesota, third division, in this cause, and in the decree of said court entered therein on the 9th day of April, A. D. 1903, the said court did err in the particulars following:

First.

The court erred in finding and deciding that in the summer of 1901 certain large and influential stockholders of the defendant railway companies conceived the design of placing a very large majority of the stock of both of said companies in the hands of a single owner. And erred in finding and deciding that the stockholders thus described had practical control of the roads of the two defendant railway companies.

Second.

The court erred in finding and deciding that said above described shareholders arranged and agreed with each other that a corporation to be formed by them under the laws of New Jersey should buy all, or at least the greater part, of the stock of each of the defendant railway companies.

Third.

The court erred in finding and deciding that the above described stockholders agreed with each other to exchange their respective holdings of stock in the two defendant railway companies for the stock of such New Jersey company.

Fourth.

The court erred in finding and deciding that the above described stockholders agreed with each other to use their influence to induce other stockholders in their respective companies to exchange their respective holdings of stock in said railway companies for the stock of such New Jersey company, and in deciding that this was to the end that the New Jersey company might become the sole owner of the whole or at least a major portion of the stock of both of said railway companies.

Fifth.

The court erred in finding and deciding that the Northern Securities Company was organized under the plan mentioned in the foregoing assignments, and in finding and deciding that the capital stock of $400,000,000, with which the Northern Securities Company was organized, was the exact amount required to purchase the total stock of the two defendant railway companies at the price agreed to be paid therefor.

Sixth.

The court erred in finding and deciding that when the Northern Securities Company was organized it assented to and became a party to the above mentioned scheme so found by the court as aforesaid to have been devised by its promoters.

Seventh.

The court erred in finding and deciding that the Northern Securities Company was enabled to make purchases of stock of the Great Northern Railway Company from holders thereof not immediately concerned in the organization of the Northern Securities Company, by the advice, procurement and persuasion of those stockholders of said railway company who had been instrumental in organizing the Northern Securities Company.

Eighth.

The court erred in finding and deciding that the scheme so as aforesaid erroneously found by it to have been devised and consummated, placed the control of the railways of said two railway companies in the hands of the Northern Securities Company, and destroyed every motive for competition between said two railway companies by pooling their earnings for the common benefit of the stockholders of both railway companies; and erred in finding and deciding that any such, or any pooling of earnings, was ever contemplated or has ever been made.

Ninth.

The court erred in holding and deciding that all contracts and combinations which merely tend to restrain interstate commerce, whether by suppression of competition or otherwise, are in themselves, and although such tendency does not result in any such restraint, violations of the act of Congress of July 2, 1890, known as the anti-trust act.

Tenth.

The court erred in holding and deciding that all contracts and combinations which merely confer the power to restrain interstate commerce, whether by suppression of competition or otherwise, are in themselves contracts or combinations in restraint of such commerce and declared illegal by the anti-trust act, though such power is not and is not intended to be exercised.

Eleventh.

The court erred in holding and deciding that every combination whereby the power is acquired to suppress competition between two parallel and competing lines of railway operating under State charters and engaged in interstate commerce, is a combination in violation of said anti-trust act whether such power is exercised or intended to be exercised, or not.

Twelfth.

The court erred in holding and deciding that it would have been a violation of said anti-trust act had the individual defendants, in pursuance of a previous agreement so to do, sold their shares of stock in the defendant railway companies to a natural person, and had induced their fellow-shar-holders to do the same with the resulting acquisition, by such individual, of a majority of the stock of each railway company.

Thirteenth.

The court erred in holding and deciding that the interstate commerce of each defendant railway company is controlled by its shareholders and not by its board of directors.

Fourteenth.

The court erred in holding and deciding that the Northern Securities Company directly controls the commerce of both of the defendant railway companies, though by the charter of each company the management of its business is vested in its board of directors, and the companies have and must have separate and distinct boards of directors.

Fifteenth.

The court erred in holding that the ownership of a majority of the shares of each of two competing railway companies gives to the owner of such shares a control over each of such companies and its commerce, which the holder of a majority of the shares of a single railway company was held, in Pullman's Palace Car Company vs. Missouri Pacific Railway Company, 115 U. S. 587, not to possess over such single railway company or its commerce.

Sixteenth.

The court erred in holding and deciding that the constitution and composition of railway companies chartered by States or organized under State laws, but carrying on interstate commerce, are themselves matters of interstate commerce, and, as such, subject to regulation by Congress. And in holding and deciding that under the commerce clause of the Constitution Congress has power to prescribe who may and who shall not be shareholders in such companies, and how much stock any one stockholder or combination of stockholders may own in any such company, and to authorize and forbid the consolidation of such corporati-ns or any of them.

And erred in holding and deciding that the acquisition and holding of stock in such railway companies, and all matters of their internal constitution and composition, are not matters over which the State incorporating such company has exclusive power of regulation. And erred in holding that the authorizing or forbidding of the consolidation of any two such railway companies is not within the exclusive power of the State or States by or under whose laws they have been incorporated.

Seventeenth.

The court erred in holding that consolidations of railway companies created by or under State laws and competitors in interstate commerce, are effectual restraints upon such commerce, and that such consolidations, though expressly authorized by State charter, are violations of said anti-trust act and illegal.

Eighteenth.

The court erred in holding and deciding that any of the defendants have ever attempted to interpose the New Jersey charter of the Northern Securities Company as a shield between themselves and the law, and that such charter is about the only shield that can be so interposed.

Nineteenth.

The court erred in finding and deciding that "the reasoning which led to the acquisition of that (the said New Jersey) charter" was "that while as individuals the promoters could not, by agreement among themselves, place the majority of the stock of the two competing and parallel railroads in the hands of a single person or a few persons, giving him or them the power to operate the roads in harmony and stifle competition, yet that the same persons might create a purely fictitious person termed a corporation, which could neither think nor act except as they directed, and by placing the same stock in the name of such artificial being, accomplish the same purpose."

Twentieth.

The court erred in holding and deciding that the shares of the two defendant railway companies held by the Northern Securities Company have merely been placed in its name by the former holders thereof, and that it is not the absolute owner of the same in its own sole right.

Twenty-first.

The court erred in holding and deciding that, "so far as the New Jersey charter is concerned, the question which the court has to determine is whether a c-arter granted by a State can be used to defeat the will of the national legislature as expressed in a law relating to interstate trade and commerce over which Congress has absolute control."

Twenty-second.

The court erred in holding and deciding that the existing combination gives to a few men acting in concert and in the name of the Northern Securities Company and under cover of its charter the power to control all the means of transportation of the defendant railway companies, and to directly control said companies and all their commerce.

Twenty-third.

The court erred in finding and deciding that "the object and necessary effect" of the combination found by it to exist in this case, "is to give to a single person or to a coterie of persons full control of all the means of transportation owned by two parallel and competing lines of railroad engaged in interstate commerce, as well as the power to fix the rate for the transportation of persons and property."

Twenty-fourth.

The court erred in holding and deciding that the said anti-trust act, if construed as forbidding or restricting the shareholders of the two defendant railway companies from selling their shares to the Northern Securities Company, or exchanging them for shares of that company, or as forbidding or restraining that company from making such purchases or exchanges and holding the railway shares thus acquired as its own, is a valid law and not in conflict with the fifth amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

Twenty-fifth.

The court erred in holding that the said anti-trust act was intended, and was and is effectual, to include and prohibit "virtual consolidations" of parallel and competing railway companies chartered by the several States, and combinations looking to such "virtual consolidations."

Twenty-sixth.

The court erred in holding and deciding that this proceeding can be maintained under section one of said anti-trust act, although it is alleged in the petition itself, and appears by the proofs, that whatever the combination or conspiracy complained of was formed to do had been fully and completely done and effected before this proceeding was begun.

Twenty-seventh.

The court erred in disregarding as immaterial the averments of the answers and the proofs in support thereof, showing that the combination in question was not a combination in restraint of commerce; that its purpose was and its effect has been to very largely build up, increase and protect the interstate and foreign commerce of the two railway companies. And erred in considering not all the effects of said combination upon such commerce, but only its possible effect in restraining a minute portion of such commerce—an effect at the most incidental—and in unduly magnifying the extent and importance of such incidental restraint, and holding the same to be the principal, if not the only purpose and effect of such combination.

Twenty-eighth.

The court erred in holding that the proofs disclosed any contract, combination or conspiracy in restraint of interstate or foreign commerce, or any other combination than one to build up and enlarge interstate and foreign commerce without any restraining of either.

Twenty-ninth.

The court erred in deciding and decreeing "that the defendants have heretofore entered into a combination or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States, such as an act of Congress, approved July 2, 1890, * * * denounces as illegal."

Thirtieth.

The court erred in deciding and decreeing that all of the stock of either of the defendant railway companies, claimed to be held and owned by the defendant Northern Securities Company, was acquired and is now held by the Northern Securities Company in virtue of the combination or conspiracy mentioned in the last preceding assignment, and erred in decreeing that any of said stock was acquired or is held in virtue of any such combination or conspiracy.

Thirty-first.

The court erred in decreeing that the Northern Securities Company be enjoined, and in enjoining it, from acquiring or attempting to acquire any further stock of either of the defendant railway companies, and from voting any stock at any stockholders' meeting of either railway company, and from exercising or attempting to exercise any control, direction, supervision or influence whatever over the acts of either railway company by virtue of its holding of stock therein.

Thirty-second.

The court erred in decreeing that each defendant railway company, and its directors, officers, agents and servants be enjoined, and in enjoining them, from permitting the shares thereof held by the Northern Securities Company to be voted at any corporate election of such railway company; and from paying to that company any dividend on the stock of such railway company which it now claims to own and hold; and from permitting or suffering that company or any of its officers or agents to exercise any control whatsoever over any of the corporate acts of such railway company.

Thirty-third.

The court erred in deciding and decreeing that the Northern Securities Company does not and cannot lawfully hold shares in even one of the defendant railway companies, and has not and cannot enjoy or exercise the rights and powers incident to such ownership; and in decreeing injunctions depriving it of all rights of a stockholder in either one of the two railway companies.

Thirty-fourth.

The court erred in rendering any decree save a decree for a dismissal of the petition and proceeding.

And the defendants pray that for the errors aforesaid, the said decree may be in all things reversed, and that said circuit court be directed to decree a dismissal of said petition and proceeding.

vs.
NORTHERN SECURITIES COMPANY, THE GREAT NORTHERN RAILway Company, The Northern Pacific Railway Company, James J. Hill, William P. Clough, D. Willis James, John S. Kennedy, J. Pierpont Morgan, Robert Bacon, George F. Baker, and Daniel Lamont, Defendants.

Know all men by these presents, that the, the National Surety Company, a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York, and with full power to execute this obligation, is held and firmly bound to the United States of America, in the full sum of twenty thousand dollars, for which payment well and truly to be made the said National Surety Company does bind itself and its successors firmly by these presents.

Whereas, in the above entitled cause an final decree was rendered and entered in said circuit court on the ninth day of April, A. D. 1903, in favor of the United States and against said defendants, and the above named defendants having prayed an appeal therefrom to the Supreme Court of the United States,

Now, therefore, the condition of this obligation is such that if the said defendants shall prosecute their appeal to effect and answer all damages and costs if they fail to make their plea good, then this obligation to be void; otherwise to remain in full force and effect.

In witness whereof, the said National Surety Company has caused this obligation to be signed by its resident vice president and its resident assistant secretary, in that behalf severally duly authorized, and its corporate seal to be hereto affixed, this twentieth day of April A. D. 1903.

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Petitioners,
vs.
NORTHERN SECURITIES COMPANY, THE GREAT NORTHERN RAILway Company, The Northern Pacific Railway Company, James J. Hill, William P. Clough, D. Willis James, John S. Kennedy, J. Pierpont Morgan, Robert Bacon, George F. Baker, and Daniel Lamont, Defendants.

Know all men by these presents: that the National Surety Company, a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York, and duly authorized by law to enter into this obligation, is held and firmly bound to the United States of America in the sum of fifty thousand dollars, for which payment well and surely to be made the said National Surety Company does bind itself, and its successors firmly by these presents.

Whereas, in the above entitled cause a final decree was rendered by said court in favor of the United States of America and against the defendants above named, on the ninth day of April A. D. 1903, and the said defendants have prayed an appeal from said decree to the Supreme Court of the United States, and have also applied for an order suspending during the pendency of the appeal the operation of so much of said decree as enjoins each of the above named railway companies from paying any dividends to the Northern Securities Company on the stock owned by said Northern Securities Company in said railway companies respectively, and the said order having been made:

Now, therefore, the condition of this obligation is such that if the said defendants shall prosecute their said appeal with effect and shall well and truly pay to the United States of America all damages and costs which the said United States may suffer or incur by reason of the making of said order suspending said injunction during the pendency of said appeal, then this obligation to be void; otherwise to remain in full force and effect.

In witness whereof, the said National Surety Company has caused this obligation to be signed by its resident vice-president and its resident assistant secretary, in that behalf severally duly authorized, and its corporate seal to be hereby affixed this twentieth day of April A. D. 1903.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, ss:

To the United States of America:

You are hereby cited and admonished to appear at the Supreme Court of the United States at the city of Washington in the District of Columbia on the nineteenth day of May A. D. 1903, pursuant to an appeal allowed and filed in the office of the clerk of the circuit court of the United States for the district of Minnesota, third division, wherein The Northern Securities Company, The Great Northern Railway Company, The Northern Pacific Railway Company, James J. Hill, William P. Clough, D. Willis James, John S. Kennedy, J. Pierpont Morgan, Robert Bacon, George F. Baker and Daniel Lamont are appellants and The United States of America are appellees, to show cause, if any there be, why the decree of said circuit court entered therein on the 9th day of April, 1903, and in said appeal mentioned and from which said appeal is taken, should not be corrected, and why speedy justice should not be done in the premises.

Witness, the Honorable Melville W. Fuller, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, this 20th day of April in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and three.

WALTER H. SANBORN,
Circuit Judge.

NORTHERN SECURITIES COMPANY, THE GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, THE NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY, JAMES J. HILL, WILLIAM P. CLOUGH, D. WILLIS JAMES, JOHN S. KENNEDY, J. PIERPONT MORGAN, ROBERT BACON, GEORGE F. BAKER AND DANIEL LAMONT,

Appellants,

[Note—The Roman numerals indicate the volumes, and the Arabic the pages, of the Record.]

This is a suit in equity, brought by the United States, under the Act of Congress, of July 2, 1890, known as the Anti-Trust Act, or Sherman Act.

The Petition.

The petition charges that the defendant J. Pierpont Morgan and others, styled his associates, and the defendant James J. Hill, and others, styled his associates, owning or controlling a majority of the stock of the two defendant railway companies, (which will in this brief be called the Great Northern Co. and the Northern Pacific Co., respectively), combined and conspired together on November 13, 1901, to effect a "virtual consolidation" of the two railway companies, and to monopolize and restrain their competitive interstate and foreign commerce "through the instrumentality and means following" (and no others), viz., by forming the Northern Securities Co., a corporation under the laws of New Jersey, and transferring to it the stock (being a majority or controlling interest) held by them in the two railway companies. That such transfer would give the Securities Co. the monopoly complained of, because effecting a "virtual consolidation" of the two railway companies and their systems, and a "practical pooling" of their earnings in the hands of the Securities Co., (since that company would receive from each railway company the dividends payable on the shares of such company held by it), and would vest in the Securities Co. the selection of the directors and officers of both railway companies, "with not only the power, but the duty" (i. e. on the part of such directors and officers) "to pursue a policy which would promote, not the interests of one system at the expense of the other, but of both at the expense of the public."

It is suggested rather than alleged that the conspirators had been brooding over their conspiracy ever since 1896, when a contract involving (as this Court held) the acquisition of Northern Pacific stock by the Great Northern Co., and not by its stockholders, was held, in Pearsall v. Great Northern Ry. Co., 161 U. S. 646, to violate a statute of Minnesota.

And the petition also charges that a purchase of substantially all the shares of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Rd. Co., made by the Great Northern Co. and Northern Pacific Co. in April, 1901, at a cost of over $200,000,000, was merely a step toward placing the shares of the two last-named companies under a common source of control.

The petition charges that the conspiracy was carried out, and that the Securities Co. acquired the shares of the conspirators and also additional shares in both railway companies, so that it now (i. e. at the beginning of this suit) holds "as owner and proprietor" substantially all the capital stock of the Northern Pacific Co., and a controlling interest if not a majority of that of the Great Northern Co., and that the "virtual consolidation," monopolizing, suppression of competition, etc., which were the objects of the conspiracy, have been fully effected.

It is charged in the petition that the Securities Co. "was not organized in good faith to purchase and pay for the stocks of" the two railway companies, and that it never had money enough to do so; and that the only consideration for the transfer to it of the shares of the two railway companies was the issue and delivery of its own shares in exchange therefor.

The petition, in paragraph VI, says that the purpose of the conspirators was that the Securities Co. should become the absolute owner of the shares transferred to it, and the interest of the transferrors "was to terminate" and they "were to be eliminated." In paragraph VII, it is said that the Securities Co. is now holding all such shares "as owner and proprietor." But in paragraph XI it is alleged, with equal positiveness, that the Securities Co. "is a mere depository, custodian, holder and trustee" of the same shares. Of course the earlier statements prevail against the pleader, especially as the Securities Co. could not at the same time fill all the positions assigned to it in paragraph XI in respect to all the shares held by it.

The relief demanded (inter alia) is that each railway company be enjoined from permitting the Securities Co. to vote or receive dividends on the shares of such company held by it; that the Securities Co. be enjoined from voting or receiving dividends on such stock; and that the Securities Co. be compelled to recall and cancel all certificates of stock issued by it in purchase of or exchange for the shares of either railway company, and to surrender in return therefor the certificates of the railway shares in lieu of which they were issued.

(It will be observed that the claim of the government is that the Securities Co. has no right to retain its holding of shares in even one of the two railway companies).

THE ANSWER.

The answer puts in issue every one of the foregoing statements of the petition, except the actual formation of the Securities Co. and its purchase of shares of the two railway companies, in exchange for its own shares.

It says (Par. II.) that at and before the date of organization of that company, the Great Northern stockholders numbered 1800 and the Northern Pacific stockholders 3500. And that the persons named in the petition as owning or controlling a majority of the Great Northern stock, never owned or controlled as much as one-third of that stock. And the persons named as owning or controlling a majority of Northern Pacific stock never owned or controlled as much as one-third of that stock.

It denies (Par. VI.) the making of the combination or conspiracy charged in paragraph VI of the petition, and denies all the purposes therein imputed to the organizers of the Securities Co.

It denies (Par. VIII.) that any change has taken place in the directorate or management of either railway company since the organization of the Securities Co., or that any of the things done by any of the defendants, their promoters, directors, officers, or stockholders, were done in pursuance of the pretended conspiracy alleged in the petition, and denies that any virtual or other consolidation of the railway companies or their business has been effected or attempted, and denies any conspiracy or intention to restrain trade or commerce, etc.

It says (Par. XI.) that in every one of its acquisitions of shares of either railway company, the Securities Co. has dealt solely with the owner of such shares individually and separately, and that the transfers to it have been absolute and without reserve. Besides payments made by it in its own stock, the Securities Co. has expended upwards of $40,000,000 in cash, in the purchase of the shares held by it. Those shares it holds, and, so long as they remain its property, it will continue to hold, in its own right free from any agreement or understanding that in any manner restricts its right and power of immediate sale, or its right to make any use of them that other owners of such stocks might make.

In the second half of the answer, is stated in detail (in Par. I.) the origin and progress of an enterprise of the two defendant railway companies to build up a great interstate and oriental commerce; the necessity of the fullest access to the territory traversed by the Burlington lines as a market for their east-bound and a source of supply of west-bound traffic; the purchase of the Burlington shares to supply that need, and for no other purpose, and with no purpose to lessen competition of the defendant railways with the Burlington lines or with each other.

In Par. II, the answer states the origin and history of the project of an investment company, which finally developed into the Securities Co.; states the attempt of persons hostile to the development of the enterprise and the business of the defendant railway companies to obtain control of the Northern Pacific Co.; that such attempt was narrowly defeated and might at any time be renewed, and, if successful, would destroy the interstate and oriental commerce the companies were building up, and would defeat the purposes for which the Burlington shares had been bought; and that as a necessary means of protecting and defending the interstate and foreign commerce of the two railway companies, including their competitive commerce here in question, and the interest of their stockholders therein, the Securities Co. was formed. There has been no agreement among the stockholders of the Securities Co., (who are more than 1300 in number) or between them and any person or corporation as to how they should use or vote their stock. The persons concerned in the formation of the Securities Co. have never held, owned, or controlled an amount of its stock equal to so much as one-third of the amount of it now outstanding.

The Securities Co. was not formed as a scheme or device to evade the Anti-trust Act, and none of those who formed it or sold their shares of stock to it, had any purpose to restrain commerce or lessen competition or monopolize traffic. Since its formation rates on both lines have been voluntarily reduced so as to decrease their annual net earnings by upwards of $1,000,000. The competitive interstate traffic of the two railways, for which the two railway companies have power to fix rates independently of the action of other carriers, does not exceed three per cent of their total interstate traffic. (Par. III.)

The sale and transfer of property, whether in the form of corporate stock or otherwise, is not in violation of the Anti-trust Act. The Securities Co. is not a railway company, has no power to operate railways, or control rates, or monopolize or restrain traffic of any kind.

The Securities Co. was not organized for the purpose of acquiring a majority of the stock of either railway company, but merely to purchase the stock of those who wished to sell. The transactions complained of have consisted in the organization of a lawful corporation and the purchase of property by it, have been expressly authorized by law, and have had no effect whatever to restrain interstate or foreign commerce. If they should hereafter have any such effect (which is denied) that effect will be merely indirect, remote, and incidental and collateral and not intended, and as nothing compared with the great expansion of the volume of interstate and international commerce which was intended, and, it is believed, is destined to result from the enterprise of the two railway companies which culminated in the purchase of the Burlington stock.

The Anti-trust Act was not intended to prevent or defeat an enterprise in aid of a great competitive interstate and international commerce, merely because such enterprise may carry with it the possibility of incidental restraint upon some commerce trifling both as respects territory and volume.

Nor was the act intended to limit the powers of the several states to create corporations, define their purposes, fix the amount of their capital, and determine who may buy, own and sell their stock. Such a construction would make it unconstitutional (1) because the power to regulate commerce among the States does not include the power to regulate matters above mentioned in reference to State corporations; and, (2) because it is depriving persons of their property without due process of law to take from them the right to sell it as their interest may suggest.

The answer also pleads a defect of necessary parties defendant. The persons who sold railway stock to the Securities Co. were 1300 or more in number, only a few of whom had any connection with the planning or forming of the Securities Co., and, in their absence from this litigation, no decree can be made affecting their rights.

The Decision.

The cause was heard before the four Circuit Judges of the Eighth Circuit in accordance with the Act of Congress for expediting causes of this nature.

The decision was for the government, and was based on the following findings of fact:

1. That certain large and influential stockholders of the two defendant railway companies, "who have been made parties defendant to the present bill," having "practical control of the two roads," and "acting in concert with each other, conceived the design of placing a very large majority of the stock of both of the last named companies in the hands of a single owner."

[The errors in this statement are the subject of the first assignment of error].

2. To this end these stockholders arranged and agreed with each other to cause the formation of a New Jersey corporation which, when organized, "should buy all or at least the greater part of the stock of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern companies."

[The error in this statement is the subject of the second assignment of error.]

3. "The individuals who conceived and promoted this plan" (i. e. the individual defendants), "agreed with each other to exchange their respective holdings of stock in the railroad companies for the stock of the New Jersey company when the same should be fully organized, and to use their influence to induce other stockholders to do likewise, to the end that the New Jersey company might become the sole owner of the whole or at least a major portion of the stock of both railroad companies."

[The error in this finding is the subject of the third and fourth assignments of error].

4. "In accordance with this plan the Securities Co. was organized on November 13, 1901, under the laws of New Jersey, with a capital stock of $400,000,000, that sum being the exact amount required to purchase the total stock of the two railroad companies at the price agreed to be paid therefor."

[The error in this finding is the subject of the fifth assignment of error].

5. "When the Securities Co. was organized it assented to and became a party to the scheme which had been devised by its promoters before it became a legal entity."

[The error in this finding is the subject of the sixth assignment of error].

6. Very shortly after its organization the Securities Co. acquired a large majority of all the stock of the Northern Pacific Co. at the rate of $115 per share, paying therefor in its own stock at par.

7. At the same time it acquired about 300,000 shares of the Great Northern Co. from its promoters, at $180 per share, paying in its own stock at par.

8. The Securities Co. subsequently made further purchases of Great Northern stock at the same price, until in about three months, it had acquired about $95,000,000 (of the total $125,000,000) stock of that company, using $171,000,000 of its own stock in payment.

"The Securities Company was enabled to make the subsequent purchases of stock from stockholders of the Great Northern Co. not immediately concerned in the organization of the Securities Co., by the advice, procurement and persuasion of those stockholders of the Great Northern Co. who had been instrumental in organizing the Securities Co. and had exchanged their own stock for the stock of that company shortly after its organization"—that is these individual defendants.

[The error in this finding is the subject of the seventh assignment of error].

9. At the date of the decision "the Securities Co. is the owner of about 96 per cent of all the stock of the Northern Pacific Co., and the owner of about 76 per cent of all the stock of the Great Northern Co."

10. "The scheme which was thus devised and consummated led inevitably to the following results:

"(1) It placed the control of the two roads in the hands of a single person, to-wit: the Securities Co., by virtue of its ownership of a large majority of the stock of both companies.

"(2) It destroyed every motive for competition between two roads engaged in interstate traffic, which were natural competitors for business, by pooling the earnings of the two roads for the common benefit of the stockholders of both companies.

"And, according to the familiar rule that every one is presumed to intend what is the necessary consequence of his own acts when done wilfully and deliberately, we must conclude that those who conceived and executed the plan aforesaid intended, among other things, to accomplish these objects."

[The error in this finding is the subject of the eighth assignment of error].

To the facts thus stated by it the court applies the following legal propositions:

1. All contracts or combinations which merely tend to restrain interstate commerce or merely confer the power to restrain such commerce, whether by suppression of competition or otherwise, are, in themselves, and although such tendency is never realized nor such power exercised, or intended to be exercised, violations of the Anti-trust Act—and this though the commerce is that of railway companies operating under state charters.

[These rulings form the subject of the 9th, 10th and 11th assignments of error].

2. The individual defendants would have violated the Anti-trust Act if, in pursuance of a previous understanding or agreement so to do, they "had transferred their stock in the two railroad companies to a third party or parties, and had agreed to induce other shareholders to do likewise, until a majority of the stock of both companies had been vested in a single individual or association of individuals, and had empowered the holder or holders to vote the stock as their own, receive all the dividends thereon and pro rate or divide them among all shareholders of the two companies who had transferred their stock. The result would have been a combination in direct restraint of interstate commerce because it would have placed in the hands of a small coterie of men the power to suppress competition between two competing interstate carriers whose lines are practically parallel."

[The court in the foregoing paragraph (which forms the subject of the 12th assignment of error) is assuming a case very different from the present one. Here the Securities Co. is absolute owner of its shares. Its power over the shares and their income, and its power to suppress competition (so far as it may possess any such power), are alike incidents of its ownership—its absolute ownership—of the stock. They rest on that ownership alone, and are not conferred on it by any agreement.

But in the case supposed by the Court, the transferree is not absolute owner. He is a mere nominal holder of the stock. The transferrors "empower" him to receive all dividends on it, and pro rate or divide them among all the transferrors. The transferree derives his power (if any) to suppress competition from his transferrors, and does not possess it as an incident of absolute ownership of the stock. He is not such absolute owner, and the case imagined by the Court is what is commonly called a "Trust," and is entirely different from that of the Securities Co., and no inference can be drawn from the former to the latter.]

3. Though each railroad company has its own board of directors, still they do not operate independently, but are controlled by those who own the majority of the stock.

The case of Pullman Car Co. v. Missouri Pacific R. Co., 115 U. S. 587, 596, was a case of private contract, and the decision that the directors and not the stockholders control the corporation,

"Cannot be held applicable to cases arising under the Anti-trust Act, where the point involved is whether the ownership of all the stock of two competing and parallel railroads vests the owner thereof with the power to suppress competition between such roads. We entertain no doubt that it does. Indeed we regard suppression of competition, and to that extent a restraint of commerce, as the natural and inevitable result of such ownership."

[In this paragraph (which forms the subject of the 13th and 14th assignments of error) the Northern Securities Co. appears as owner of the stock, and the power to suppress competition as an incident of such ownership, and its suppression as the result of such ownership not as the exercise of a power to suppress conferred on it by others.

The Court seems to have overlooked the wide difference between a suppression of competition which is incident to ownership of property (as when one of two competing tradesmen buys out the other) and a suppression effected by means of a contract, as when two competing tradesmen agree not to sell below a named price].

4. "By what has been done the power has been acquired (and provision made for maintaining it) to suppress competition between two interstate carriers who own and operate competing and parallel lines of railroad. Competition, we think, would not be more effectually restrained than it now is under and by force of the existing arrangement if the two railroad companies were consolidated under a single charter."

[That is, a consolidation of two railway companies doing an interstate business, though expressly authorized by the state or states of their creation, suppresses competition and so restrains interstate commerce and violates the Anti-trust law and is illegal, and the charter provisions authorizing it are of course unconstitutional, the consolidation of corporations doing an interstate business being a matter of interstate commerce which congress alone can regulate. And this although the suppression of competition is simply an incident of the ownership by one company of what formerly belonged to two, such single ownership being the result of the consolidation. The foregoing is the subject of the 16th and 17th assignments of error].

5. The Court, having thus shown that as the promoters of the Securities Co. could not lawfully transfer a majority of shares of the two railroad companies to one or a few persons giving them power to operate the roads in harmony and stifle competition, concludes that "it is manifest therefore, that the New Jersey charter is about the only shield which the defendants can interpose between themselves and the law," and gives to the promoters of the Securities Co. credit for the astute idea that what they could not lawfully do themselves could lawfully be done for them by a corporation created for the purpose—and this even though the Anti-trust act declares that the word person shall include corporation. The foregoing forms the subject of the 18th and 19th assignments of error.

[It is needless to say that we claim no power for the Securities Co. that could not be held and exercised by an individual or partnership. If they could not lawfully buy and hold these stocks, the Securities Co. cannot. If they could lawfully do so then the Securities Co. can, and it can buy and hold the stocks precisely because an individual or firm might do so].

The court assumes that the shares held by the Securities Co. have merely been "placed in its name," and that it is not the owner thereof.

[This error is the subject of the 20th assignment of error].

The court holds that the New Jersey charter presents a question for the court to decide "whether a charter granted by a state can be used to defeat the will of the National Legislature," etc.

[This passage forms the subject of the 21st assignment of error].

6. Answering the objection that any restraint of commerce exercised by the Securities Co. is merely indirect, the court says:

"It is pertinent, therefore, to inquire in what way the existing combination that has been formed does affect interstate commerce. It affects it, we think, by giving to a single corporate entity, or, more accurately, to a few men acting in concert and in its name and under cover of its charter, the power to control all the means of transportation that are owned by two competing and parallel railroads engaged in interstate commerce; in other words, the power to dictate every important act which the two companies may do."

[This forms the subject of the 22nd assignment of error].

The court cites and distinguishes the various cases under the Anti-trust Act in this court, and fails to find in them "any suggestion that a combination such as the one in hand, the object and necessary effect of which is to give to a single person or to a coterie of persons full control of all the means of transportation owned by two competing and parallel lines of road engaged in interstate commerce, as well as the power to fix the rate for the transportation of persons and property, does not directly and immediately affect interstate commerce."

[The foregoing forms the subject of the 23rd assignment of error].

7. After disposing of the point that the Anti-trust law, if applied to this case, is invalid as depriving citizens of liberty of contract (its conclusion forming the subject of the 24th assignment of error), and overruling the point that the Anti-trust Act was not intended to include or prohibit combinations looking to the virtual consolidation of parallel and competing lines of railroad chartered by the several states (see the 25th assignment of error), the court takes up the contention that the conspiracy charged in the bill had done its work and come to an end before suit brought, and so there is nothing to restrain or prevent; and the act gives the court no jurisdiction to undo what has been done.

It meets this by repeating the statement that "the Securities Co. made itself a party to a combination in restraint of commerce that antedated its organization, as soon as it came into existence, doing so of course, under the direction of the very individuals who promoted it."

[This forms the subject of the 26th assignment of error. The bill nowhere alleges any such addition to the "combination," nor is there a scintilla of evidence of it. The bill charges that the combination or conspiracy was formed to organize the Securities Co. and transfer to it a majority of the shares of the two railway companies, and that this has all been done. And even if the Securities Co. joined the combination as soon as born, the conspiracy was equally at an end, for there is no pretense that its terms were changed on the accession of the Securities Co.]

8. A point considered important was made by the defendants, as it will be made on this appeal, to the effect that even though the formation and stock purchases of the Securities Co., taken by themselves, might operate to restrain commerce, yet, taking the transaction as a whole of which these matters formed a part, the whole transaction so far from restraining even the three per cent competitive traffic of the railways, was necessary to protect and did and does in fact protect the interstate commerce of both roads, and operates to preserve and enlarge that commerce and not to restrain it.

The Court, however, regards this as merely an argument that an admitted restraint of trade is beneficial to the public and hence not unlawful, and disallows it.

[This ruling forms the subject of the 27th and 28th assignments of error].

THE DECREE.

The Court accordingly prepared and entered a decree—

1. Adjudging that the stock of the two railway companies now claimed to be held and owned by the Securities Co. was acquired and is now held in virtue of a combination or conspiracy theretofore entered into by the defendants in restraint of trade and commerce among the several states such as the Anti-trust Act denounces as illegal.

[This forms the subject of the 29th and 30th assignments of error].

2. Enjoining the Securities Co., its officers, etc.

(a) From acquiring or attempting to acquire any more of such stock.

(b) From voting any such stock at any meeting of stockholders of either railway company.

(c) From exercising or attempting to exercise any control, direction, supervision, or influence on the acts of either railway company by virtue of its holding of stock therein.

[The foregoing forms the subject of the 31st and 33rd assignments of error).

3. Enjoining each railway company, its officers, etc.

(a) From allowing the Securities Co. or its attorneys or agents to vote the stock held by it.

(b) From paying any dividends on such stock to the Securities Co.

(c) From permitting the Securities Co., or its officers, etc., to exercise any control over the corporate acts of such railway companies.

[The foregoing is the subject of the 32nd assignment of error].

The decree further provides that it shall not be construed as preventing a re-exchange between the Securities Co. and those to whom it has issued its own shares in exchange for those of either railway company.

By order of Judge Sanborn, the injunction against payment of dividends was suspended pending this appeal.

STATEMENT OF THE FACTS.

The court refused altogether to consider the position of defendants (or the evidence sustaining it) that the formation of the Securities Co. and its stock purchases, were not to gain control of the two railroad companies, but were made (as stated in the answer) to defend, and were necessary to defend, from destruction an enterprise of the defendant railway companies for the creation and development of a great volume of interstate and oriental commerce, and properly became part of that enterprise and must be considered in connection with that interest, to determine their character as restraints of commerce or otherwise.

It therefore becomes necessary to set forth at some length both the evidence as well as the facts on this branch of the case, as well as on those points immediately connected with the formation of the Securities Co. as to which the Court has fallen into serious errors of fact and of law.

(1) The Enterprise of Creating a Great Oriental as well as Interstate Commerce.

(2) Methods adopted. Progress of the Enterprise down to the purchase of the Burlington Shares.

(1) The Great Northern Co. was chartered by Minnesota, the Northern Pacific Co. by Wisconsin. Each has eastern termini at St. Paul and at Lake Superior, and its western terminus at Puget Sound. They are to a certain extent competing lines for interstate traffic. The main line of the Great Northern Co. was mostly built by the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Co., a corporation organized by Mr. Hill and others in 1879, and of which he was president until, in February, 1890, all the lines of the Manitoba Co., constructed and to be constructed, were leased for 999 years to the Great Northern Co., of which company he became and has ever since been president. The policy of these companies of which he was president has largely if not entirely been on the lines recommended by Mr. Hill, not because of any stock control, for he and his immediate associates never held more than 30 per cent of the stock (I, 698), but because of the confidence which the remarkable ability and success of his policy and management inspired in all the shareholders.

In 1887, the line of the Manitoba Co. had been completed to Helena, Montana. In 1889, that company began an extension of its line to Puget Sound, which was opened for travel in 1893.

Before beginning this extension the company thoroughly investigated the resources of the country that the railway would traverse, and the kind and quantity of traffic it would be likely to obtain. The country was sparsely populated and could furnish little freight except its natural products, such as lumber and minerals, etc.

Whatever commodities the region might furnish for carriage would be raw material of great weight and bulk in proportion to its value, which would not bear transportation to a market except at extremely low mileage rates, such as could be made possible only by a great volume of traffic in both directions and every practicable reduction in the cost of transportation.

In Washington and Oregon are the largest and finest bodies of standing timber in the United States, the best market for which is in the prairie States between the Mississippi River and the Rocky Mountains; but the lumber and shingles from the Pacific Coast would not bear the cost of transportation to those states if the cars carrying them had to be hauled back empty, or nearly so, for a distance of from 1,500 to 2,000 miles. "Any rate that would pay the cost of moving a car from the eastern terminal to the coast empty, to bring eastward a carload of lumber, would be prohibitory." (Mr. Hill, I, 667). And the same is true of the other products. On the other hand, the unoccupied or sparsely populated country along the line, or reached by it, could not furnish a market for commodities enough to load the returning cars—at least when the lumber traffic should have grown to any magnitude; the result being that unless the company could secure traffic for carriage beyond the Pacific Coast no great commerce either way could exist or be created.

(2) To meet the conditions under which it must create the traffic necessary to its own successful operation, the company went to great additional expense in the location and construction of its road to obtain gradients lower than those of any ine to the Pacific Coast. It spent over $800,000.00 in explorations and surveys before any construction work was done, and Mr. Hill personally took part in these explorations, and examined the soil, water and climate of the country (I, 665). It also made strenuous efforts to create an eastern demand for the lumber of the coast—to create a market for it which did not before exist, in territory where there was little knowledge of it, for the rate on lumber eastward had been 90 cents per hundred, which was prohibitory. To stimulate eastern shipments, Mr. Hill met the representative lumber manufacturers. They thought a rate of 65 cents would enable them to ship their lumber East. Mr. Hill thought otherwise and that they could not pay over 50 cents. And so the company made a rate of 40 cents, and thus began a traffic, which though still in its infancy "has been very largely developed." (Mr. Hill, I, 667).

In the first years of the operation of the road, and before the lumber trade had attained large proportions, the west-bound traffic was more than sufficient to fill the returning cars, the Alaska trade furnishing a large west-bound movement. But as the lumber traffic increased, it became apparent that the east-bound would ere long exceed the west-bound traffic, and "that carried us to investigating the different markets to which we could send anything that was made in the East." (I, 669). For this purpose men were sent to China and Japan, one of them was kept there over a year. "His business was to get a manifest of every vessel that entered or left a Chinese or Japanese port as far as he could; to find what the exports and the imports of those countries consisted of and where they went." (I, 668).

How a Japanese company put on a line of steamships connecting at Seattle with the Great Northern line, and how the first shipments of rails and cotton to Japan were procured, is thus stated by Mr. Hill, (I, 669-670):

> "In 1896, in the fall, we had just closed an agreement with the Japanese General Steamship Company to put on a line of through steamers running to our terminal at Seattle, in connection with our road; and the conditions of the contract were such as to enable us to make a rate from the East to the Orient. I remember when those men were present with us. Some of them were interested in securing rails for their railways. I asked them where they were going to get their rails. Well, they thought they would either get Belgian rails or English rails. The Belgian rails would come from Antwerp, the English rails from Middlesboro. I asked them, as they were going to stay here for a day or two, to let me see what could be done for American rails. I immediately cabled to my friends in London and got quotations for Antwerp and Middlesboro rails, and the best charters to Yokohama. I remember that the rails could be laid down at about $29, the English or Belgian rails. I telegraphed to Chicago. The time was rather a quiet one in American manufactures, especially with the rail-mills, (the Joliet and one or two others were about closing down), three or four weeks before election, and possibly they were a little anxious to keep their mill running. I told them if they would make a rate of $19.50, we would give them a rate of eight dollars a ton—of 40 cents a hundred—from Chicago to Yokohama, which would be $1.50 a ton lower than the English or Belgian quotations. After some hesitation they made the rate and got the contract for 15,000 tons. That is one case. The cotton business: Some Japanese were passing through. The men I had out there reported the amount of cotton spun in Japan and the fact that the cotton came—the raw cotton came—mainly from India; a short staple cotton, which made an inferior yarn and sold at a low price. I got these gentlemen to try a small shipment of American cotton, with the guaranty, if it did not prove profitable to mix our long staple with their short staple of India, that I would pay for the cotton. The result of that was very satisfactory. The cotton trade has grown very fast, both raw and manufactured, but especially raw cotton."

The growth of this commerce is thus stated by Mr. Hill, (I, 682):

"In 1901 the amount of cotton piece goods was 13,070 bales; 1902, 64,542 bales. Raw cotton in 1901 was 13,230,000 pounds against 41,230,000 pounds the next year."

"Outside of cotton—take nails, wire, articles of that kind—that business has grown to be of very large dimensions, but our rate is a very low one. From Lake Erie to Hong Kong it is 45 cents a hundred, $9 a ton, on those commodities. But the demand for American steel at home makes it almost a matter of indifference whether they send it or not, and we have to look not only to cotton, but to anything that will furnish us business going to the west." (I, 678).

Prior to 1900 the company became unable to get tonnage sufficient for its oriental traffic, and started to build two ships of its own, of 28,000 tons each, the largest carrying capacity of anything afloat. When Mr. Hill was examined, these were nearly ready for launching (I, 681-2). One has since been launched and is nearly ready for sea. The object of so great tonnage was to be able to make low rates. (I, 683).

(3) In the interstate and international commerce which the Great Northern Co. has thus labored to create and extend, it competes both in this country and on the high sea with the other transcontinental lines, including the Canadian Pacific railway.

But this competition "is a small matter." (Mr. Hill, I, 736). The important competition is "with the Suez canal, * * * with anything that floats on the high seas, * * * with markets, with goods. * * * The competition extends all the way through from the production—the transportation, the cost of laying them down," at oriental ports. (I, 680). And again: "We are not competing with them," (the other transcontinental lines). "We are competing with the conditions that are made applicable through the Suez canal, and through any possible route to get it to the Orient. We have to meet whatever the conditions are or else not do it" —i. e., not carry the traffic (I, 681).

In short this competition in the Orient is a competition with the manufacturers and the commerce of the world, and the rates must be made in competition with the markets of Europe and with the rates of Ocean carriers, whether by way of either Cape or by the Suez Canal.

The policy thus followed by the Great Northern Co. in building up an international, and thereby an interstate commerce, has been followed by the Northern Pacific Co. since its reorganization in 1896. In that year the lines of the Northern Pacific Rail*road* Company (chartered by Congress in 1864) were bought at a foreclosure sale by the present Northern Pacific Co., a corporation chartered some years before by the State of Wisconsin. The purchase was for the benefit of the holders of the securities of the Northern Pacific Rail*road* Co., who became entitled to shares of the purchasing company. The capital of the latter—the Northern Pacific Co., defendant in this cause—was fixed at 155 millions, divided into 80 millions of common and 75 millions of preferred stock. The latter was meant to have but a temporary existence, the company having the right to pay it off at par and cancel it on January 1st of any year until 1917. (I, 374-5, 381). In accordance with the reorganization agreement all the shares, both of preferred and common stock, were vested in and held by J. Pierpont Morgan and four others as "voting trustees," with sole power of voting thereon. This trust was to continue five years unless sooner terminated by the trustees (II, 1654). It was terminated January 1, 1901.

Prior to that date it was considered that it would be desirable to retire the preferred stock in the near future, but action was deferred in order that the question might be acted upon by a board of directors chosen directly by the shareholders, rather than by a board chosen by the voting trust. (Mr. Steele, I, 283; Mr. Morgan, I, 323).

That the board of directors had power to retire the preferred stock and thus make the common stock the only stock of the company, and this independently of the shareholders, was an important, if not the most important, factor in the defeat of an effort by a hostile interest to acquire a stock control of the Northern Pacific Co.—an attack which will be described later, and which was the immediate cause of the formation of the Securities Co.

(4) In creating and maintaining this competitive interstate and international commerce, both the Great Northern Co. and the Northern Pacific Co. were hampered and placed at a disadvantage with European competitors by want of a sufficiently close and permanent connection with the territory offering the best markets for the products of the country along their lines, and with the places of production and great centers of distribution from which their west-bound traffic must be supplied. Mere joint-tariff arrangements with connecting lines did not ensure such stability of rates or permanent conditions of any kind as were essential to secure the establishment of industrial enterprises along their lines, nor did they allow of a car-service sufficient and certain enough to meet the requirements of producers, shippers and consumers. This is clearly pointed out by Mr. Hill (I, 670-1, 677-9, 738-9); Mr. Weyerhaeuser, (I, 746-7); Mr. Harris, (I, 750-1, 767-771); Mr. Saunders (I, 870-1).

As Mr. Hill says, there needed to be—> "More than a joint tariff, which might be withdrawn at any time. We could not build up a great permanent business, extending across the continent and even across the ocean, on the basis that tomorrow the rate might be changed, or the party with whom we were working to reach the different points of production or consumption had some other interest or some greater interest elsewhere." (I, 670-1).

And that in case of mere joint tariffs with other lines, he says, on cross-examination (I, 738-9):

> "Any of those lines, or all of them, could at any moment withdraw their joint tariff from us. We could not control the business a day longer than they were willing we should, and we could not undertake to build up a great, permanent interstate and international business on any such basis. I think it would be ridiculous, the statement of it."

And he cites instances where joint rates have been refused his road by other companies.

Mr. Harris says (I, 750-1) that a joint tariff

> "May be cut off by anybody's volition from day to day, and they say, 'That door has got to be closed.' But ownership, common ownership, provides an open door and the means of access, ingress and egress, and people take advantage of it."

THE PURCHASE OF THE BURLINGTON SHARES.

(1 & 2) Some years before 1901, Mr. Hill had contemplated a joint purchase by the Great Northern Co. and the Northern Pacific Co., of the Burlington road or the stock of that company, as a means of securing the best market in the country for their east-bound shipments, the best source of supply for their west-bound interstate and foreign commerce, and the only available source for supplying fuel to the country along their lines east of the Missouri River, and for their own needs. But in the then conditions, and the Northern Pacific Co. having not yet reached a point where its shares were worth par, that company was not able to join in a purchase which it was not thought advisable for the Great Northern to undertake alone. (Mr. Hill, I, 685). But in the year 1900, the Northern Pacific Co.'s financial position had become so well established that it had been determined to dissolve the voting trust on the 1st of January, 1901, and about this time Mr. Morgan (whose firm had conducted the reorganization of the Northern Pacific Co., and had ever since been its bankers and fiscal agents) thought that the time had arrived when the two companies might join in obtaining an extension eastward, and he and Mr. Hill conferred on the matter. Mr. Morgan was principally concerned with obtaining a line to Chicago, so as to make that city the terminus; and considered that, of the available lines, the St. Paul was preferable, because, if purchasable at all, it could be bought cheaper than the Burlington. The latter was Mr. Hill's choice, his views embracing much more than a mere eastern terminus; but he yielded to Mr. Morgan's wish, and a negotiation for purchase of the St. Paul was opened, but came to nothing. It was then agreed that Mr. Hill should open negotiations for purchase of the Burlington shares through that company's board of directors—the only way in which they could be obtained. This was done and a price arrived at which the directors would recommend their shareholders to accept. In April, 1901, a proposal to the Burlington shareholders at that price was made by the boards of directors of the Great Northern Co. and Northern Pacific Co. and accepted by nearly all the shareholders, and those companies thereby became purchasers each of about one-half of the $108,000,000 capital stock of the Burlington Co., at the price of $200 per share, or about $216,000,000 in all, payable in the joint 4 per cent long-time bonds of the two companies.

The Circuit Court, in its opinion, following too closely the brief for the Government, says that the Burlington shareholders were paid for their shares in their own company's bonds, guaranteed by the Northern Pacific Co. and the Great Northern Co. A mere glance at the form of bond and the trust deed, (introduced by the Government, I, 508, 510) shows that no such "high finance" was practised.

The peculiar advantages of the Burlington system (comprising 8,000 miles of road) which made it so essential to the success of the enterprise that had been undertaken, were these:

Its lines traverse the treeless States of Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Nebraska, Wyoming, Kansas and Colorado, which afford the best markets for the lumber of the Pacific Coast. They reach Denver, Kansas City, Omaha and Aurora, where are located the principal smelters of silver-lead ores, such as are mined near the lines of the defendant railway companies.

They reach Omaha, Kansas City and Chicago, where are the great packing-houses and the great markets for the cattle and sheep of the ranges of North Dakota, Montana, Wyoming, Idaho, Oregon and Washington.

They reach St. Louis and Kansas City, connecting there with lines traversing the Cotton States, from which come the raw and partly-manufactured cotton required for shipment to China and Japan.

At Chicago and St. Louis they connect with the lines which reach the points of supply of manufactured iron, steel, machinery and other manufactured articles that find a market in Japan and China.

(Mr. Hill, I, 671-2; Mr. Weyerhaeuser, I, 746; Mr. Harris, I, 750-752, 757-8).

The Burlington line southward from Minneapolis and St. Paul along the Mississippi River reaches the great coal deposits of Southern Illinois, the largest west of Pennsylvania and West Virginia; and its light gradients and consequent great capacity and low cost of transportation make it possible to supply such coal to points on the lines of each defendant railway company east of the Missouri River, relieving the people and the railways of that territory from entire dependence upon the Pennsylvania and West Virginia mines, the supply from which is yearly becoming more costly and less certain. (Mr. Hill, I, 673-7; Mr. Harris, I, 752-3; Mr. Saunders, I, 868-870).

And the low grade of this line also allows the hauling of return loads of iron ore from the mines in Minnesota to the smelters at St. Louis, thus reducing the cost of transporting coal. This ore traffic, which could not exist before the purchase of the Burlington shares, has already become important. (Mr. Hill, I, 677, 685; Mr. Harris, I, 756-7, 777).

That the time was near at hand when St. Paul and Minneapolis and the country to the westward could no longer depend on Pennsylvania and West Virginia for a supply of the fuel which (since the almost total destruction of the forests) has become absolutely necessary to make the country habitable, and that this need could only be supplied from the Illinois coal fields, and that the same condition confronted the two railway companies—all this was foreseen by Mr. Hill and was an additional inducement to the Burlington purchase. (Mr. Hill, I, 673-4).

Mr. Hill's anticipations have already been justified.

That the Burlington could not be utilized to advantage to supply the fuel needs of the Northwest under any joint-tariff agreement is pointed out by Mr. Hill, Mr. Harris and Mr. Saunders. While, as Mr. Saunders says (I, 871), the Burlington purchase will save the people in the territory served by these railways, 25 per cent on the cost of their fuel, yet this is not the greatest advantage. The main point is that it enables them to get fuel at all, and to get a cerain supply. (Id.)

The price paid for the Burlington stock was lower per mile of main track covered by the stock than that for which the stock of any other large and well-established system, in the same general territory, could have been bought. (Mr. Hill, I, 148).

The purchase of the Burlington stock by the Northern Pacific and Great Northern Companies in equal parts would serve each company as well as if it were the sole owner of such stock, while such purchase might have been beyond the financial means of either company by itself.

The evidence is therefore uncontradicted and conclusive that the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Companies each purchased an equal number of shares of the Burlington stock as the best means and for the sole purpose of reaching the best markets for the products of the territory along their lines, and of securing connections which would furnish the largest amount of traffic for their respective roads, increase the trade and interchange of commodities between the regions traversed by the Burlington lines and their connections and the regions traversed or reached by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific lines, and by their connecting lines of shipping on the Pacific Ocean, and as the best, if not the only means of furnishing an indispensable supply of fuel for their own use and for the inhabitants of the country traversed by their lines. These connections and the interchange of traffic thereby secured were deemed to be and are indispensable to the maintenance of their business, local as well as interstate, and to the development of the country served by their respective lines, and of like advantage to the Burlington lines and the country served by them, and strengthen each company in its competition with European carriers, for the trade and commerce of the Orient.

(3) In such purchase there was no purpose to lessen any competition of the Burlington lines with those of either of the purchasers, for they are not competitive, (Mr. Hill, I, 737; Mr. Harris, I, 759-762); or to lessen any competition between the purchasers. Such purchase was not intended to have, and it cannot have, any such effect.

In the Peter Power Case (from which much of the Government case is taken) an unsuccessful attempt was made to show that at the time of the purchase, the Burlington Co. was projecting extensions to the coast. And this testimony is adopted by the government in this case, (I. 137-9), and a further attempt is made to show the same thing by cross-examination of Mr. Harris, a witness for defendants (I, 759-762). Although no such charge is made in the petition, this cross-examination of Mr. Harris (having no relation to anything in the direct examination of the witness) was evidently an attempt to get material for a charge, afterwards made at the hearing below, that the purchase of the Burlington shares was made as a means of heading off extensions of that road into the territory of the purchasers—a charge insinuated, if not directly made, in at least one speech of a high officer of the Government during a recent political campaign, in which much space is devoted to this litigation, and it is positively stated that at the time of the purchase, the Burlington system "was gradually pushing its rails northwesterly into the territory occupied by the purchasers, and westwardly to the Pacific Ocean." The total want of foundation for this statement is found in the very evidence introduced by the Government itself.

(4) It is charged in the petition (Par. V) that the purchase was made with a view of placing the Great Northern and Northern Pacific systems under a common source of control—that is, in view of the conspiracy therein set forth. But the testimony above referred to is conclusive against that charge. And it is directly refuted by Mr. Morgan in testimony introduced by the Government. He says (I, 334), "So far as the Northern Pacific Co. was concerned, nobody thought of the Northern Securities Co. at that time or dreamed of it." And later in the course of the same testimony he says that the thought of transferring the Northern Pacific shares to a stockholding company came to him after the raid of May, 1901, and in consequence of that raid. (I, 344-5). And Mr. Hill says that "the question of the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern ever being put into a common ownership was not thought of in that connection nor until long afterwards." (I, 686).

And it appears that after the purchase of the Burlington shares and as late as May 2, 1901, the treasurer of one of the Northern Pacific subsidiary companies sold a block of 13,000 shares of Northern Pacific stock—and not to these conspirators. (Mr. Hill and Mr. Mellen, I, 63).

And on this point Mr. Hill further says (I, 687) that at the directors' meeting at which the Burlington purchase was authorized a member of the board pointed out that as the Great Northern Co. would incur a joint and several liability on the bonds for the entire purchase price, it was a matter of consequence for it to know that the Northern Pacific would not pass into the hands of people who might be interested in other directions, in developing other sections of the country. Mr. Hill answered, referring to the holdings of Mr. Morgan and himself and their friends of Northern Pacific Stock, and he says:

> "I did not think at the time that it was at all likely that anybody would undertake to buy in the market the control of 155 millions of stock."

RESULTS OF THE BURLINGTON PURCHASE.

(1) It would not have been singular if the period between the acquisition of the Burlington shares (the bargain for which was made in April, and the title finally acquired upon payment in the joint bonds in September, 1901), and the taking of defendants' evidence in October, 1902, had shown no marked growth in the commerce of the purchasers. A new channel opened for commerce cannot be filled at once, especially if that commerce has to be in great part created. The absence of any such increase would not have been surprising, even if no unusual obstructions had been interposed. But, as already pointed out, the certainty of the duration of the connections and facilities—the permanence of the conditions—created by the purchase lie at the basis of every considerable undertaking of miner, manufacturer or other shipper whose business would be served by these lines. And ever since the bargain in April, 1901, that certainty has been brought in question. At the outset came the acquisition of a majority of the Northern Pacific shares by interests hostile to the use for which the Burlington shares were purchased. The defeat of this attempt had hardly become known to the public when individuals, principalities and powers, from the Peter Power syndicate to the Government of the United States, commenced a succession of suits in which not only was the Securities Co. attacked as the fruit of a conspiracy in restraint of commerce both local and interstate, and as itself a combination to restrain and monopolize such commerce, but the Burlington purchase was assailed as made with a view to carrying out such conspiracy, a step in carrying it out. And during all that period, the same charges have been reiterated in a considerable portion of the press and on political platforms. In view of these concerted and persistent and widespread attacks, which could not fail to throw doubts on the permanence and stability of the relations between the lines of the purchasing companies and those of the Burlington, there would be slight cause for surprise if during this period there had been little or no increase of traffic as a result of the purchase.

But even in the face of all these opposing influences, the evidence shows a very marked, and in respect to some commodities, a marvellous increase of commerce. Without quoting all that is said by the witnesses in the passages cited above, it is enough to refer to one or two items. Between June 30, 1900, and June 30, 1901, the Great Northern shipments of cotton piece goods was 13,070 bales; of raw cotton 13,230,000 pounds. In the year ending June 30, 1902, the shipments were: piece goods, 64,542 bales; raw cotton 41,243,000 pounds (Mr. Hill, I, 682). And the general increase of that company's traffic has been 33 per cent and its foreign commerce has more than doubled (I, 736). The coal traffic between the Illinois mines and points on the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railways has grown from small dimensions to a great business, and as a result, large shipments of iron ore from Minnesota to St. Louis in the returning coal cars have been made possible, have begun and are increasing. Seventy to one hundred thousand tons were engaged for shipment in the last winter, with the prospect of an increase to 300,000 tons before spring. (Mr. Hill, I, 677; Mr. Harris, I, 777).

(2) That this increase of traffic is not by diversion from other roads, but is commerce that has been created, is the statement of each of the witnesses cited.

In Mr. Hill's cross-examination, a good deal of ingenuity was wasted (I, 735-6) in the attempt to make it appear that the Burlington purchase had not resulted in creating traffic, but merely in diverting it from other roads. But Mr. Hill says (I, 736): "It has created traffic," and goes on to state to what extent. Mr. Mellen's testimony is to the same effect (I, 862-3).

Mr. Harris, while he cannot speak as to details, is confident that on the Burlington lines traffic has increased in consequence of the purchase. (I, 775), although as yet (i. e. at the date of his testifying, October, 1902), the advantages of the purchase have accrued in but a small degree compared with what will come "when the question as to whether things that have done and put together are going to stay together or be torn asunder," is settled (I, 773). He mentions the preparations being made by the Burlington, by various improvements in its road, to provide for the great increase of traffic which that company, at least, looks forward to as a consequence of the purchase. (I, 765, 768).

As to the effect of the purchase on the general prosperity of the country along the Burlington lines, he makes this striking observation—and of his capacity to form an opinion there can be no question:

> "I think that was the very best disposition that could have been made of the property for the interests of the merchants and the manufacturers and the industrial population and the agriculturai population along the Burlington road. I think it gives them additional resources, aids in the development of latent resources, and represses none." (I, 774).

This increase of traffic has been attended with a very large reduction of rates, on both competitive and non-competitive business (Mr. Hill, I, 684, 720-726, 730-1).

If defendants' witnesses were to be examined now (they were examined in October, 1902); and if their testimony agreed with the concurrent opinions of the large coal dealers in St. Paul and Minneapolis, they would say that Mr. Hill's forebodings of an approaching bituminous coal famine in the Northwest, and his judgment that the Burlington road furnished the only safeguard against such a calamity, had been fully justified, and that it is the through shipments from the mines reached by the Burlington road, made possible by the purchase of its shares, that have saved much of the country along the lines of the purchasing companies from such a famine, and have made it habitable during the last winter.

(1) What Mr. Hill thought so unlikely—that anyone should undertake to buy in the market the control of 155 millions of stock, a thing absolutely without precedent—actually came to pass within a fortnight. In the earliest days of May, 1901, J. P.

Morgan & Co. learned that the large purchases of Northern Pacific shares that had been recently made were made by what the witnesses call the "Union Pacific Interests"—that is by persons closely identified with that road and acting in its interest. It was afterwards learned that these purchases comprised 41 millions of the preferred and 37 millions of common stock, making in all 78 millions, a clear majority of the 155 millions of capital stock of the company. These same interests had already applied to share in the Burlington purchase, and their request had been refused. (Mr. Hill, I, 44-6). The Union Pacific Co. owned all the shares of the Oregon Short Line Co. and with it owned all the shares of the Oregon Railway and Navigation Co., (Mr. Harriman, I, 603, 608), and was a direct competitor with the Northern Pacific Co., and could not be suspected of making such enormous purchases out of any desire to promote the interests of the other shareholders of that company, or of that company itself, or its business—and least of all its interests involved in the purchase of the Burlington shares. This was the opinion of J. P. Morgan & Co., "and that we would probably be looked to by the minority shareholders or outstanding shareholders to protect the Northern Pacific road from going into control of anybody else." (Mr. Steele, I, 281). That firm had had absolute control of the reorganization of the company in 1896 (Mr. Morgan, I, 314). They had ever since been its fiscal agents, and also members of the voting trust till its termination January 1, 1901. (Id. 317-8).

(2) Mr. Morgan says (I, 338):

> "When I heard that, I felt in this position. We had reorganized the Northern Pacific. We had placed all the securities of the Northern Pacific. * * * I feel bound in all honor when I reorganize a property, and am morally responsible for its management, to protect it, and I generally do protect it; so I made up my mind that it would be desirable to buy 150,000 shares of stock, which we proceeded to do, and with that I knew we had a majority of common stock, and I knew that actually gave us control, and they couldn't take the minority and have it sacrificed to the Union Pacific interests."

Mr. Steele also testifies (I, 282) that "we decided that it was important and there was a moral obligation upon us to endeavor to secure the stock, and my firm proceeded to purchase Northern Pacific common stock."

They did this between May 1 and May 7, buying about $15,000,000 of common stock (Mr. Steele, I, 284, 285).

Before making this large purchase, Mr. Steele ascertained from Mr. Hill that he and his friends would not part with their common stock (Mr. Steele, I, 282,) and they both understood that the preferred stock was to be retired (Mr. Steele, I, 282-3; Mr. Hill, I, 62, 64).

Mr. Morgan's knowledge that with a purchase of 15 millions of (common) stock "we had a majority of common stock," was based on these facts:

His own firm held before the purchase about 4 or 5 millions and after the purchase about 20 millions (Mr. Steele, I, 285-6).

In the reorganization, Mr. Hill and three others received 3 millions of common stock (Mr. Hill, I, 145).

Afterwards, and in 1896, he bought for himself and several friends (on individual and not joint account) about 26 millions. (Mr. Hill, I, 145; Mr. Kennedy, I, 212; Mr. Morgan, I, 317 and note). Of the 29 millions thus obtained in 1896, they held early in May, 1901, about 20 millions. (Mr. Hill, I, 48). These sums, together with other amounts held by friends of J. P. Morgan & Co., made up a total of between 41 and 42 millions—a clear majority of the common stock (Id. I, 48; Mr. Steele, I, 298).

Mr. Morgan's confidence that the holding of a majority of the common stock would defeat the hostile plans of the holders of a majority of all the stock of the company, and protect the company from a hostile control was based on the character and conditions of the preferred stock, as provided in the resolutions under which it was issued (I, 375, 381-2, 384). By those resolutions each share had equal voting power with a share of the common stock, but the company had power to pay off at par and retire all or any part of the preferred stock on the first day of January of any year up to 1917.

The preferred stock was regarded as > "Simply a temporary loan until we should issue the common stock at par and take it up; and consequently in dealing with the question, the question simply was when the directors of the Northern Pacific should decide that it was expedient to do so." (Mr. Morgan, I, 325).

In the fall of 1900, Mr. Morgan considered that this stock might and should be retired in the near future, but preferred that this should be done by a board of directors chosen directly by the shareholders after the voting trust should have been dissolved. (Id. I, 323).

Upon the retirement of the preferred stock, the 80 millions of common would be the only outstanding stock of the company. Messrs. Hill and Morgan and their friends, having a majority of this, would also be in position to retain that majority when the rest of the capital (75 millions) should be issued as common stock to take the place of the retired preferred stock, and so continue in "complete control." (Mr. Hill, I, 65). They would be entitled to the same proportion of the new as of the existing common stock,—of course, on payment for it at par—i. e., on payment of about $39,000,000.

The power to retire the preferred stock was considered by Messrs. Morgan and Hill to be in the board of directors—not in the body of the stockholders. It was afterwards exercised by the board, and their action was sustained by the courts in Minnesota and in New York. The board at that time had been nominated by the voting trust— i. e., by J. P. Morgan & Co. The annual meeting for choice of a new board was to be in October. At that meeting the Union Pacific interests could elect the board. Should the existing board in the meantime have taken action for retiring the stock on January 1, 1902, could its action be revised and nullified by the stockholders' meeting or by the new board? And if there was danger of this, could not the present board amend the by-laws by which the date of the stockholders' meeting was fixed in October, so as to fix it in January after the stock should have been actually paid off and retired?

These details—all found in the evidence introduced by the Government—are important as showing how nearly the Union Pacific interests succeeded in their attack, and the principal cause of their failure. It would seem that they were ignorant or ill-advised as to the seat of the power to retire the preferred shares. Otherwise, instead of buying 41 millions of preferred and only 37 millions of common, they could not have failed to buy 41 millions of common and only 37 millions of preferred. In that case they would have had absolute control, whether the preferred stock was retired or not.

Any question as to the ultimate stock control of the company was soon put at rest. During the operations of the opposing parties many persons had sold them stock they did not own. The competition between these persons to buy stock for delivery pushed the price of common stock at one time to $1,000 (on May 9, 1901,) and threatened a general panic, and caused a stringency in the money markets of the world. It would seem that persons who had just bought 78 millions of stock on credit must have been of all the most desirous of allaying the tempest. However this may have been, and whatever the reason for their action, they did, at a meeting of bankers and others held to devise means for relieving the financial situation, agree that Mr.

Morgan should have power to name the board of directors to be chosen at the October election. This of course sealed the fate of the preferred stock beyond a peradventure, and left the stock control of the Northern Pacific Co. absolutely with Mr. Hill and Mr. Morgan and their friends. (Mr. Hill, I, 50-51, 55-6, 61-2, 63; Mr. Steele, I, 287-8).

It was claimed by the Government in the Circuit Court that at this meeting the retirement of the preferred stock was agreed on. But Mr. Harriman testifies (I, 903) that as late as November, 1901, he considered that he had a controlling interest in the Northern Pacific Co., although "there was a probability that there would be an effort made to retire that stock without our consent." And see Mr. Hill's testimony, I, 68, 99.

It was further claimed that at this meeting directors representing Union Pacific interests were agreed on for the Northern Pacific. And a Wall Street newspaper was offered as proof of this.

But at this time Mr. Morgan was in Europe. His partner, Mr. Steele, who attended the meeting, denies any such agreement. He says that the first suggestion of naming any directors from the Harriman party came from himself in conversation with Mr. Morgan, after the latter's return from Europe in July. (Steele, I, 287, 294-5).

Mr. Morgan (I, 342-4) says that in making the appointments in July, he acted in entire independence, and "I think that the people that were more than surprised that they were put on, were the Union Pacific interests themselves. * * * It showed that we had nothing to fear from it."

Mr. Hill, (a witness for the Government) says:

> "Q. Was there at that conference, Mr. Hill, any agreement among the parties to it as to the Union Pacific being represented on the board of the Northern Pacific?
> A. There was not.
> Q. No understanding with reference to that?
> A. None whatever."
> (I, 60, and see 58, 59, 61, 68-9).

(3) The very great injury which the success of the "raid" would have wrought to the Northern Pacific shareholders and to that company, and especially to its interests under the Burlington purchase and the traffic to result therefrom, seems hardly to require proof; but abundant proof is furnished by what was done to defeat it and prevent a repetition of it. And the passages cited above contain direct evidence on this point. Thus Mr. Hill says (I, 742):

> "The value of the property would be destroyed. Its growth would be restricted. It would be controlled in the interests of another property or body, for the reason that it would be restricted or might be restricted so as not to interfere with the growth of the other property."

And the injury to the Great Northern would be no less. Besides its effect on the general interstate business of that company, the control of the Northern Pacific by the Union Pacific would deprive the Great Northern of the benefit of the Burlington connection, to acquire which it had incurred a joint and several liability of over $200,000,000, and would deal a fatal blow to the commerce to which that connection was absolutely essential.

In his testimony in the Peter Power case, introduced by the Government, Mr. Hill says that in such case there would have been nothing left for the Great Northern shareholders to do but to sell out to the Union Pacific (I, 65, 66, 84).

Testifying for the defendants in this case, he says (I, 694):

> "With the Northern Pacific as a half-owner in the shares of the Burlington and responsibility for one-half of the purchase price of these shares, the transfer of the shares of the Northern Pacific or the control of the Northern Pacific to an interest that was adverse or an interest that had greater investments in other directions, the control being in the hands of companies whose interests would be injured by the growth and development of this country, would of course put the Great Northern in a position where it would be almost helpless, because we would be, as it were, fenced out of the territory south which produces the tonnage we want to take west and which consumes the tonnage we want to bring east; and the Great Northern would be in a position where it would have to make a hard fight—either survive or perish—or else sell out to the other interests. The latter would be the most business-like proceeding.
> "Q. What would be the effect of such an acquisition by a hostile interest on the minority stockholders in the Northern Pacific?
>
> A. Why, it would, practically put the control of the Northern Pacific interest in the hands of people who were hostile to its growth or development. The measure of injury would be destruction. It would destroy the entire plan upon which the whole enterprise was originally designed and carried out, as far as it had been carried out.

Q. That is, your plan for building up a great interstate and Oriental traffic?

A. Yes, sir; and the conditions under which that business should be done, because the other lines could not—it was a physical impossibility for them to carry at the rates that are necessary to carry it, and the rates that we must make, without making a positive loss on the business.

Q. So that, in effect, they would not only deprive you of that commerce, but they would destroy the commerce itself?

A. Destroy the commerce itself."

After stating in a passage too long for quotation why the other lines could not carry on this commerce—could not make rates in competition with the high seas and the Suez Canal—and being asked if there was any other motive in having the Securities Co. acquire a majority of the Northern Pacific stock than to defend and protect the interest of the stockholders and the enterprise he had spoken of, Mr. Hill says (I, 695):

> "The object and the intent was to defend the property that otherwise would be destroyed, both of the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern. When I say destroyed, there would be something left, but the main plan would be destroyed; there would be something left, but the property would be incapacitated from doing what it was intended to do and what it was quite able to do."

On cross-examination by the Government, Mr. Hill again describes (I, 738-740) in what manner the Union Pacific control of the Northern Pacific would operate to prevent the use of the Burlington as a means of developing the commerce which his company "had worked long and hard to establish." And to the suggestion of the Government counsel that it was a mere matter of competition, and the only effect would have been that "competition would have been so severe you could not have stood it?" he replies, (I, 740):

> "It was not a question of competition. It was a question of physical inability to reach the market. We would be shut out from the markets."

(1) Their narrow escape from so great a danger being assured, it was the part of prudent men to profit by the lesson so rudely taught and to devise means of defense against, or better still prevention of any repetition of the attack which had so nearly proved successful. The Union Pacific interests still held 37 millions of the Northern Pacific common stock. Between one and two millions were not held by either of the parties. The loss of three millions from the majority holdings might occur from various causes, and the attack just defeated might be renewed with success by the same or other assailants.

Now, there had been for some years a project on foot, in which Mr. Hill and several other shareholders of the Great Northern Co. (who held at this time some 32 or 33 millions, or about 27 per cent of that company's stock) to form a corporation to which they should transfer their shares in consideration of shares of such new company. Mr. Hill gives the names of the others as follows (I, 698): Mr. Kennedy, Lord Strathcona, Lord Mount Stephen (represented by Mr. Sterling), D. Willis James, Samuel Thorne, Johnston Livingston, Col. Lamont, Oliver Payne, Edward Tuck, George C. Clark and George F. Baker. They had taken an active interest in the operations first of the Manitoba Co. and then of the Great Northern Co. (some of them from the inception of the Manitoba Co. in 1879) and had been those most consulted by Mr. Hill, regarding the policy of the company. Some of these gentlemen were advanced—a few of them far advanced—in years, and in case of their death their shares were liable to be scattered. And it was the general wish that their shares should be kept together and voted as a unit at the meetings of the company for the continuation of the policy which had proved so highly successful, and that if sold, they should all fare alike. These gentlemen had never "controlled" the company. In a sense the control had been with Mr. Hill (I, 706), to whom nearly all the shareholders who did not personally attend the meetings and vote with him, had uniformly sent their proxies (Mr. Kennedy, I, 191-2). But such "control" was in no way the result of stock ownership. It was simply that the management and policy of Mr. Hill had been always approved by the shareholders, as well those who were not as those who were among the number who are called in the evidence his associates, and who projected the stockholding company just spoken of (Col. Clough, I, 808).

This project had been the subject of discussion between not more than two or three of these gentlemen at a time for several years, but there had never been anything like a meeting to consider details or even to formulate a definite plan (Mr. Kennedy, I, 190-1). That such a project was on foot was, however known to others besides those engaged in it. Mr. Morgan had heard of it (I, 344) and Mr. Steele (I, 299), and even Mr. Harriman (I, 632).

The Great Northern shares have always been at a considerable—usually at a very high—premium, so that the capitalization of the proposed company would be largely in excess of the par value of the Great Northern shares transferred to it. The company was to be absolute owner of the shares transferred to it, with full power to vote or sell them as its directors elected by a majority of its shareholders should determine. While each shareholder in the new company could sell his shares, yet the Great Northern shares held by the company, while held by it, would be a unit for all purposes of voting, etc., and in the event of any opposing interest arising to break the perfect harmony that had always prevailed among the shareholders, such interest could not acquire the control or the vote of a single one of the Great Northern Co. shares held by the new company, without acquiring a majority of the shares of the new company (Col. Clough, I, 810-812).

It was also contemplated that the company might acquire and hold stock in other corporations whose operations might aid the railway and whose shares could not be held by that company (Mr. Hill, I, 87). And Mr. Morgan seems to have been aware of this (I, 346).

At least a year before the spring of 1901 there was a general feeling among those projecting the company that each shareholder in the Great Northern should have the opportunity to come into it on the same terms as the projectors. This was solely because they didn't wish to be in the position of making a corporation and closing the door on their old associates—a reversal of the relations that had always existed among the shareholders of the Great Northern Co. (Mr. Hill, I. 82-85, 87; 690, 706-8; Mr. Kennedy, I. 190-192; Col. Clough, I. 790-1).

This was the situation of the original plan of these Great Northern minority shareholders in May, 1901.

(2) When Messrs. Hill and Morgan and their associate shareholders in the Great Northern Co. and the Northern Pacific Co. set themselves to devise means to prevent the recurrence of such a "raid" as had just been defeated, it was very clear to them that they must depend for safety wholly upon themselves. The law gave them no protection. They had every reason to believe that such a holding as that of the Union Pacific Co. in the Northern Pacific is in no way forbidden by the Anti-trust law, and they knew that just such holdings had existed for years among all the principal railways of the East. The inaction of the attorney general showed that this was also the opinion of that high official specially charged with the enforcement of the Anti-trust Act. And so far as that act is concerned, the acquisition and holding, by an interstate railway company, of a majority of the shares of a competing interstate railway company is strictly legal, though it may be, as the Union Pacific holding of Northern Pacific would have been, "iniquitously legal." This will be fully shown in the argument on the construction of that act.

In this state of things and early in June, 1901, Mr. Kennedy, on his return from Europe (whither he had gone on April 2, returning on June 8th—I, 185, 190), expressed to Mr. Hill his opinion that "we must devise some plan to prevent hereafter such raids as have occurred" (Mr. Hill, I, 689), and suggested to Mr. Hill the utilizing for that purpose of their proposed holding company by including in it their Northern Pacific in addition to their Great Northern stock (Mr. Hill, I, 84-5). This suggestion did not include a majority of Northern Pacific shares, but only those of Mr. Hill and his associates in the Great Northern Co.—did not include the shares of J. P. Morgan & Co. (Id., I, 127).

Shortly after Mr. Morgan's return from Europe, the question of forming some sort of company to acquire and hold the Northern Pacific shares held by J. P. Morgan & Co. and their friends (including the $15,000,000 bought by the former), was discussed by him with Mr. Steele (I, 290).

Mr. Morgan's own statement is as follows (I, 344):

> "When we found ourselves in this position, with the danger—having escaped as I thought at that time from what I thought was a great danger, that is to say, our property being absorbed by a competing line without our knowledge or consent, it occurred to me something ought to be done to prevent that, because, while we chose to defend the property, I did not want it to go on indefinitely; and I thought the best > plan was to go to some trust company to take the Northern Pacific stock and hold it. * * * We didn't want convulsions going on. * * * What I wanted to accomplish was to put that stock so that it would be protected—to maintain the policy of the company as it then existed. * * * I wanted it so that I could go to Europe and not hear next day that somebody had bought it for the Boston and Maine or I don't know what other company. I wanted the Northern Pacific stock put where nothing could interfere with the policy I had inaugurated, and for the carrying out of which we were perfectly satisfied and morally responsible."

But the idea of a trust company was quickly abandoned, for it would cost less to buy up the stock of the trust company than of the railway company (I, 356).

On page 347 he says: "Everything, so far as the Northern Pacific road is concerned and a holding company, all occurred to my mind subsequent to the 9th day of May."

Being asked (still on examination by plaintiff): "When did the idea of putting the control of both these roads in one place come up after your return?" he says, (I, 345):

> "I suggested to Mr. Hill, 'why not.' I think I did, at any rate. If it was not, it may have been Mr. Steele. Whether I did or J. P. Morgan & Co., I think we are responsible for having made that suggestion."

This was just before he went to California, which he did early in October (I, 346).

Asked the result of his talk with Mr. Hill, he says (I, 348):

> "The result of it was that we decided that > the Northern Pacific—so far as I was concerned as a stockholder in the Northern Pacific, I would put my stock in, provided that he would take everybody else's into this thing that he had proposed to arrange for the Great Northern. * * * I didn't care whether he went in or not. We had a majority without him. I wanted a majority of the Northern Pacific stock in the Securities Company. I didn't care who went in provided there was enough there to protect the Northern Pacific * * * (I, (349). Mr. Hill and I worked together. * * * We worked simply because he was a stockholder; but I was independent of Mr. Hill in that transaction. I wanted simply to keep the stock of the Northern Pacific safe beyond question."

And asked as to whether there was not some understanding with Mr. Hill that he should go in, and whether he would not have been much surprised if Mr. Hill had not done so, Mr. Morgan says (I, 349): "Simply because I know he wanted to make the most he could out of the Northern Pacific"—i. e., as a shareholder.

In the interval between Mr. Kennedy's suggestion to Mr. Hill in June that their plan for a holding company of Great Northern stock should be enlarged so as to include the holding (about 20 millions) of themselves and their associates in Northern Pacific, and the time when Mr. Morgan decided to put his firm's Northern Pacific shares into the same company, that suggestion developed into a plan for enlarging the scope of the company so that it should have power to acquire all of the 42 millions of Northern Pacific common stock (being a majority of such stock) then held by Mr. Hill and

Mr. Morgan and their respective associates. "We were particularly anxious to put a majority of that stock where it could not be raided again as it had been" (Mr. Hill, I, 693). And Mr. Kennedy, asked why it was planned to get a majority of Northern Pacific and not of Great Northern, says (I, 195): "Well, my idea was in consequence of what took place last May. We didn't want to be subject to such an attack as took place last May." The price at which the stocks should be taken by the new company came up, and it was considered that $180 per share for Great Northern and $115 for Northern Pacific would be a fair valuation (Mr. Hill, I, 86, 96). It was still the purpose to give all Great Northern shareholders who might desire to come in an opportunity to do so (Mr. Kennedy, I, 197; Mr. Hill, I, 87, 690, 708). The matter of capitalization so as to provide for acquiring, at the prices suggested, a majority of Northern Pacific shares, should they be offered and whatever Great Northern shares might be offered by their holders, and also for acquiring other properties as contemplated, was considered (Mr. Hill, I, 87, 690-2, where the basis of proposed capitalization is stated).

For these purposes a capital of 300 millions was thought to be enough, and up to the middle of September it was hardly deemed necessary to make it larger (Mr. Hill, I, 692). The conferences during this period were of the same character as the earlier ones had been; there was no meeting, but Mr. Hill discussed the matter from time to time with one and another of his friends (Mr. Hill, I, 87; Col. Clough, I, 821, 822, 829).

The advantage of including the Northern Pacific shares in a company open to all Great Northern shareholders, instead of forming a separate holding company for the 42 millions of Northern Pacific shares, was obvious from the increased capitalization resulting therefrom. Should all Great Northern shareholders come in, the acquisition of their 125 millions at $180 would take $225,000,000. If less than all came in, then of course so much less of the capital would be required for that purpose. The valuation ($180) of Great Northern shares was thought likely to deter the holders from coming in, their market price being from $187 to $195 and so on to $200 (Mr. Hill, I, 692). Should it have that effect, then so much of the capital provided for acquiring Great Northern shares as was not required for that purpose could be utilized for the other purchases and operations of the company. Such purchases had been part of the plan for the company for a long time, if not from the outset. Mr. Hill had so told Mr. Morgan two years before (Mr. Morgan, I, 346-7).

The process by which the capitalization of the proposed company was increased by various considerations and suggestions until it was finally fixed at 400 millions, is also stated by Col. Clough (I, 789-792).

An error in the opinion that would not be worth noting except for the court's profession of absolute accuracy, is found in the statement (II, 1704) that the Securities Co. "was organized * * * with a capital stock of $400,000,000, that sum being the exact amount required to purchase the total stock of the two railroad companies at the price agreed to be paid therefor." The "exact amount" would be $403,250,000.

While every Great Northern shareholder was to be given an opportunity to come into the new company, this was not in order to give the new company control of the stock of that company, but for the reason already stated.

Mr. Kennedy, being asked whether the opportunity given to all Great Northern shareholders was for the purpose of placing a majority of Great Northern as well as of Northern Pacific shares in the Northern Securities Co., says (I, 197):

> "I think not. The idea was to give the Great Northern shareholders who might desire to come in an opportunity to come in, that they might not feel that they were not fairly treated if certain persons went in and other persons left out."

And elsewhere he says (I, 195):

> "It was our intention to have a majority of the Northern Pacific; but as to the Great Northern it was simply an intention to let the members in who chose to come in, and it remained to be seen whether it would be a majority or minority."

And Mr. Hill, on cross-examination, by the Government, after giving the same reason as Mr. Kennedy why the Securities Co. was thrown open to all Great Northern shareholders, says (I, 708):

"If the question has reference to the desire > or preference, I should answer that if the individual men who formed the Securities Co. had their choice, and all the stockholders were there and could say: 'We release you'—we would have preferred to have had the Northern Securities Company stock restricted to the 35 millions." (That is to their own holdings, which were from 33 to 35 millions, of Great Northern stock). "There isn't any question about that. The question was, 'Shall we make a corporation and close the door on our old associates?' If we do, it is the first time that anything has ever been done in which any shareholder had the advantage over all the shareholders. And that was the reason for making the offer, and the only reason for making the offer."

And yet, in the face of this testimony, which is no where contradicted or qualified, the Circuit Court in its decision says (II, 1704), that the individuals who planned the Securities Co. not only "agreed with each other to exchange their respective holdings of stock in the last-named railroad companies for the stock of the New Jersey Company when the same should be fully organized," but that these same persons also > Agreed with each other * * * to use their influence to induce other stockholders in their respective companies to do likewise to the end that the New Jersey company might, become the sole owner of the whole or at least a major portion of the stock of both railroad companies.

Whether as regards Mr. Hill and his friends, owning both Great Northern and Northern Pacific shares, or Mr. Morgan and those represented by his firm, the above is as destitute of evidence to support it and in as complete antagonism with the record, as the statement (see page 34, supra) that the purchasers of the Burlington stock paid for them with that company's bonds, or the statement, soon to be noticed, that the Securities Co.'s purchases of Great Northern shares from others than the promoters were made by means of "the advice, procurement and persuasion of those stockholders of the Great Northern Co., who had been instrumental in organizing the Securities Co., and had exchanged their own stock for stock in that company shortly after its organization" (II, 1705).

As already stated, Mr. Morgan, about October 1st, expressed a willingness to put the shares of his firm and their friends into the proposed company. He continued to be governed by the sole wish to protect the Northern Pacific Co., which he considered himself to be under a moral obligation to do. He did not care much what else was in the company, so long as a majority of the Northern Pacific stock was there. He did not consider that he was planning or forming a company, but considered that he was merely going into one already planned by Mr. Hill. He says (I, 354):

> "Mr. Hill did not decide the Northern Pacific. I told him I thought if he was willing we would take it; and that was probably some time either just before (I went to) or just after I returned from California. * * * I told him that would be my decision if everything went smooth. * * * That was satisfactory to me if it was to him. We both agreed to it. * * * He was acting for his stock and I for mine, with the condition that if the Northern Securities Company was organized, the holders of the Northern Pacific stock should have the right to put in their stock the same as we did."

And of the influence of the large capitalization of the new company (the result in great measure of its being open to all Great Northern shareholders) upon his own action, Mr. Morgan says (I, 356):

> "That is another advantage I took into account, and that was that the capital of the Northern Securities Company was so large I did not believe in a night or a week anybody would ever be able to get control of it."

Asked what special benefits accrued from putting the shares of both railways in one company, he says (I, 356):

> "Because it seemed to me the best remedy; the company is so large, * * * I wanted to put it in a company with capital enough that nobody could ever buy it, and that is the only one I know of. It is the only investment or trust company that I know of, of that kind where the stock was large enough so that in all human probability I felt that if it was not safe there it was not safe anywhere."

(As to Mr. Morgan's mention of a "trust company," see his explanation, I, 361).

Asked whether a number of the larger stockholders of the Securities Co., acting together, could not control both roads, Mr. Morgan says (I, 356):

> "No, sir; I do not think it would be possible. If you go and select all the stockholders—of course, I have no doubt if you had a list of the stockholders, and take all the largest until you get over $200,000,000, those people would control; but there is no interest that I know of today that can control the Northern Securities Company."

About the time that Mr. Morgan, as before stated, announced his purpose of transferring his firm's Northern Pacific shares to the proposed company, with reservation of the same right to others, and probably in connection with that transaction, the capital of the company was fixed at 400 millions, the sum named afterwards in its articles. Mr. Hill thinks this was arrived at some time in October (I, 693).

(3) While it was desired and expected that a majority of the Northern Pacific common stock should be transferred to the new company (Mr. Hill, I, 115, 693; Mr. Kennedy, I, 221), there was no agreement on the part of any of the holders to transfer his shares. Each was free to do as he liked. The same was true as in respect of the Great Northern shares held by Mr. Hill and his associates. It was not a condition of the formation of the Securities Co. that a majority of the shares of either company should be transferred to it.

Mr. Kennedy says (I, 215):

> "Q. Did you understand that the formation of the Securities Co. was in any way conditional upon its acquiring a majority of the stock of both railroad companies?
>
> A. No, sir; no such condition.
>
> Q. Well, was it or was it not decided to form it whether it procured—
>
> A. Whether it procured a majority or whether it did not.
>
> Q. Did you know of any agreement between the majority stockholders of the Northern Pacific Company that they would all turn their stock in or sell it to the Northern Securities Co.?

A. I know of no such agreement; never heard of it."

Mr. Kennedy also says (I, 221):

"Q. Was it not generally understood between you that the parties who were acting with you and had acted with you during this flurry, and who had stood together, were agreed on the general plan or policy of putting their holdings into the Securities Co.?

A. I don't recall any general agreement about it. * * * Personally I supposed that a majority of that stock would go into the Securities Co.—of the Northern Pacific common stock.

Q. So that at the time you planned the organization of this present Securities Co. it was pretty generally understood that all of you gentlemen would put your holdings in there?

A. I supposed they would. I had no positive information on the subject. They were free to do as they pleased.

(I, 222): Q. And it was your plan and purpose, and the plan and purpose of those who organized the Securities Co. to have the stock go in there?

A. If the people chose to sell it. We couldn't compel it."

Mr. Perkins says (I, 241):

"Q. Was there any agreement between J. P. Morgan & Co. or J. P. Morgan and his associates and Mr. Hill and his associates, to organize the Northern Securities Co. and to transfer to it the ownership of a majority of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern Railway Companies' stock?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Was there any agreement of any such character?

A. Not to my knowledge."

Mr. Steele says (I, 303-4):

"Was the fact of acquiring a majority of the stock of both or either the Northern Pacific or Great Northern Railway Companies made a condition of the organization of the Securities Co. as far as you know?

A. Not to my knowledge, sir.

Q. Well, do you know that it was determined to form the Northern Securities Co., without knowing whether they would acquire a majority of either one of the companies, either the Northern Pacific or the Great Northern?

A. I have always understood that it was intended to form that company anyhow, independently of getting any Northern Pacific stock whatever, and independently of getting a majority of the Great Northern stock as I have already testified. I understood that company was to be formed originally to hold the Great Northern stock which was owned by Mr. Hill and some of his associates, which I understood amounted to about 30 to 35 millions.

Q. Was there any agreement between J. P. Morgan & Co. or J. P. Morgan and his associates to organize the Northern Securities Co. and to transfer to it the ownership of a majority of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern Railway Companies' stocks?

A. None whatever.

Q. Was there any agreement of that character?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. In the organization of the Northern Securities Co. did your firm speak for a majority of the stockholders of the Northern Pacific, or act at all other than for your own personal interests—your own interest? Or did you have anything to do with organizing the Northern Securities Co. other than to sell to it your stock?

A. I was about to answer that I have already testified that we had nothing to do with the organization of the Northern Securities Co.;

and the first connection that we had with it was the negotiation by which we sold it to it the Northern Pacific common stock which we held."

Mr. Hill says (I, 700):

"Q. In the formation of the Northern Securities Co. was there any agreement among its promoters or any of them, including yourself, by which they or any of them bound themselves to transfer their stock in either railway company to the Northern Securities Co. when it should be organized?

A. There was no agreement of any kind. When I discussed the matter with these gentlemen they said 'All right, go ahead; we will put ours in'—each man speaking for himself, and I think I saw them all separately with one exception. I saw Mr. Kennedy and Mr. James together; possibly I saw Mr. Thorne and Mr. Clark together; the others I saw separately. There was no agreement; an hour—a minute—before any particular shareholder of the Great Northern transferred his stock he was at liberty to turn around and go away with it."

And here it is to be noted that Mr. Hill, owning from 11 to 12 millions of Great Northern stock, retained and did not transfer to the Securities Co. between 2½ and 3 millions (I, 110), and at the time of his examination, still retained them as a matter of sentiment—of course considering that he had a right to do so (I, 114).

FORMATION, NATURE, POWERS AND PURPOSES OF SECURITIES CO.

(1) Formation of the Securities Co. Railway Companies had nothing to do with Formation or Plan for forming it. Wholly the Work of Shareholders Acting in their own Interest as such, and in that of their Fellow Shareholders.

(2) Nature of the Securities Co. A Lawful Corporation. Not a Railway Company, and has no power whatever to build or oprate Railways. Stocks of the two Railway Companies not Consolidated. They remain wholly distinct. No Increase of Capitalization of Railway Companies.

(3) Securities Co. may sell all or any part of its shares in either Railway Company without selling any of its shares in the other. It is absolute owner of all shares held by it.

(4) It was not formed to restrain or monopolize Commerce or lesson Competition in any way.

(5) Its Formation had no Connection with the Retirement of the Northern Pacific Preferred Stock.

(1) The actual formation of the Securities Co., including the determination under the laws of what state it should be organized, and what its articles should contain, was in very few hands (Col. Clough, I, 824, 831).

Mr. Morgan says he "had nothing to do with it" (I, 351).

Mr. Hill further says (I, 88):

"The plan for organizing the Securities Co. was worked out and modified or changed between the 1st of September and the date of the publication of the Articles.

Q. Who finally decided upon the plan that was adopted in the organization of the Northern Securities Co.?

A. Practically, Mr. Kennedy, Mr. George Baker, Mr. James, Mr. Thorne, Mr. Clough, Mr. Perkins and myself.

Q. And were there no others than those whose names you have just given who had anything to do with the actual perfecting of the plan of organization of the Northern Securities Co.?

A. No one outside of the counsel who drew the papers. I think I had as much to do with it as anybody.

Q. Mr. Hill in the discussion and consummation of the plan which resulted in the organization of the Northern Securities Co., had J.

Pierpont Morgan or his partners anything to do with it?

A. Mr. Perkins was his partner. He had something to do, but in the first instance nothing, and at the last very little"

There was, however, no meeting of these gentlemen. Mr. Hill would see one and another of them as stated in a passage (I, 700) already quoted.

It was proposed to form a Minnesota corporation, if a suitable territorial charter could be found and acquired, and a considerable time was spent in the search for such a charter without finding one that was available (Col. Clough, I, 784-5; 817-9, 824; and see Mr. Morgan, I, 354: "We could not tell at that time if we were going to be able to get our charter").

An organization under the Minnesota general laws was not favored, because of the double liability imposed on shareholders by the state constitution, and the general unfriendly policy of that State towards corporations and their shareholders (Col. Clough, I, 784, 815, 858). There was nothing in the nature of the proposed company to make an incorporation in Minnesota or Wisconsin necessary, or even of more propriety than an incorporation elsewhere. An extremely small percentage, whether in number or amount, of its expected shareholders would be residents of either state. A charter was accordingly sought in another state, just as the citizens of Minnesota uniformly do when forming a corporation of any magnitude whether for manufacture, trade or other purposes. After examination of the laws of West Virginia, New York and New Jersey, the latter state was selected, principally because its incorporation laws were of earlier date and had been more thoroughly construed than those of the other states (Col. Clough, I, 785, 787, 824-6, 830-1). It was left to Col. Clough to make the selection as between these states, and it was made by him (I, 828), and made only a few days before the actual incorporation, November 13, 1901 (Id. 831).

The formation of the Securities Co. was from the inception of the project to the complete organization of the company wholly the work of a few shareholders of the two railway companies, acting in their own interest and that of their fellow shareholders to protect that interest. While their action must necessarily benefit the two companies—especially their interests and their commerce arising from the Burlington purchase—it was still the action of the shareholders only, and of only a very small portion of the shareholders of each company. Neither railway company had anything to do with the formation of the Securities Co., or with the project of forming it, at any stage of that project or in any manner whatever.

> "Neither the Great Northern Co. nor any of its officers as such had anything whatever to do with it," (the formation of the Securities Co.) "not any more than the most distant railway corporation in the country. Absolutely nothing. The matter of forming the Northern Securities Co. was purely of the shareholders, and limited to a very small number. I think I am safe in saying not to exceed 11 out of 1800" (Mr. Hill, I, 698).

And the holdings of these 11 in Great Northern "was between 33 and 35 millions out of a capital of 125 millions." (Id.)

Mr. Hill says (I, 699) that he knows of no action taken by the Northern Pacific Co. or its officers in forming or organizing the Securities Co., and Mr. Mellen, president of the Northern Pacific Co., says that none was taken (I, 860), and that he had nothing to do with it (I, 172).

(2) The nature and purposes of the Securities Co. are those and those only set forth in its Articles of Incorporation, which are an exhibit to the petition. There can be no doubt but that it is a lawful corporation under the laws of New Jersey, nor is the lawfulness of its creation and existence questioned in the petition. It is not a railway company, has no power to operate railways or carry on transportation of any kind, either local or interstate.

The petition, it is true, charges (in par. XI) that the company "was not organized in good faith," but was organized "to incorporate the pooling of the stocks"—whatever that may mean, and to act a grotesque combination of parts in respect of the stocks. And that it "never had any capital sufficient to warrant such stupendous operation," which may possibly be true, for it is not clear how any amount of capital would enable the company to be at one and the same time what the petition says it is, viz: "a mere depositary, custodian, holder and trustee," of the same stock; and all this when, as stated in paragraph VI, it is also the absolute owner of that stock.

Its ownership of shares of the two railway companies no more consolidates, or pools, or merges those shares, or the two companies, or their property, than the ownership of two pieces of real estate by the same person consolidates them or the title to them. The shares of the railway companies owned by the Securities Co. remain as separate and distinct from each other as would 100 shares of each company held by an individual.

This whole matter of capitalization of this state corporation is a subject outside of the regulative power of Congress under the Commerce clause, and is of course not covered by the Anti-trust act. The cry of stock-watering may always be relied on to excite prejudice against a corporation—except before a tribunal where prejudices are unknown—but has no bearing on the case.

Paragraph XI of the bill charges that the capital of the Securities Co. exceeds by $122,000,000 the combined capital of the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific Companies. And in the cross-examination of Col. Clough (I, 836-9) the claim is made that this is an "increase in an indirect way of the capitalization of the constituent companies" (836). Of course, as counsel should have known, there are no "constituent" companies. And there is no more increase of capitalization than if the several shareholders of the Great Northern Co. should carry their shares on their books at $180 or even at the market value of $200, or should sell them at either of those prices. That the capital of a corporation is increased by the amount of the aggregate premiums on a sale of all its shares is a discovery in finance. It is quite of a piece with the notion produced in the same cross-examination (839-840) that the Great Northern capital was watered because it had been largely increased within a few years, and this when the proof shows that the shares were selling at from $190 to $200 in a market somewhat noted for "squeezing out the water" (I, 986; Defts'. Ex. 17). And the testimony is that every dollar of added stock represents a dollar added to the property of the company (Col. Clough, I, 836-840, 977-986; Defts'. Ex. 8, I, 977).

The fact is that this over-capitalization and stock-watering charge is simply another of the errors due to the misinformation furnished the Attorney General by the instigators of this litigation, and by which he has been misled into bringing this suit. The following is a statement of the mileage and capitalization of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific systems on June 30, 1901, as it appears in the record, except that in this statement the full amount of authorized Great Northern shares ($125,000,000) is given, instead of the amount then issued and outstanding ($98,711,750).

	Mileage	Stock	Bonds	Total Capitalization
Northern Pacific (II, 1000, 1002)	5100.14	155,000,000	177,925,789	332,925,789
Great Northern (II, 977, 982)	5429.18	125,000,000	97,138,054	222,138,054

There is no claim or pretence that the Northern Pacific is over-capitalized, and the charge against the Great Northern Co. is so baseless that the Attorney General could never have made it had he not been grossly misinformed.

(3) The Securities Co. does not hold its railway shares as trustee, but as absolute owner. This is positively stated by Mr. Kennedy, I, 213; Mr. Morgan. I, 361; Mr. Hill, I, 699; Col. Clough, I, 788, 792, and is alleged as positively and directly in paragraphs VI and VIII of the petition, though in paragraph XI the Securities Co. is put into the before-mentioned inconsistent and incongrous positions of "depositary, custodian, holder and trustee" of the same shares—as trustee, with the legal title, and custodian, with no title at all.

And the decision seems to halt between the statement in one place that the Securities Co. is the owner of the shares it has acquired, and the statement in another that it is a mere fictitious personage, and that the shares have merely been placed in its name by the real owners. Compare II, 1704-5 with II, 1706-7, 1708, and see pages 12, 13, 17, supra.

Being absolute owner of the shares it has acquired, the Securities Co. is free to sell (and, indeed, as Mr. Hill says—I, 699—"to burn") all or any of its shares of either railway company without selling any of its shares of the other. And the same absolute ownership and consequent absolute power of sale was of the essence of the original project of a company to hold only Great Northern stock (Col. Clough, I, 811).

How can shares which are thus owned and may be thus dealt with be said to be consolidated, or merged, or amalgamated or pooled? And if the shares are not, certainly the corporations are not, nor are their railroads consolidated or merged, either "practically" as charged in the petition and contended for in the cross-examination of Col. Clough (I, 806), or theoretically, or in any other way.

(4) The affirmative evidence of the purpose and the only purpose for which the Securities Co. was formed is conclusive that it was to enlarge and not to restrain or monopolize interstate and foreign commerce. The evidence introduced by the Government as well as that introduced by the defendants contains also categorical denials of the charge in the petition that the Securities Co. was the outcome of a combination and conspiracy to restrain and monopolize the competitive interstate and foreign commerce of the two roads. No such thing was even thought of by any one concerned in it.

Mr. Kennedy, I, 216-7.
Mr. Perkins, I, 241-2.
Mr. Steele, I, 304-5.
Mr. Morgan, I, 362-3.
Mr. Hill, I, 695-6.

(5) It is one of the many immaterial charges brought against the Securities Co. in this suit and its precurser the Peter Power suit, that the formation of that company and the retirement of the Northern Pacific preferred stock were parts of one scheme with two objects, viz: to defraud the preferred stockholders, according to Peter Power, and to restrain interstate commerce, according to counsel for the Government.

The one ground for this fanciful charge is the fact that the filing of the Articles of the Securities Co., and the passage of a resolution by the Northern Pacific directors for retiring the preferred stock, took place on the same day, November 13, 1901.

It is safe to say that if the conspiracy had embraced those two objects, the conspirators would have taken especial care to avoid, and would have avoided, this coincidence.

The retirement of the preferred stock had been determined on long before the Securities Co. was thought of. As already stated, it was thought to defer it for action by a board of directors not chosen by the voting trust (Supra, pp. 29-30). That board was chosen at the stockholders' meeting in October. There was no directors' meeting in that month for want of a quorum (Mr. Kennedy, I, 218), hence the first meeting of the new board was held November 13. The stock must be retired, if at all, on January 1st of some year. To retire it required the payment of $75,000,000. The interval between November 13th and January 1st was short enough for carrying out plans for raising this sum, and also for giving notice to the preferred stockholders. And so if action were to be taken, it had to be taken at this meeting, and this was accordingly done (Mr. Steele, I, 306; Mr. Morgan, I. 323-327; Minutes of Northern Pacific Directors' Meeting, I, 586).

On the other hand, the completion of the Securities Co.'s Articles was delayed by absence of some of the gentlemen concerned, so as to put off the filing of them until November 13th (Col. Clough, I, 786-7).

SECURITIES CO.'S PURCHASES AND HOLDINGS OF STOCK—IT IS NOT CONTROLLED BY THE "CONSPIRATORS."

(1) Aquisitions of the Securities Co. Its Purchase of Shares. Transfer by Shareholders of each Railway Company were made Separately and Individually and not in Concert with Each Other.

(2) The Purchase of the "Harriman Shares"

(3) Control of Northern Securities Co. Mr. Hill and his Associates and Mr. Morgan and his Associates, all the "Conspirators" together, do not hold one-third of the outstanding Shares of the Company.

(4) The Securities Co.'s Holdings of Shares of other Corporations than the two Railway Companies.

(3) Mr. Hill, I, 120-2, 123-4, 129-130.

(1) Soon after its organization the Securites Co. began the acquisition of shares of the two railway companies, at the valuations already mentioned of $180 for Great Northern and $115 for Northern Pacific, at which Mr. Morgan thought the shareholders of the latter had rather the best of it. (I, 354). On November 22, 1901, the company issued a circular to the Great Northern shareholders, (I, 701,) announcing its readiness for sixty days to accept offers of their shares at $180, payable in Securities stock at par, a price considerably less than the market price of this stock at that time, which was between 187 and 195. (Mr. Hill, I, 692.) This was in accord with the purpose that had existed almost from the outset, and resulted in various letters and personal applications by Great Northern shareholders to Mr. Hill for information and advice. (Mr. Hill, I, 702; Col. Clough, I, 832). Being about to leave New York, he prepared a form of letter to meet such inquiries as might be made in his absence, and to be sent "only in answer to communications," and "not to people that you (I) had not received inquiries from." (I, 703.) This letter (I, 704-5), dated November 30, 1901, notwithstanding the evidence given by counsel for the Government, (I, 833,) contains nothing in the way of solicitation or even advice, nor did the company, by its circular of November 22, or in any other way, make any such solicitation. (Col. Clough, I, 834; Mr. Morgan, I, 363).

Great Northern shareholders resorted to Mr. Hill for his opinion as to whether it would be for their interest to exchange their stock, just as they had doubtless often resorted to him for his opinion as to whether the stock was a good purchase at the market price, or whether they had better take their proportion of a new issue of shares, or sell their rights. And Mr. Hill answered these new inquiries about exchange of stock, just as he had many times answered inquiries such as have just been suggested —and for the same reason and no other.

The circular and draft of letter are as follows (I, 701, 703):

"27-29 Pine Street, New York City,

November 22, 1901.

"TO HOLDERS OF STOCK OF THE GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY:

"The Northern Securites Company, incorporated under the laws of the state of New Jersey, with an authorized capital stock of $400,000,000, and with power to invest in and hold the securites of other companies, has commenced business, and has acquired from several large holders of stock of the Great Northern Railway Company a considerable amount of that stock.

"A uniform price has been paid of $180 per share, in the fully paid stock of this company, at par. This company is ready to purchase additional shares of the same stock at the same price, payable in the same manner, and will accept offers made on that basis if made within the next sixty days.

"Offers for sale of stock of the Great Northern Railway Company should be made upon the enclosed form, and should be accompanied by the certificates of the stock offered with transfers duly executed, having United States stamps for transfer tax of two cents per share affixed.

"Upon receipt of any such offer, so accompanied, the Northern Securites Company will deliver to the seller of the stock of the Great Northern Railway Company, certificates of its own stock to the amount of the purchase price above named, or, if such certificates are not ready for delivery, its negotiable receipt obliging it to issue and deliver such certificates as soon as ready. For fractional parts of shares scrip certificates, convertible into stock in multiples of $100, will be given.

"NORTHERN SECURITIES COMPANY,
By James J. Hill,
President."

November 30th, 1901.

"Dear Sir:

"Replying to your letter of the 23rd instant, asking for further information about the Northern Securities Company, I beg to say that the business of that company is to deal in high-class securities, to hold the same for the benefit of its shareholders, and to do such other acts as will advance the interests of the companies whose securities it holds.

"The powers of the company do not include the operation of railways, banking, nor buying or selling for others on commission.

"The organization of such a company has been considered for many years by the original promoters of the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway Cmpany, and its successor, the Great Northern Railway Company, who have always remained the largest shareholders therein. These men have deemed it wise to make permanent arrangements for the protection of their interests and for securing a continuous policy in the management of their properties. Believing the Northern Securites Company will secure the objects named, they have generally sold to it their holdings of Great Northern shares, on the terms stated in the circular.

"The traffic of coal and other local companies is of great value to the railway, while the conduct of the business of such companies is outside of the railway's corporate powers. The Securities Company will control this large traffic for the railway and will receive the profits of these separate properties.

"The offer contained in the circular came from the request of the large holders of Great Northern, above mentioned, who desired that all other holders might have the same opportunities as themselves in association with them, and upon the same terms. The writer is of opinion that the offer of the Securities Company is one that Great Northern shareholders can accept with profit and advantage to themselves.

"Yours truly,
(Signed) JAS. J. HILL."

It will be noticed that in neither the circular nor the letter is there any designation of any railway shares as acquired or likely to be acquired by the Securities Co. other than those of the Great Northern Co. There is not even an intimation that any Northern Pacific shares have been or will or may be obtained.

It does not appear that a single Great Northern shareholder, outside of Mr. Hill's immediate associates holding about 33 millions, transferred his shares to the Securities Co. with any knowledge or notice that the Securities Co. had acquired or contemplated acquiring any shares whatever of the Northern Pacific Co., or with any knowledge of the conspiracy charged in the petition.

And it does not appear how many Great Northern Shareholders received this letter of Mr. Hill, nor how many of those who did receive it transferred their shares to the Securities Co.

In October, 1902, the Securities Co. had acquired 95 millions of Great Northern stock, for which it had issued its own shares to the amount of 171 millions. (Col. Clough, I, 839).

It had also acquired about 150 millions of Northern Pacific common stock, including the 37 millions of the Harriman stock and the new common stock issued in place of the retired preferred stock. And the total stock outstanding was about 350 millions.

The transfers of shares in each company were made by the share-owners individually, each for himself, without any agreement or concerted action, and in each case they were absolute, without any condition as to title or use, or any agreement as to the use or disposition of the shares of the Securities Co. received in exchange.

On these points the testimony (most of it introduced by the Government) is conclusive.

J. P. Morgan & Co's. shares were the subject of some negotiating before they were turned in. (Mr. Hill, I, 143; Mr. Steele, I, 297, 303).

Mr. Kennedy says (I, 213):

> "I sold it" (my stock) "absolutely to the Northern Securities Co." (I have) "no control over the stock. I have over the Northern Securities Co. stock, of course, but not over the stock that I sold them."
>
> (I, 214) Q. The stock that you received from the Northern Securities Co. you own yourself?
>
> A. Individually; yes.
>
> Q. Have you had any agreement or arrangement as to how you shall vote or handle that?
>
> A. None whatever. Never heard such a thing suggested.
>
> Q. Was there ever any agreement, so far as you know, between the stockholders of the Northern Securities Co. that any set of men, so far as you know, were to control the Northern Securities Co.?

A. I never heard of such a thing.

Q. Or any control over it other than comes through a majority of the ownership of the stock?

A. That is the only way. Each man owns his own stock, and can do as he likes with it.

Q. Did you know of any agreement between the majority stockholders of the Northern Pacific Co. that they would all turn their stock in or sell it to the Northern Securities Co.?

(I, 216): A. I know of no such agreement; never heard of it.

Q. So far as you know, did or did not the stockholders act individually as they saw fit?

A. They all acted individually.

Q. In selling their stock to the Northern Securities Co.?

A. Certainly. I did, I know, and I suppose all the others did the same.

Mr. Steele says, (I, 303):

Q. In dealing with the Northern Securities Co. for the sale of stock, did the Northern Pacific stockholders act separately or in a body?

A. As to that I can only state what I think I have already testified to" (I, 297-8) "that my firm made the negotiations as to the price at which the stock which we had should be sold to the Northern Securities Co.; and it was understood that our friends, by which I intend to mean the same persons that I tried to describe to Mr. Boutelle, were to have the right to put their stock in at the same figure. There was no binding agreement on our part that they should, and we had no authority to obligate them to do so. It was a matter for individual determination by each Northern Pacific stockholder, and extended only to those whom I have included as our friends, constituting in amount about 41 or 42 millions."

Mr. Morgan confirms Mr. Steele (I, 363):

Mr. Hill says, (I, 700):

> Q. In the purchases made by the Northern Securities Co. from the Great Northern stockholders, state whether or not such purchases have been the result of any agreement among several stockholders, or whether they were separate transactions with each shareholder who sold his stock?
>
> A. Each sale covered nothing but the sale of that particular stock. Each shareholder acted for himself at all times. * * *
>
> Q. Now, was there any solicitation with the shareholders of the Great Northern either on the part of the officers of the Great Northern or of the officers of the Northern Securities Co. —any solicitation to them to turn in, to transfer, their shares to the Northern Securities Co.?
>
> A. No, sir, there was absolutely none. On the contrary great pains were taken to see that every shareholder understood that it was a matter for himself to decide and one that nobody else could decide for him. The price was such, being below the market, that it was thought it would deter a number from selling their stock. In fact, I did not expect that so large a number of the shareholders would exchange their stock. We gave them the opportunity if they desired it."

And see I, 704-6, for Mr. Hill's cross examination on this point and on his form of letter to inquiring shareholders.

Col. Clough, vice-president of the Securities Co. and in general charge of its New York office, being questioned (I, 787) as to his knowledge of the transfers of Great Northern and Northern Pacific shares to the Securities Co., and having answered that he had knowledge and that "it was all done under my supervision" testifies as follows, (I, 788):

> Q. Now, state whether the transefers were individual, absolute without reservation, and without solicitation from the Northern Securities Co.—fully.
>
> A. To answer the first question: Every purchase of stock that has been made by the Northern Securities Co. (whatever stock it may be) has been made by direct individual transactions and negotiations with the owner, except in the one instance I have referred to in my previous testimony of the purchase of the Harriman and Pierce stock, where J. P. Morgan & Co. negotiated the purchase, and the purchase was assigned to the Northern Securities Co.
>
> Q. Now, were the transfers absolute?
>
> A. They were absolute and unconditional in every case.
>
> Q. Were they solicited by the Northern Securities Co.?
> A. No, sir; in no case.

Col. Clough goes on to speak of the circular of November 22, 1901; of the many shareholders who brought in their stock personally, and of the information given them, especially after the bringing of suits against the company had been begun.

There is nothing in the record to contradict or qualify this and the other evidence on this point. Yet the Circuit Court, having found that the promoters of the Securities Co. agreed with each other to use their influence to induce other shareholders in the two railway companies to transfer their shares to the Securities Co. (see page 68, supra) has also found (II, 1705) that—

"The Securities Co. was enabled to make the subsequent purchases of stock from stockholders of the Great Northern Company not immediately concerned in the organization of the Securities Co., by the advice, procurement and persuasion of those stockholders of the Great Northern Co. who had been instrumental in organizing the Securities Co. and had exchanged their own stock for stock in that company shortly after its organization."

(2) The Purchase of the "Harriman Shares."—Shortly after its organization, the Securities Co. became the purchaser of the Northern Pacific common and preferred shares (amounting together to about 78 millions) which had been bought by the Oregon Short Line Co., and stood in the name of Mr. Harriman and Mr. Pierce. Much space is devoted in the testimony for the government to the preliminaries of this purchase, but the facts may be briefly stated:

When the Oregon Short Line Co. realized that the Northern Pacific Board of Directors who had been chosen in October, 1901, (and who, according to agreement, had been named by Mr. Morgan) would in all probability take proceedings to retire the preferred stock, and thus make the Oregon Co. a minority shareholder, negotiations were opened with J. P. Morgan & Co. for a sale of these shares (Harriman, I, 901-2, 903-4). The negotiations were protracted. Mr. Harriman, who acted for the Oregon Co., seems to have waited till the Northern Pacific directors, on November 13, 1901, had voted to retire the stock on the first day of January then next, before closing the bargain (I, 907). It was toward the end of the negotiations and but a few days before they were closed, that it was proposed to make part-payment in stock of a company which proposed to take Great Northern shares at $180 and Northern Pacific at $115, payable in its own shares at par (I, 901, 902-7).

Mr. Harriman first learned that the stock was to be delivered to the Securities Co. when it was in fact delivered.

> "The first I knew was when it was delivered to that company" (I, 902).
> "There never was anything on their part, it seems to me, that would lead me to infer that they were to turn that stock over to a holding company. Towards the end when the matter crystalized, and when we were very nearly at the end of our tether, they offered to pay for these shares in the stock of a holding company so much, and so much in cash. Now, there was nothing said as to whether they would turn this stock over to a holding company, or whether they would hold it themselves; but they would give us that holding company's stock in part-payment" (I, 901).

He dealt with J. P. Morgan & Co., as principals. They did not claim to be acting for others (I, 900, 901, 902). He had nothing to do with forming the Securities Co. and made no investigations, but relied on the statements of J. P. Morgan & Co. and the reputation of the men engaged in forming the company (I, 907).

Mr. Perkins, who acted for his firm in negotiating the purchase, says the terms were agreed on about November 18, 1901, and that J. P. Morgan & Co.

then sold the shares or assigned their purchase to the Securities Co. (I, 240, and see Mr. Morgan, I, 357; Schiff, I, 267; and Col. Clough, I, 788). The purchase was not at so much per share, but for a round sum. And when the shares came to be delivered to the Securities Co., they proved to be less than had been supposed, and the Securities Co. refused to take them at the price, but did take them after a substantial reduction of the price (I, 240; Mr. Steele, I, 302). The shares actually delivered amounted to $37,023,000 of common stock, and $41,085.000 of the preferred stock. The reduced price paid was the round sum of $91,407,500, payable $82,491,871 in shares of the Securities Co. and $8,915,629 in cash (I, 910 as explained by Col. Clough, I, 914-6).

An examination of the citations from the record at the head of this statement of the Harriman purchase, will supply matters of detail necessarily omitted here. There is some discrepancy among the witnesses in the matter of dates, but they agree that J. P. Morgan & Co. acted for themselves, and that they closed the bargain with Mr. Harriman after the organization of the Securities Co., (and see Mr. Steele, I, 302-3,) and afterwards assigned to the Securities Co.

Mr. Hill took no part in the negotiations, and knows only that there were negotiations and that the sale was made (I, 92, 94, 96).

Mr. Steele (I, 303) testifies that there was no connection whatever between the organization of the Securities Co. and the acquisition of the Harriman stock. And Mr. Morgan says (I, 362):

> Q. Was it agreed by any one, so far as you know, before the Northern Securities Co. was organized that the so-called Harriman or Union Pacific stocks in the Northern Pacific should be placed in the Northern Securities Co.?
>
> A. No, we did not require it.
>
> Q. And you did not know that it would be done until after the consummation?
>
> A. Not until after.

Mr. Hill was asked (I, 99) if there was any connection between the organization of the Securities Co. and the purchase of the Harriman stock, and is emphatic in his denial of any connection whatsoever between them.

And Mr. Morgan's testimony (I, 357, at bottom) shows that he considered his firm had bought the Harriman stock and might have kept it if they so desired, instead of selling to the Securities Co.

(3) The petition, while it charges Messrs. Hill and Morgan and their friends with conspiring to restrain and monopolize commerce by placing the control of the two railway companies (then possessed, as it says, by themselves) in the hands of the Securities Co., wisely refrains from charging them with doing this in their own interest or for their own benefit. The evidence shows that whereas before the formation of the Securities Co. they possessed a majority of Northern Pacific common stock, with the right to acquire a majority of all the stock in the retirement of the preferred stock and issue of an equivalent amount of new common stock, (see page supra), and somewhere near 39 per cent of Great Northern, their conspiracy has, up to the present time, cost them the control of the Northern Pacific, and they have not gained control of either the Great Northern Co. or the Securities Co. Whatever Northern Pacific or Great Northern stock they may still retain must be far less than enough to give any sort of control; and the more of such stock they retain, the less stock have they in the Securities Co. But even if they had transferred to the Securities Co. all their 33 millions of Great Northern, (less Mr. Hill's 2½ to 3 millions, retained by him) and all their 41 to 42 millions of Northern Pacific Common, and all the new common stock which the holders of the 42 millions would be entitled to obtain (75/80 of their holding,) they would still hold only about 140 millions of Securities Co. stock, out of a total of 400 millions, of which 350 to 360 millions have been issued. (Col. Clough, I, 254; Mr. Hill, I, 713). And none of them has any stock left in either railway company, except Mr. Hill, who has a little over two per cent of Great Northern—hardly a "controlling interest."

If their aim was to restrain or monopolize commerce, it was not to do either for themselves, but to surpass all the classic instances of "Sic vos non vobis."

And hence the statement in the decision (II, 1709) that "a few men acting in concert and in the name and under cover of its charter" are given "the power to control all the means of transportation of" the two railway companies, and the statement (II, 1710) that "the object and necessary effect" of the combination in hand "is to give to a single person or to a coterie of persons full control of all means of transportation," etc., are without foundation. They lay out of account the 1300 shareholders who have not conspired, and who hold the great majority of the stock; for the word "coterie" would hardly include them, and "a few men" certainly would not. Mr. Morgan says, (I, 356) in testimony offered by the Government:

> "There is no interest that I know of to-day that can control the Northern Securities Company."

Even without the plenary proof of what was the purpose of the men who promoted the Securities Co., the bare statement of their holdings in that company is alone enough to show that it was not to gain control of both railway companies, whether for the purpose of restraining or monopolizing commerce or committing any other crime. They knew that the result of their plan would not be to give them additional control, but would take from them the control they already had of one (and one only) of the companies, and take away whatever power they already had of violating the Anti-trust Act in respect of the commerce of either of them.

RESULTS OF FORMATION OF SECURITIES CO.

(1) Commerce has not been Monopolized or Restrained. Each Railway is managed and required by law to be Managed by a wholly Different Board of Directors from that of the other. Each is operated as independently and competes as much with the other as before the Securities Co, was formed.

(2) Amount and Percentage of the Interstate Commerce of Each Railway on which competition could be lessened or Rates Controlled even by a full Consolidation of the two Companies and the Absolute Ownership of both Lines by a Single Company. Such Amount is less than 3 per cent of the total Interstate Commerce of Each—Competing Rates between same points necessarily the same on both Lines, however Independent of Each other.

(3) Increase of Traffic from Burlington Purchase necessarily brings reduction of rates along the whole line of each Company. Reduction already made.

(4) No Evidence of a Purpose on the Part of the Securities Co. or either Railway Co. to restrain or Monopolize Commerce or to combine or conspire for that purpose.

Mr. Commissioner Prouty, I. 642.
(3) Mr. Hill, I, 683-4, 730-1).

(1) The formation of the Securities Co. has not resulted in any monopoly or restraint of commerce or suppression of competition.

The management of each railway company is solely in its board of directors, and its commerce is carried on by the board and by the officers and servants appointed by the board. The Securities Co. can at most elect a board of directors for each company. And these boards must be distinct from each other. No person can be a member of both boards, nor can the same person be an officer of both companies. The Great Northern charter provides (I, 441,) that > "'All the affairs and business of the said company shall be conducted by or under the direction of the board of directors and they are authorized for the purposes specified in this act to make and establish regulations and by-laws, and to do all things necessary to be done, and not inconsistent with the constitution and laws of the United States, or the laws of this territory, or this act."

The same section provides that the first directors chosen shall be divided by lot into three classes, to hold office respectively for one, two and three years; and the directors elected in each year thereafter "shall hold their offices three years and until their successors shall be elected and enter upon their duties." (I, 441). And this classification and term of office is shown in the list of directors in the 12th and 13th annual reports of the company. (I, 465, 921, 923).

The Northern Pacific charter provides as follows (I, 425):

> "Section 9. All of the affairs of said company shall be managed by a board of directors, who shall be stockholders, and who are hereby invested with all the powers of the corporation save as hereinafter provided. They shall be chosen annually by ballot by the stockholders at the annual meeting of the company" * * *

The evidence, introduced by the Government, of Mr. Mellen and others as to the management of the two railways since the formation of the Securities Co. is as follows (I, 175-8):

> "Q. Mr. Mellen, is there any difference in the management of the Northern Pacific road before and the management since the organization of the Northern Securities Company?
>
> A. None whatever. * * *
>
> Q. Speaking about competition, Mr. Mellen. Now, take between the head of the lakes and Minneapolis and St. Paul, the rates of the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific are the same, are they not?
>
> A. Yes.
>
> Q. Must be the same?
>
> A. Yes. * * *
>
> Q. You said there was active competition. Do you mean by that each road is struggling to get all the business it can?
>
> A. Yes.

Q. And that competition is active to-day, is it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, is it possible in railroad management for the rates between the same points to be different over one line from another line between the same points?

A. Yes; if you want the business all to go by the line with the lowest rate.

Q. If each company does business, the rates have to be the same?

A. Substantially the same.

Q. As between all competing points between the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern the rates are the same, are they not?

A. They are.

Q. And have always been the same since you have been there?

A. So far as I know.

Q. Then you mean by competition each line is struggling by soliciting business and getting business to get all it can?

A. Yes; offering superior facilities and bringing pressure to bear and influence personal and otherwise, and every way you can.

Q. Do you mean to say that the conditions that you have just testified to were due to business conditions, to natural conditions, or to agreements and understandings reached between traffic managers and officials of the lines?

A. Both.

Q. Well, isn't the main factor in the conditions you have testified to the fact that the roads, for the purpose of preventing competition, have made a tacit agreement to maintain certain rates?

A. No.

Q. That is not the fact?

A. No.

(I, 178):

Q. Are not the rates, and have they not been for a number of years between the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern, understood between those companies and maintained to a certain given point?

A. The rates between the Northern Pacific and Great Northern are frequently misunderstood, I am very sorry to say, to the detriment of both companies and the public, and I find no difference in the conditions to-day from what I found when I came here, and I don't expect there will be any difference in the conditions if I should stay here for ten years to come. * * *

(I, 179):

Q. The rates, of course, have to be published?

A. Yes.

Q. And you have to publish those rates a certain time before they go into effect under the law?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know of any way that the Great Northern can have a published tariff or have a rate that is less than the Northern Pacific between two common points and the Northern Pacific get any business?

A. No. I don't know how it can be done.

Q. Isn't it a positive necessity that makes rates between the same termini of competing railroads the same? Isn't it a positive necessity?

A. Yes.

And in the examination of Mr. Harriman by the Interstate Commerce Commission, put in evidence by the Government, Commissioner Prouty thus expresses what is a truism in railway transportation, (I, 642):

"You know, Mr. Harriman, that competing rates have to be practically the same between the same points."

Mr. Morgan says (I, 320) that up to the date of his testifying (March 26, 1902) the Northern Pacific Co. has been conducted as an independent organization.

Mr. Hill, testifying for defendants, says (I, 697):

> Q. Has anything been done between the two companies for the purpose of reducing competition at any point?
>
> A. Nothing whatever. I think the competition is just as free and full as it has been at any time in the past 20 years.
>
> Q. So that, as far as you know, Mr. Hill, is either road operated less independently of the other since the formation of the Northern Securities Co. than it was before?
>
> A. If there is any difference, I think they are a little more independent of each other. (And he goes on and gives an instance of this).

As to the status of the board of each company as independent of the shareholders during its term of office, and the statutory requirement of separate officers for each company, see Col. Clough, I, 841-3.

(2) The amount or percentage of the interstate commerce that could be affected even if the Securities Co. had control of the operations of the two companies—had as complete control as the Burlington would have should it obtain a 99 year lease of both the Great Northern and Northern Pacific, or as the New York Central has of the West Shore by virtue of a perpetual lease (besides ownership of all the stock)—is very small. Mr. Hill in his testimony (I, 697, 714) puts it as under 10 per cent; but it is much less than 10 per cent. It does not exceed 3 per cent of the interstate commerce of the two companies. This is fully shown in Defendants' Exhibits 6 and 7, (I, 969-976), which are explained by Col. Clough (I, 802-3, 874-8, 853-7).

The following table, a combination of those in I, 969 and 973, shows the percentage of the competitive and noncompetitive interstate commerce on each line.

	G. N. per cent.		N. P. per cent.
1. Traffic, the rates on which could be controlled by joint action of the two companies alone ..	2.78		2.89
2. Traffic the rates on which could be controlled by the two companies and connecting lines,but not by the two companies alone	.65	3.43	4.90	7.79
3. Traffic which is in competition with other lines, and the rates on which could not be controlled by the two companies alone	6.89		2.58
4. Traffic the rates on which could be made only by agreement with connecting carriers, and which is also in competition with other carriers, so that the rates on it could not be controlled by the two companies alone, or by them and connecting carriers	17.09	23.98	13.25	15.83

5. Traffic on either line between points not reached by the other, and so non-competitive	72.59		76.38

The rates on any class of traffic, except class 1, can not be controlled merely by control of the two companies. Those in class 2 (joint rates) can be made only by assent of connecting carriers. Those on class 3 are subject to the competition of other carriers. Those on class 4 (joint rates) require assent of connecting carriers and are also subject to the competition of other carriers. Those on class 5 are non-competitive, and subject to the sole control of each company to the exclusion of the other.

It is therefore evident that the only interstate competitive traffic which the control of the two railways could give power to restrain or monopolize by suppressing competition is that in class 1, being 2.78 per cent of the total interstate and foreign commerce of the Great Northern Co. and 2.89 per cent of that of the Northern Pacific Co.

From this table, with the statement in the same exhibits of the amount of the gross earnings in each of these five classes of commerce, it appears that, In the year ending June 30, 1901, from class 1 the Great Northern earned (I, 972) $471,218.88, and the Northern Pacific (I, 976) $554,395.24, making a total of $1,025,614.12 for both roads. Deducting the operating expenses—51 per cent on the Northern Pacific (I, 998) and 55 per cent on the Great Northern (I, 484) and the net earnings from the traffic in question were:

Great Northern	$212,048.49
Northern Pacific	282,741.57
	$494,790.60

These were at the rates prevailing before any "monopoly."

Assuming that the monopoly brings about an increase of ten per cent in rates on this class of traffic, (and an increase no greater by the trunk lines, the wages of labor and everything used by the railways having risen from 25 to 150 per cent, has recently brought the Interstate Commerce Commission down upon them,) and that the advance of rates would not (though it presumably would) bring about a diminution of traffic, then the increase of the net earnings of the two companies as a result of the "monopoly" would be $49,479.

The amount actually earned by each company is of course mingled with its other funds, and from the aggregate its dividends are declared and paid. Assuming that the Securities Co. owned (as it does not) all the shares of both railway companies, it would receive from them, separately, dividends the aggregate amount of which would be increased by this sum of $49,479.

Of this Messrs. Hill and Morgan and their associates, if they owned as much as 140 millions of Securities Co. stock, would receive $19,791, if only 350 millions of the Securities stock were issued. If the whole 400 millions were issued, they would receive $17,317.

And when either of these sums is divided up among Mr. Morgan and Mr. Hill and their associates, the addition to his annual income which each of these gentlemen would receive would hardly seem to justify their labor and outlays, to say nothing of their abandoning control of the Northern Pacific Co. and incurring the heavy penalties of a criminal conspiracy.

This proof furnishes an additional corroboration of what needed no such aid—the direct testimony of the alleged conspirators as to their real motives and objects. And whether by itself, or in connection with the proof showing that the alleged conspiracy to control the two companies was (if a conspiracy at all) a conspiracy to abandon control of one of them and make it more difficult to gain control of the other, it amounts to a demonstration of the absurdity of the charge of conspiracy on which alone the petition is founded.

(3) Mr. Hill (I, 683-4, 730) speaks of the increase of traffic and reduction of rates since the Burlington purchase and since the organization of the Securities Co., and says that the reduction already made amounts to about 10 per cent, reducing the gross earnings by that amount. That the reduction of rates was made possible by the increased earnings and that the increased earnings were largely due to the Burlington purchase. And see I, 682, 736, (already quoted) as to the increase of traffic. And see the Great Northern Annual reports for the years ending June 30, 1901 and 1902, respectively, (I, 483, I, 921, 944) the first showing gross earnings of $28,350,689.06 and the second showing $36,032,256.06. That this is not owing wholly to good times is apparent on comparing the earnings of 1900-1 with those of 1899-1900, also given at I, 483, and which were $28,910,789.26.

So that up to October of last year the formation of the Securities Co. had neither restrained the commerce (domestic, or interstate or foreign) of the Great Northern Co. or raised rates. On the contrary commerce has increased and rates have as a consequence been reduced.

And what is true of the Great Northern is also true of the Northern Pacific. See the Reports I, 998, 1004.

(4) There is absolutely no evidence whatever, direct, circumstantial or even presumptive, that the Securities Co., or either railway company, or any body connected with either of the three companies has now or has ever had or ever will have any purpose of restraining or monopolizing any part of the interstate or foreign commerce of the two railways or of either of them, or of engaging in any contract, conspiracy or combination to that end, or of doing anything to impair the absolute independence of the management of the railways and the free competition between them which the evidence shows has not been in anywise changed by the stock acquisitions of the Securities Co.

The Government's case must rest on the assumption that such stock holding by the Securities Co. necessarily destroys that independence and freedom, and necessarily imposes restraint and creates monopoly. But that can hardly be called a necessary result which the evidence shows has not resulted at all.

And while the Circuit Court was wrong, as we claim, in its law when it held the power to restrain commerce to be the same thing in law as actual restraint, the decision whether wrong or right, has no application to the facts of this case, for the Securities Co. has no power to restrain the commerce of either railway company.

SPECIFICATION OF ERRORS.

First. The Court erred in finding and deciding that in the summer of 1901 certain large and influential stockholders of the defendant railway companies conceived the design of placing a very large majority of the stock of both said companies in the hands of a single owner. And erred in finding and deciding that the stockholders thus described had practical control of the roads of the two defendant railway companies.

Second. The Court erred in finding and deciding that said above described shareholders arranged and agreed with each other that a corporation to be formed by them under the laws of New Jersey should buy all, or least the greater part, of the stock of each of the defendant railway companies.

Third. The Court erred in finding and deciding that the above described stockholders agreed with each other to exchange their respective holdings of stock in the two defendant railway companies for the stock of such New Jersey company.

Fourth. The Court erred in finding and deciding that the above described stockholders agreed with each other to use their influence to induce other stockholders in their respective companies to exchange their respective holdings of stock in said railway companies for the stock of such New Jersey company, and in deciding that this was to the end that the New Jersey company might become the sole owner of the whole or at least a major portion of the stock of both said railway companies.

Fifth. The Court erred in finding and deciding that the Northern Securities Company was organized under the plan mentioned in the foregoing assignments, and in finding and deciding that the capital stock of $400,000,000 with which the Northern Securities Company was organized, was the exact amount required to purchase the total stock of the two defendant railway companies at the price agreed to be paid therefor.

Sixth. The Court erred in finding and deciding that when the Northern Securities Company was organized it assented to and became a party to the above mentioned scheme so found by the court as aforesaid to have been devised by its promoters.

Seventh. The Court erred in finding and deciding that the Northern Securities Company was enabled to make purchases of stock of the Great Northern Railway Company from holders thereof not immediately concerned in the organization of the Northern Securities Company, by the advice, procurement and persuasion of those stockholders of said railway company who had been instrumental in organizing the Northern Securities Company.

Eighth. The Court erred in finding and deciding that the scheme so as aforesaid erroneously found by it to have been devised and consummated, placed the control of the railways of said two railway companies in the hands of the Northern Securities Company, and destroyed every motive for competition between said two railway companies by pooling their earnings for the common benefit of the stockholders of both railway companies; and erred in finding and deciding that any such, or any pooling of earnings was ever contemplated or has ever been made.

Ninth. The Court erred in holding and deciding that all contracts and combinations which merely tend to restrain interstate commerce whether by suppression of competition or otherwise, are in themselves, and although such tendency does not result in any such restraint, violations of the Act of Congress of July 2, 1890, known as the Anti-trust Act.

Tenth. The Court erred in holding and deciding that all contracts and combinations which merely confer the power to restrain interstate commerce, whether by suppression of competition or otherwise, are in themselves contracts or combinations in restraint of such commerce and declared illegal by the Anti-trust Act, though such power is not and is not intended to be exercised.

Eleventh. The Court erred in holding and deciding that every combination whereby the power is acquired to suppress competition between two parallel and competing lines of railway operating under State charters and engaged in interstate commerce, is a combination in violation of said Anti-trust Act whether such power is exercised or intended to be exercised, or not.

Twelfth. The Court erred in holding and deciding that it would have been a violation of said Anti-trust Act had the individual defendants, in pursuance of a previous agreement so to do, sold their shares of stock in the defendant railway companies to a natural person, and had induced their fellow-shareholders to do the same, with the resulting acquisition, by such individual, of a majority of the stock of each railway company.

Thirteenth. The Court erred in holding and deciding that the interstate commerce of each defendant railway company is controlled by its shareholders and not by its Board of Directors.

Fourteenth. The Court erred in holding and deciding that the Northern Securities Company directly controls the commerce of both of the defendant railway companies, though by the charter of each company the management of its business is vested in its Board of Directors, and the companies have and must have separate and distinct Boards of Directors.

Fifteenth. The Court erred in holding that the ownership of a majority of the shares of each of two competing railway companies gives to the owner of such shares a control over each of such companies and its commerce which the holder of a majority of the shares of a single railway company was held, in Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Missouri Pacific Ry. Co., 115 U. S. 587, not to possess over such single railway company or its commerce.

Sixteenth. The Court erred in holding and deciding that the constitution and composition of railway companies chartered by states or organized under State laws, but carrying on interstate commerce, are themselves matters of interstate commerce, and, as such, subject to regulation by Congress. And in holding and deciding that under the Commerce clause of the Constitution Congress has power to prescribe who may and who shall not be shareholders in such companies, and how much stock any one stockholder or combination of stockholders may own in any such company, and to authorize and forbid the consolidation of such corporations or any of them.

And erred in holding and deciding that the acquisition and holding of stock in such railway companies, and all matters of their internal constitution and composition, are not matters over which the State incorporating such company has exclusive power of regulation. And erred in holding that the authorizing or forbidding of the consolidation of any two such railway companies is not within the exclusive power of the State or States by or under whose laws they have been incorporated.

Seventeenth. The Court erred in holding that consolidations of railway companies created by or under State laws and competitors in interstate commerce, are effectual restraints upon such commerce, and that such consolidations, though expressly authorized by State charter, are violations of said Anti-trust Act and illegal.

Eighteenth. The Court erred in holding and deciding that any of the defendants have ever attempted to interpose the New Jersey charter of the Northern Securities Company as a shield between themselves and the law, and that such charter is about the only shield that can be so interposed.

Nineteenth. The Court erred in finding and deciding that "the reasoning which led to the acquisition of that (the said New Jersey) charter" was "that while as individuals the promoters could not, by agreement among themselves, place the majority of the stock of the two competing and parallel railroads in the hands of a single person or a few persons, giving him or them the power to operate the roads in harmony and stifle competition, yet that the same persons might create a purely fictitious person termed a corporation, which could neither think nor act except as they directed, and by placing the same stock in the name of such artificial being, accomplish the same purpose."

Twentieth. The Court erred in holding and deciding that the shares of the two defendant railway companies held by the Northern Securities Company have merely been placed in its name by the former holders thereof, and that it is not the absolute owner of the same in its own sole right.

Twenty-first. The Court erred in holding and deciding that, "so far as the New Jersey charter is concerned, the question which the Court has to determine is whether a charter granted by a State can be used to defeat the will of the National legislature as expressed in a law relating to interstate trade and commerce over which Congress has absolute control."

Twenty-second. The Court erred in holding and deciding that the existing combination gives to a few men acting in concert and in the name of the Northern Securities Company and under cover of its charter the power to control all the means of transportation of the defendant railway companies, and to directly control said companies and all their commerce.

Twenty-third. The Court erred in finding and deciding that "the object and necessary effect" of the combination found by it to exist in this case, "is to give to a single person or to a coterie of persons full control of all the means of transportation owned by two parallel and competing lines of railroad engaged in interstate commerce, as well as the power to fix the rate for the transportation of persons and property."

Twenty-fourth. The Court erred in holding and deciding that the said Anti-trust Act, if construed as forbidding or restricting the shareholders of the two defendant railway companies from selling their shares to the Northern Securities Company, or exchanging them for shares of that Company, or as forbidding or restraining that company from making such purchases or exchanges and holding the railway shares thus acquired as its own, is a valid law and not in conflict with the fifth amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

Twenty-fifth. The Court erred in holding that the said Anti-trust Act was intended, and was and is effectual, to include and prohibit "virtual consolidations" of parallel and competing railway companies chartered by the several States, and combinations looking to such "virtual consolidations."

Twenty-sixth. The Court erred in holding and deciding that this proceeding can be maintained under Section one of said Anti-trust Act, although it is alleged in the Petition itself, and appears by the proofs, that whatever the combination or conspiracy complained of was formed to do had been fully and completely done and effected before this proceeding was begun.

Twenty-seventh. The Court erred in disregarding as immaterial the averments of the answers and the proofs in support thereof, showing that the combination in question was not a combination in restrain of commerce; that its purpose was and its effect has been to very largely build up, increase and protect the interstate and foreign commerce of the two railway companies. And erred in considering not all the effects of said combination upon such commerce, but only its possible effect in restraining a minute portion of such commerce—an effect at the most incidental—and in unduly magnifying the extent and importance of such incidental restraint, and holding the same to be the principal if not the only purpose and effect of such combination.

Twenty-eighth. The Court erred in holding that the proofs disclosed any contract, combination or conspiracy in restraint of interstate or foreign commerce, or any other combination than one to build up and enlarge interstate and foreign commerce without any restraining of either.

Twenty-ninth. The Court erred in deciding and decreeing "that the defendants have heretofore entered into a combination or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce among the several states, such as an Act of Congress, approved July 2, 1890, * * * denounces as illegal."

Thirtieth. The Court erred in deciding and decreeing that all of the stock of either of the defendant railway companies claimed to be held and owned by the defendant Northern Securities Company, was acquired and is now held by the Northern Securities Company in virtue of the combination or conspiracy mentioned in the last preceding assignment, and erred in decreeing that any of said stock was acquired or is held in virtue of any such combination or conspiracy.

Thirty-first. The Court erred in decreeing that the Northern Securities Company be enjoined, and in enjoining it, from acquiring or attempting to acquire any further stock of either of the defendant railway companies, and from voting any stock at any stockholders' meeting of either railway company, and from exercising or attempting to exercise any control, direction, supervision or influence whatever over the acts of either railway company by virtue of its holding of stock therein.

Thirty-second. The Court erred in decreeing that each defendant railway company, and its directors, officers, agents and servants, be enjoined, and in enjoining them, from permitting the shares thereof held by the Northern Securities Company to be voted at any corporate election of such railway company; and from paying to that company any dividend on the stock of such railway company which it now claims to own and hold; and from permitting or suffering that company or any of its officers or agents to exercise any control whatever over any of the corporate acts of such railway company.

Thirty-third. The Court erred in deciding and decreeing that the Northern Securities Company does not and cannot lawfully hold shares in even one of the defendant railway companies, and has not and cannot enjoy or exercise the rights and powers incident to such ownership; and in decreeing injunctions depriving it of all rights of a stockholder in either one of the two railway companies.

Thirty-fourth. The Court erred in rendering any decree save a decree for a dismissal of the petition and proceeding.

ARGUMENT.

Summary of the Facts.

1. For some years prior to 1901 the two railway companies had been engaged in an enterprise of building up a great interstate and Oriental commerce. (Supra, pp. 22-31).

2. In April, 1901, they purchased nearly all the Burlington shares at a cost of over $200,000,000, paying for them with their joint bonds, and not with the bonds of the Burlington Co. as stated in the decision, (supra, pp. 32-34). They made the purchase not with any view of placing the two companies, their shares or their commerce, under a single control. (Supra, p. 39).

3. Immediately after this purchase, persons interested in the Union Pacific Ry. Co. attempted to obtain the stock control of the Northern Pacific Co., their object being to prevent the carrying out of the enterprise of the defendant railway companies, and especially to prevent the use of the Burlington road in carrying out that enterprise. (Supra, pp. 46-7).

4. This "raid" (as it is called) on the Northern Pacific stock failed, the failure being largely due to an error of the raiders in buying common instead of preferred stock. (Supra, pp. 48-51). But there was imminent danger that another like attempt might be made and be successful. (Supra, p. 57).

5. Such a raid, if successful, would destroy the commerce the railway companies were building up, and in aid of which they had bought the Burlington shares. (Supra, pp. 53-6).

6. For some years prior to 1901, Mr. Hill and ten other shareholders in the Great Northern Co., holding less than 30 per cent of its stock, had contemplated the formation of a company to which they should make absolute transfers of their shares in consideration of the shares of such new company. Their purpose was that the shares should be voted alike in the future as they had been in the past, and that they should fare alike in any sale of them that might be made. (Supra, pp. 58-60).

7. In June, 1901, after the defeat of the raid, it was first suggested that the proposed company should be enlarged so as to include the Northern Pacific common stock (about $21,000,000) held by the same persons, and later the plan was still further widened so as to include the Northern Pacific common stock (about $20,000,000) held by J. P. Morgan & Co. should they desire to make such disposition of the stock held by them. (Supra, pp. 62, 64-5).

8. It had all along been the purpose of Mr. Hill and his ten associates that every shareholder in the Great Northern Co. should be given an opportunity to join the company as originally planned,—this not because they needed or desired the accession of such other shareholders, but to avoid any complaint of unfair treatment on their part. (Supra, pp. 60-61).

9. This purpose was carried into the enlarged project, and, at the instance of Mr. Morgan, the same opportunity was to be given to holders of Northern Pacific stock. (Supra, pp. 65, 64).

And like the company originally projected, the enlarged company was to be authorized and was expected to acquire shares in coal mines and in industrial enterprises of utility to the railways, but whose stock the railway companies could not hold, and also to be a financial as well as an investment company, with power in that capacity to aid the operations of the railway companies, or of any other companies whose shares or securities it might hold.

10. The amount of Great Northern stock held by Mr. Hill and his ten associates was from 33 to 35 milions out of a total capital of $125,000,000. (Supra, p. 58).

In 1896, they had severally acquired $29,000,000 of Northern Pacific common stock, which amount had, on May 1, 1901, been reduced by sales to $20,000,000. (Supra, p. 49).

11. In forming the Northern Securities Co. (which was incorporated November 13, 1901) it was the intention of its promoters that it should acquire, if it could, a majority of Northern Pacific stock, thereby protecting such stock from future raids, and protecting the commerce of the railways from the ruin that would result from a successful raid.

They did not desire or expect that the Securities Co. should acquire a majority of Great Northern shares. Such acquisition was not deemed necessary for the protection of the stock of that company or of the commerce of the roads. (Supra, pp. 67-68, 71).

12. While the capitalization of the Northern Securities Company is nearly, it is not (as stated in the opinion) the exact amount required to pay for all the shares of the two railway companies at the prices ($180 for Great Northern and $115 for Northern Pacific) fixed for such exchanges. (Supra, p. 67).

13. Mr. Hill and his ten associates who promoted the Securities Co. did not agree or bind themselves even to transfer their own shares to the Northern Securities Co. Each of them was left to decide for himself. Mr. Hill retained between two and three millions of his shares. (Supra, pp. 71-4).

And neither they, nor any one concerned in promoting the Securities Co., nor J. P. Morgan & Co. ever agreed in any manner that upon the organization of the Securities Co. they would "use their influence to induce other stockholders in their respective companies to do likewise," as erroneously stated in the decision, II. 1704. (Supra, pp. 67-8).

14. The Securities Co. is not a railway company and has no power to build or operate railways. Its powers are limited to buying, selling and holding stocks, bonds and other securities, with power to aid in any manner any company whose stock or bonds it may hold, and to do all acts designed to aid any company whose shares or securities it may hold, and protect or enhance the value of its investment; also to hold any real or personal property required for the transaction of its business. In short, it is at once an investment and a financial company. See the Articles, I, 18a.

15. Soon after its organization, and on November 18, 1901, the Securities Co. purchased the Northern Pacific shares that had been acquired by those concerned in the raid, known as the Harriman shares. Those had been purchased from them by J. P. Morgan & Co. The purchase comprised $37,023,000 of common stock and $41,085,000 of preferred stock, at a lump price of $91,407,500, payable (and paid) $8,915,629 in cash, and $82,491,871 in shares of the Securities Co. at par. (Supra, pp. 95-7).

About the same time it received from its promoters and J. P. Morgan & Co., the Northern Pacific common stock (about $42 000,000) held by them.

It availed itself of its right as a common stockholder of the Northern Pacific Co., to purchase at par for cash, the new common stock (issued to replace the $75,000,000 preferred stock retired) to the amount of 75-80 of the amount of common stock held by it.

As a result of these purchases, the Securities Co., at the beginning of the year 1902, and before this suit was begun (in March, 1902) held about $152,000,000 of the total $155,000,000 stock of the Northern Pacific Co.

16. Soon after its organization, Mr. Hill and the other promoters of the Securities Co. transferred to it about 30 millions of Great Northern shares at $180 in exchange for Securities shares at par, and within three months from its organization, (and before the commencement of this suit) the Securities Co. had acquired, on the same terms and from other holders, about 65 millions of Great Northern shares, making its total holdings 95 millions of the total capital of 125 millions (Decision II, 1705; Col. Clough, I, 244-6, 654).

17. It is not the fact, as stated in the decision (II, 1705), that the Securities Co. was enabled to make the purchase of the 65 millions of stock bought from non-promoters, or of any of it, by the advice, procurement or persuasion of the Great Northern shareholders who had been instrumental in organizing the Securities Co. There is not any evidence in support of this finding, and the evidence is conclusive against it.

The facts proved beyond question are that each purchase was an independent transaction between the seller of stock, and the Securities Co., without solicitation, persuasion or other influence by the Securities Co., or any one else. (Supra, pp. 90-94).

18. At the time of the formation of the Securities Co., the Great Northern shareholders were 1800 in number. Of them about 1200 transferred their shares to the Securities Co. (I, 701).

When this suit was begun, in April, 1902, the shareholders of the Securities Co. were more than 1300; in October, 1902, they were about 1890 (I, 787).

19. The Securities Co. is the absolute owner of the shares acquired by it and of the dividends thereon. The shares are not pooled or consolidated, nor are the earnings of the two roads pooled. It is in no sense a "trust." (Supra, pp. 82, 91-2).

20. The promoters of the Securities Co.—Mr. Hill and his ten associates—do not, all of them together hold, nor have they ever held more than one-third of the $360,000,000 stock of the Securities Co. that has been issued and is outstanding (I. 803), and these gentlemen and J. P. Morgan & Co. have never held more than $140,000,000. (Supra, p. 99).

21. By the charter of each railway company, its commerce is controlled and directed wholly by a board of directors, the members of which are chosen for prescribed terms and cannot be removed during their terms. And by the laws of Minnesota and Wisconsin no person who is a director in one company can be a director in the other. (Supra, pp. 102-3; I. 811-3).

22. The Securities Co. has not attempted to control or meddle with the commerce or the management of either railway, nor is there any evidence that it purposes doing either. Ever since its formation such commerce has been conducted by the two boards of directors in complete independence of each other (Supra, pp. 103, 106).

23. There has been no agreement to suppress and no suppression of competition between the two railway companies, which is as active as it was before the Securities Co. was formed. (Supra, pp. 103).

24. The entire interstate commerce of the two railways, the rates on which can be controlled by those companies without other competition or consent of connecting lines, falls short of three per cent of their total interstate commerce; and any restraint that could be in any event be imposed by the Securities Co. on their interstate commerce could only affect this three per cent. (Supra, pp. 106-8).

All the interstate commerce of each railroad (including the competitive three per cent) has been largely increased since the organization of the Securities Co., owing to the great advantages of the Burlington connection, and to the protection afforded to all the commerce of the roads by placing a majority of Northern Pacific shares beyond the reach of raids, in the ownership of the Securities Co. (Supra, pp. 41-5). And during such period rates have been reduced to such an extent as to reduce net earnings by upwards of $1,000,000. (Supra, p. 684).

25. There has been no increase of capitalization of either railway company, nor any watering of that of the railway companies or of the Northern Securities Co. The capital of each railway remains unchanged. If the Securities Co. had issued its shares at par for cash, and used the money to buy the railway shares for cash in the market at their market value, its outstanding shares would be more than at present. It would have had to issue and sell at least 190 of its shares, to be able to buy for cash each 100 shares of Great Northern which it has obtained by exchange of only 180 of its own shares. And it would have had to pay more than $115 for Northern Pacific.

The course pursued, instead of watering in any way the Securities Co.'s stock, has furnished that company with properties of a market and intrinsic value considerably in excess of the par value of the shares issued by it in payment for them.

THE ANTI-TRUST ACT AND ITS MEANING.

The title of the Anti-trust Act and the sections here material are as follows:

> "An act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies.
>
> "Sec. 1. Every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several states, or with foreign nations, is hereby declared to be illegal. Every person who shall make any such contract or engage in any such combination or conspiracy, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the court.
>
> "Sec. 2. Every person who shall monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, or combine or conspire with any other person or persons to monopolize, any part of the trade or commerce among the several states, or with foreign nations, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not exceding one year, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the court.

* * *

"Sec. 4. The several Circuit Courts of the United States are hereby invested with jurisdiction to prevent and restrain violations of this act; and it shall be the duty of the several district attorneys of the United States, in their respective districts, under the direction of the Attorney General, to institute proceedings in equity to prevent and restrain such violations. Such proceedings may be by way of petition setting forth the case and praying that such violation shall be enjoined or otherwise prohibited.

"Sec. 8. That the word 'person,' or 'persons,' wherever used in this act, shall be deemd to include corporations and associations existing under or authorized by the laws of either the United States, the laws of any of the Territories, the laws of any State, or the laws of any foreign country." (26 Stat. 209, c. 647).

1. The act is wholly a criminal law, directed to the punishment and prevention of crime. The remedy by injunction, etc., given by the 4th section is not to protect property interests, but solely to prevent "violations of this Act" (i. e. crimes, for every violation of the Act is a crime, and, without this section, would not be within the competence of a court of equity to restrain by injunction).

2. Being a criminal statute, the act is not to be enlarged by construction. The first section cannot be stretched so as to make criminal (and whatever the section declares unlawful it makes criminal, and makes nothing criminal it has not declared unlawful) every agreement, combination or conspiracy that merely tends to restrain commerce among the states, or that confers on the parties to it or any one else the power to restrain trade.

3. The act makes unlawful and criminal every contract, combination or conspiracy in direct restraint of interstate trade or commerce.

The gist of the crime is the contract, combination or conspiracy, and the offense is complete on the making of such contract, or the formation of such combination or conspiracy, though nothing be done to carry it out, and though trade be not in fact restrained.

But to constitute a combination or conspiracy in restraint of interstate trade or commerce, the parties must combine or conspire to do acts which, if performed, will of themselves restrain such trade or commerce, and will directly restrain it—that is, acts which operate directly on such commerce.

If the acts which the parties combine or conspire to do fall short of this, if they are not such as operate directly on the commerce, and by such operation directly restrain it, then the combination or conspiracy is not within the act.

4. The act makes criminal those contracts, combinations and conspiracies only which directly and immediately restrain interstate trade or commerce—that is by acting directly and immediately upon such trade or commerce (171 U. S. 568, 592; 175 U. S. 234, 245).

5. As the crime consists in contracting, combining or conspiring to do acts which by their own operation will directly and immediately restrain interstate commerce, it necessarily follows that if the acts which the parties contract or combine to do are of that description, they violate the law, though they had no conscious purpose or "specific intent" to restrain interstate commerce by the means of such acts or at all (166 U. S. 341).

On the other hand, if the acts to be done are not such as by their own operation on interstate commerce directly restrain it, the contract, combination or conspiracy to do those acts is not a crime under the Anti-trust law (175 U. S. 234).

6. The act makes criminal every contract, etc., in direct restraint of commerce, without respect of persons.

A contract or combination or conspiracy that would be criminal as in restraint of interstate commerce or trade if made between two or more railway companies, is equally a crime if made between two or more interstate carriers by wagon or stage-coach or ferry, or between two or more interstate traders, wholesale or retail (166 U. S. 312).

7. Any restraint of interstate commerce, or power to restrain it, directly consequent upon the acquisition of property and incident to its ownership, is not, nor is the agreement for such acquisition, made criminal by this act (156 U. S. 16).

Hence, where competitors in interstate trade or commerce agree to and do form a partnership or a corporation, or where one of them buys out the other, or a third person or association of persons buys out both, whatever suppression of ~~commerce~~ competition or power to suppress ~~commerce~~ competition may follow is not, nor is the agreement to form such corporation, partnership or association for such purchase, made criminal by the act (171 U. S. 505, 567).

8. So where a combination is formed to acquire, and which does acquire, nearly all of an article in common use throughout the country and shipped in large quantities among the states, such ownership, though it gives the power to control the interstate trade and commerce in such article, and to suppress such trade and commerce altogether, is not nor is such combination a restraint of commerce prohibited by the Anti-trust Act, the power being an incident of ownership (156 U. S. 1, 16).

9. By this Act Congress regulates commerce by punishing the making of certain contracts by fine and imprisonment. The regulation is and must be uniform throughout the United States, for an act made criminal when done in Minnesota cannot be innocent when done in Massachusetts.

The matters embraced in the Act, thus requiring a uniform regulation throughout the country, are matters within the exclusive jurisdiction of Congress, and no matters that are not within such exclusive jurisdiction are within the act.

If it appears that the states have jurisdiction of any matter (e. g. the ownership of stock in or the consolidation of railway companies doing an interstate business) claimed to be within this act, the existence of jurisdiction in the states is conclusive that such matter is not within the act.

APPELLANTS' PROPOSITIONS.

We shall maintain the following propositions:

1. The Government is not entitled to maintain this proceeding under sections 1 and 4 of the Anti-trust Act, nor had the Circuit Court jurisdiction of it under those sections, for the conspiracy or combination charged in the petition and found by the Circuit Court, if it ever existed, had done all it was formed to do, and had come to an end, before the proceeding was instituted.

2. The only combination of which there is any evidence is a combination formed in aid of commerce, to liberate, protect and enlarge and not to restrain it, and which has liberated, protected, aided and enlarged it, and has not restrained and does not threaten to restrain it.

3. There is no evidence of the combination or conspiracy charged in the petition, or of the combination or conspiracy found by the Circuit Court.

4. The conspiracy or combination in question whether as alleged in the petition or as found by the Circuit Court, was not a combination or conspiracy in restraint of interstate commerce, for the only things which the parties thereto combined or conspired to do or procure to be done were (1) the or- ganization of the Securities Co., and (2) the acquisition by the Securities Co., with their help, of a large majority of the shares of each of the defendant railway companies in exchange for its own shares.

The things so to be done or procured to be done (whether taken separately or together) are such as do not and cannot in any wise restrain interstate commerce, and hence a combination or conspiracy to do them or procure them to be done is not in restraint of interstate commerce.

The Circuit Court erred in holding (1) That the Securities Co., having acquired such majority of shares, has power to suppress competition between the railway companies; (2) that it obtained and holds such power by means of and as a party to the combination or conspiracy and not as an incident of its ownership of the shares; (3) that the possession of such power to suppress competition is of itself, and irrespective of its exercise, a restraint of interstate commerce; and therefore (4) the combination or conspiracy in question was in restraint of such commerce.

5. The petition does not allege nor do the proofs disclose any facts showing a monopoly or a conspiracy or attempt to monopolize any interstate or foreign commerce.

6. The case is not within the Anti-trust Act, for in any view of the matters complained of, their effect upon commerce—whether much or little, for good or for ill—is indirect and remote. The Anti-trust Act and the regulative power of Congress under the commerce clause of the Constitution, are alike strictly limited to matters which directly and immediately affect interstate or foreign commerce.

7. The very general language of the Anti-trust Act was not intended to include combinations to purchase railways or railway shares, competing or non-competing, nor consolidations actual or "virtual" of railways or railway companies. Congress, when passing the Act, knew that the railway systems of the country rested on such combinations authorized by state laws, some of them having existed many years. If Congress had meant to declare such consolidations and stock purchases of competing companies to be illegal, the securities issued by them void, and the state legislation unconstitutional, it would have said so in plain, specific and apt language.

The construction put on the Act by all branches of the Government and by everybody down to the commencement of this proceeding, has been in full accord with our position that the act has nothing to do with combinations to own railways or railway shares.

8. Even though the Government were entitled to any injunction, the decree goes far beyond what the Government was entitled to receive, or the Circuit Court authorized to grant.

FIRST.

The Government is not entitled to maintain this proceeding under Sections one and four of the Anti-trust Act, nor had the Circuit Court jurisdiction of it under those Sections, for the conspiracy or combination, charged in the petition and found by the Circuit Court, if it ever existed, had done all it was formed to do, and had come to an end, before the proceeding was instituted.

(1) The right of the Government to bring this proceeding in equity and the jurisdiction of the court to entertain it are found in the 4th section of the act, giving the Circuit Courts jurisdiction "to prevent and restrain violations of this act," and requiring the several district attorneys of the United States "to institute proceedings in equity to prevent and restrain such violations."

To ascertain what are violations of this act, we must look to the first and second sections.

The first section declares to be unlawful and makes criminal "every contract, combination (in the form of a trust or otherwise) and conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce among the several states, or with foreign nations."

The restraint of commerce is not declared unlawful or made criminal by this section—not even if it results from a conspiracy. If, as claimed in this case, the mere holding of a majority of the shares of two competing interstate railway companies restrains their interstate commerce, still this section does not forbid or prevent the acquisition and holding of such majority by an individual. And the contracts of purchase made by such individual in the acquisition of such majority are not "contracts in restraint of commerce."

And so if a number of individuals conspire and combine to acquire such majority of shares and convey them to an individual. If such acquisition and holding by an individual in itself restrains interstate commerce, then this is a combination or conspiracy to restrain such commerce, and while it is in progress may be restrained. But suppose the conspiracy has done its work, is functus officio, and the shares are held by the individual to whom the conspirators have conveyed them, his ownership of the shares, whether it be a restraint of commerce or not, would seem to be not a conspiracy or combination (or any part, or either) in restraint of commerce, or a "violation of this act" (unless it be also a monopoly forbidden by the 2nd section, which will be considered in its place) so as to be subject to restraint by a proceding like this.

The holder of shares thus acquired would seem to stand on the same footing as if there had been no previous conspiracy, but he had bought them piecemeal, from time to time, in the open market. True, his holding is the result of a conspiracy, but of a conspiracy fully executed. The purpose of that conspiracy and the doings of the conspirators are ended and it has ended with them. While it existed, its acts might be prevented or restrained by the court, but they cannot be prevented or restrained after they are all done. And the jurisdiction given to the court is to prevent the executory acts of a conspiracy, not to undo what has been done by a conspiracy which has itself come to an end. The act is directed at existing conspiracies, not at those which are defunct.

Of course, any conspiracy entered into by the purchaser to restrain commerce, whether by means of the shares so acquired or otherwise, would be a violation of section one, and might, while executory, be enjoined.

And so a combination in existence when the suit is brought may be treated as still subsisting for the purpose of a decree enjoining further proceedings by it as in the Freight Association Case. As in other cases, the jurisdiction, once attached, will not be defeated by acts of the defendants. 166 U. S. 290, 309. And so where a conspiracy has not been fully excuted, the court, may, of course, restrain its further execution by enjoining what remains to be done. But these cases are no argument for the jurisdiction under the 4th section, where, before the suit is brought, the acts in violation of the statute which the conspiracy was formed to do have been done, so that there is nothing executory to be enjoined, nor any subsisting conspiracy to be dealt with.

(2) And what is true of an individual would seem to be also true of a corporation. The 8th section of the Act classes a corporation among persons, and makes no distinction between a corporation and any other person, and no distintion between corporations. If one corporation may acquire and hold a majority of the shares of each of two such railways, without thereby restraining interstate commerce, or becoming a combination in restraint of such commerce, so may any other corporation. If the New York Central Co. may lawfully buy and hold the shares of two or three competing interstate railway companies (as, for instance, the West Shore, the Nickel Plate, the Lake Shore and the Michigan Central companies), or if the Burlington Company might itself have lawfully bought the majority of the shares of these two railway companies instead of its own shares being bought by them, then any other corporation, whether formed for the purpose or not, could make the same purchases. The law does not permit to a railway company what it makes criminal in other corporations.

(3) The petition does not charge a conspiracy or combination to restrain all the interstate commerce of the country, nor even all that of the two companies, or to restrain any of the latter commerce by all possible means. It was limited in its subject-matter and in the things to be done.

It is charged to have been > "An unlawful combination or conspiracy to effect a virtual consolidation of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern systems, and to place restraint upon all competitive interstate and foreign trade or commerce carried on by them, and to monopolize or attempt to monopolize the same, and to suppress the competition theretofore existing between said railway sys> tems in said interstate and foreign trade or commerce, through the instrumentality and by the means following, to-wit:" (I, 7a).

The conspirators combined to accomplish the ends just described only so far as and no farther than they would be accomplished by use of the means which and which only they conspired and combined to use—by doing the acts which they combined and conspired to do—and to which they definitely and strictly limited themselves by the language immediately following that just quoted, viz:

> "A holding corporation to be called the Northern Securities Co. was to be formed under the laws of New Jersey, with a capital stock of $400,000,000, to which, in exchange for its own capital stock, upon a certain basis and at a certain rate, were to be turned over and transferred the capital stock or a controlling interest in the capital stock of each of the defendant railway companies, with power in the holding corporation to vote such stock and in all respects to act as the owner thereof, and to do whatever it might deem necessary to aid in any manner such railway companies or enhance the value of their stocks" (I, 7a).

It cannot be contended that the conspirators conspired to do anything more than these two things, viz: to form a holding company and transfer to it the controlling stock interest, even if these things would not accomplish any of the numerous purposes alleged. Suppose that such transfer would not of itself suppress competition, but that joint action of the boards of directors of the two railway companies would be necessary for that purpose (as it certainly would), it is not charged that they conspired to corrupt those boards to violate the law.

And if the conspiracy was not thus limited in its means, then it had no limit as to means to be used or time in which to use them. It was a conspiracy in which the individuals named conspired to use all means they might choose to accomplish the purposes named, and to do so during the entire life of the railway companies. This is absurd, and the conspiracy must be held a conspiracy to do the two things specified, and to do nothing else.

Again, the whole theory of the petition is that the "virtual consolidation," monopoly, suppression of competition, etc., are the necessary result of the ownership by the Securities Co. of a controlling interest in the stock of each railway company, and could not be effected without such controlling interest, and would be fully effected by a transfer of such interest to the Securities Co. The petition says that when the conspiracy was formed the conspirators held such controlling interest, and by the terms of the conspiracy such controlling interest was to be turned over to the Securities Co.—of course by the conspirators, for they had it and no one else could have it to turn over. And in turning it over they would have done everything necessary to fully accomplish the purposes of the conspiracy; and moreover they would no longer have in their hands the means of consolidating, suppressing competition, etc., and so could do nothing farther to accomplish those ends, since they would no longer hold a controlling interest. Hence the conspiracy would necessarily be fully accomplished and at an end when the stock was turned over.

However looked at, the petition leaves no room for escape from its plain statement that the only things to be done under the conspiracy were the formation of the Securities Co. and the transfer of the stock to it.

(4) Now, both these things had been done before the petition was filed, and it so states, in Paragraph VIII, as follows, after stating the formation of the Securities Co. on November 13, 1901 (I, 9a):

> "Thereupon, in further pursuance of the unlawful combination or conspiracy aforesaid, the defendants James J. Hill and his associate stockholders of the defendant the Great Northern Co. assigned and transferred to the defendant the Securities Co. a large amount of the capital stock of the Great Northern Co., the exact amount being unknown to complainant, but constituting a controlling interest therein, and complainant believes a majority thereof, upon the agreed basis," of $180 to $100, "and the defendants J. Pierpont Morgan and his associate stockholders of the Northern Pacific Co. assigned and transferred to the defendant the Securities Co. a large majority of the capital stock of the defendant the Northern Pacific Co., the exact amount being unknown to complainant, upon the agreed basis" of $115 to $100.

In the same paragraph VIII, the petition further states (I, 10a):

> "In further pursuance of the unlawful combination or conspiracy aforesaid, the defendant the Northern Securities Company has acquired an additional amount of the stock of the defendant railway companies, issuing in lieu thereof its own stock upon the basis of exchange aforesaid, and is now holding, as owner and proprietor, substantially all of the capital stock of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, and, as complainant believes and charges, a majority of the capital stock of the Great Northern Railway Company, but if not a majority, at least a controlling interest therein. * * *

"By reason whereof, a virtual consolidation under one ownership and source of control of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway Systems has been effected." * * *

It is true that as a sort of makeweight (like various other matters in the petition, such as the statement that the Securities Co. never had money enough to buy the shares it acquired), the petition charges that the Securities Co. is monopolizing the interstate commerce of the two roads, and it is also true that the crime of monopolizing, under the second section, does not require for its commission any combination or conspiracy, but may be committed by a single person, individual or corporate. And so if the Securities Co. is monopolizing commerce, the Government may sue in equity, under the 4th section, for an injunction to prevent it from further violating the act by a continuance of such criminal practice. But, as before said, this charge is a mere makeweight; no facts in support of it are stated in the petition or shown in evidence, and it was disregarded by the Circuit Court. We shall, however, point out, under our 5th point the insufficiency of the petition to charge any monopoly. And so paragraph XIII of the petition (I, 13a), charges that the individual defendants named and their associate stockholders of the defendant railway companies have combined and conspired with other persons unknown, to use and employ, in addition to the corporate scheme and devices aforesaid, and in aid thereof, various other schemes, devices and instrumentalities, the precise details of which are at present unknown to the complainant, but will be laid before the court when ascertained.

No attempt, however, was made to prove any such conspiracy as was alleged in this paragraph of the petition, and so it will in this argument be disregarded.

We submit, therefore, that on the petition, this proceeding cannot be maintained to prevent or restrain the alleged violations of section one of the Act.

(5). Turning from the petition to the decision, we find the following (II, 1704):

> "In the summer of the year 1901, certain large and influential stockholders of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern companies, who had practical control of the two roads, and who have been made parties defendant to the present bill, acting in concert with each other, conceived the design of placing a very large majority of the stock of both of the last named companies in the hands of a single owner.
>
> "To this end these stockholders arranged and agreed with each other to procure and cause the formation of a corporation under the laws of the State of New Jersey, which latter company, when organized, should buy all or at least the greater part of the stock of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern companies.
> "The individuals who conceived and promoted this plan agreed with each other to exchange > their respective holdings of stock in the last-named railroad company for the stock of the New Jersey company when the same should be fully organized, and to use their influence to induce other stockholders in their respective companies to do likewise, to the end that the New Jersey company might become the sole owner of the whole or at least a major portion of the stock of both railroad companies."

After stating that "in accordance with this plan," the Securities Co. was organized on November 13, 1901, and, when organized, "assented to and became a party to the scheme that had been devised by its promoters before it became a legal entity," the decision proceeds to state that:

> "Very shortly after its organization the Securities Co. acquired a large majority of all the stock of the Northern Pacific Co. at the rate of $115 per share, paying therefor in its own stock at par."

And on the following page (II, 1705) it recounts the acquisitions of Great Northern shares:

> "At the same time" (i. e. very shortly after the organization of the Securities Co.) "it acquired about 390,000 shares of the stock of the Great Northern Co. from those stockholders of that company who had been instrumental in organizing the Securities Co., paying therefor at the rate of $189 per share, and using its own stock at par to make the purchase.
>
> "The Securities Co. subsequently made further purchases of stock of the Great Northern Co. at the same rate, and in about three months (viz. by February 13, 1902), had acquired stock of the latter company amounting at par to about $95,000,000 (the total capital of the Great Northern Co. being $125,000,000), "using for that purpose its own stock to the amount of about 171.000,000.

"The Securities Co. was enabled to make the subsequent purchases of stock from stockholders of the Great Northern Co. not immediately concerned in the organization of the Securtiies Co., by the advice, procurement, and persuasion of those stockholders of the Great Northern Co. who had been instrumental in organizing the Securities Co. and had exchanged their own stock for stock in that company shortly after its organization.

"At the present time (April, 1903) the Securities Co. is the owner of about 98 per cent of all the stock of the Northern Pacific Co. and the owner of about 76 per cent of the Great Northern Co."

[The capital stock of the Northern Pacific Co. is $155,000,000 and 98 per cent is $151,900,000.

The proofs show that all this stock was acquired before the middle of January, 1902. (I, 248, 179).

The capital stock of the Great Northern Co. is $125,000,000 and 76 per cent of it is $95,000,000—the same amount that the Securities Co. had acquired by the middle of February, 1902].

The Court proceds:

"The scheme that was thus devised and consummated, led inevitably to the following results. First it placed the control of the roads in the hands of a single person, to-wit: the Securities Co. by virtue of its ownership of a very large majority of the stock of both companies; second, it destroyed every motive for competition between two roads engaged in interstate traffic which were natural competitors for business, by pooling the earnings of the two roads for the common benefit of the stockholders of both companies."

There could hardly be a plainer showing that the work of the conspiracy was ended before suit brought. "The design" was that "of placing a very large majority of the stock of both of the railroad companies in the hands of a single owner." And "to this end" the Securities Co. was to be organized to buy the stocks. This had been done, "the scheme thus devised" was "consummated" by the middle of February, 1902. This suit was commenced March 10, 1902.

In the decision the Circuit Court answers (II, 1712) the defendant's argument and its own statement, by saying inter alia that "the Securities Co. made itself a party to a combination in restraint of interstate commerce that antedated its organization as soon as it came into existence."

If this statement is anything more than the Court's legal conclusion from the fact that the Securities Co. bought the shares of the two railway companies—if it is meant as a statement of fact—it is absolutely without support in the evidence. (Supra, pp. 75-82, 98-100). Indeed, it was not even alleged in the petition.

The same may be said of the statements just quoted that the promoters of the Securities Co. agreed with each other to induce their fellow-stockholders to sell their shares to the Securities Co., and that the latter was enabled to make its purchases of Great Northern shares (from others than its promoters) by means of the advice, procurement and persuasion of the promoters.

Both statements are destitute of support in the evidence, and are in direct conflict with it (Supra, pp. 67-8, 90-4).

But conceding for argument that the Securities Co. did become a party to the conspiracy and that its promoters agreed to use their influence to persuade other shareholders to exchange their shares, and that the latter did so under such persuasion. This did not change the character or purpose of the conspiracy, as already stated in the decision. Its plan and purpose still were to organize the Securities Co.—which they had done—and to furnish it with a large majority of the stock of the two railway companies, which last they accomplished before February 15, 1902, the Securities Co. having by that time acquired 98 per cent of Northern Pacific stock and 76 per cent of Great Northern. The joinder of the Securities Co. to the conspiracy can have no possible bearing on the question here presented, and the decision itself shows that the agreement to use persuasion with other shareholders was fully performed, and a majority and half as much again of Great Northern shares were acquired, most of them by means of the persuasion, before suit brought.

The rest of the argument of the Circuit Court on this point is (1) that the Securities Co. is itself a combination in restrain of commerce; (2) that it has power to restrain commerce; (3) that unless an injunction will lie, the act will be lacking in efficacy.

(1) This is nowhere charged in the petition nor anywhere else in the opinion, where, indeed, the Securities Co. is styled, not a combination but a person, and a "single owner," and "single person," just as the act itself includes a corporation among persons, and does not look upon it as a "combination."

(2) Assuming that the Securities Co. has power to restrain commerce, it has that power because, as the Court itself elsewhere says (II, 1707): "the ownership of all the stock of two parallel and competing roads rests the owner thereof with the power to suppress competition between such roads." And again (II, 1705), "The scheme * * * placed the control of the two roads in the hands of a single person, to-wit, the Securities Co., by virtue of its ownership of a large majority of the stock of both companies."

The power, being thus an incident (and an inseparable incident) of stock ownership, to divest the stockholder of the power he must be divested of the ownership, and so the injunction sought is not an injunction against further proceedings in a conspiracy, but an injunction against the owning of property, on the ground that such ownership, by reason of one of its incidents, gives the power to violate the statute. But the act provides for no such injunction. To enjoin an individual or corporation from owning property or exercising powers incidental thereto, because such ownership was the fruit of a conspiracy or such powers are liable to be used to restrain commerce (there being no charge or proof of any present agreement between such owner and others to use the power for such purpose or that any restraint of commerce is intended or threatened) is a proceeding not authorized by the Anti-trust Act.

Of course if any persons are conspiring to restrain commerce, or if one person or several are monopolizing or attempting to monopolize it, they may be enjoined. And if in this case it were proved (what is not even alleged) that at the time the proceeding was brought, the Securities Co. was engaged in a conspiracy (for instance, with the directors of the railway companies) to restrain or monopolize commerce, the further proceedings of such conspiracy might be restrained by injunction. But that is a very different case from enjoining the possesion or use of property because it was acquired by means of a past and gone conspiracy. No such injunction is authorized by the act.

(3) The argument that without injunction in a case like this the act would be lacking in efficacy, would justify the granting of injunctions to restrain the doing of any act made criminal by statute, although for such injunction there were no statutory authority. Such a course would doubtless contribute largely to the efficacy of all criminal laws. But the question is not how to make the statute efficacious, but to find out what it means and enforce it as it stands. And the Circuit Court, seeming to think that, without injunction against the ownership or use of property, the Government will be powerless to break up unlawful combinations, omits to take account of the penal features of the act, usually the only means of enforcing obedience to a criminal statute, and usually deemed sufficient to that end, and which Congress has evidently considered sufficient in the case of this statute wherever the conspiracy has been carried out.

The decision leaves the case just where the petition placed it, viz: as a case not within the 4th section of the Act.

SECOND.

The only combination of which there is any evidence, is a combination formed in aid of commerce, to liberate, protect and enlarge, and not restrain it, and which has liberated, protected, aided and enlarged it, and has not restrained and does not threaten to restrain it.

In the Circuit Court, this branch of our argument was presented so imperfectly as to leave that court under the impresion that we were trying to justify an admitted restraint of commerce on the ground that such restraint was really for the public good. (See Decision, II, 1712-3). What we attempted to show in that court and shall attempt to show in what follows, is that the combination in question was formed not to restrain commerce, but to enlarge it; and if in its operation it did impose a slight restraint on a small part of the commerce of the companies, it freed that part and all that commerce from a much greater restraint that would have destroyed it.

According to the Circuit Court, the defendants are like a man charged with lessening the size of a house, who should say, "Yes, but I made a better looking house of it." Whereas our case is more like that of the man who, to a like charge, should say, "Yes, I took off a foot at one end, but, while doing so I added thirty feet in place of it." Needless to say that any admission in this branch of the argument that there has been any restraint whatever, is an admission for the purpose of the argument only.

I.

1. Every contract—indeed, every act—must be judged as a whole. It must be interpreted in view of its subject-matter and the surroundings. And every contract and every act has effect in more than one direction.

In judging of the meaning and legal effect of a contract or of any part of it, it will not do to isolate a portion, and pass judgment on that, much less on the entire contract from a study of the isolated portion.

And so the effect of a contract or other act cannot be rightly judged from an examination of its operation in one direction, ignoring its operation in other directions. He would learn little of the effects of artillery who studied only the recoil of the gun.

There is nothing in the nature of a contract or combination affecting commerce and attacked for restraining or monopolizing it, requiring or permitting a different rule for judging it. Whether such a contract or combination does restrain or monopolize depends on its effect as a whole, on its operation in all the directions and on all the subjects of commerce on which it does operate.

One cannot extract a single covenant of the agreement, and say "this covenant restrains commerce," still less can one go farther and say therefore the whole contract restrains commerce.

It cannot be said that the combination in question here restrains the interstate commerce of the two railway companies because in one direction of its operation it may or does restrain to a small extent 3 per cent of that commerce, if by its operation in another direction it furnishes a needed—an indispensable—protection to all that commerce, preserves it from restriction or diminution to an extent far exceeding 3 per cent, and is a principal factor in its extension and enlargement.

The rule stated has always been recognized as specially applicable when there is question of a restraint of trade—and with reason, for the ramifications of trade are wide spread and far reaching.

> "All the facts and circumstances are, however, to be considered, in order to determine the fundamental question whether the necessary effect of the combination is to restrain interstate commerce." Addyston Pipe Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 245.

And see, to the same effect, Oregon Steam Nav. Co. v. Winsor, 20 Wall. 64, 68, per Bradley, J.

2. There is hardly any agreement of trade or commerce which does not in some direction of its operation restrain trade. A grain dealer in Minneapolis, by contract, on a sufficient consideration, gives to a dealer in Chicago a ten days' option of purchase of all the wheat then in his warehouse in the former city. And in the contract he specially covenants that during the period of option he will make no sale to any one else. The special covenant taken alone is plainly a restraint of trade. But no one would claim that the whole contract, including the special covenant, was in restraint of interstate or any other trade or commerce.

And so in the case of all the contracts which at common law are held not to restrain trade though they include special covenants directly restraining it. In U. S. v. Addyston Pipe Co., 29 C. C. A. 141, 150; 85 Fed. 271, 280, 281, Circuit Judge Taft classifies them under the heads of agreements for sale of a business, where the seller covenants not to carry on the same business; for sale of property where the buyer covenants not to use it in competition with the seller's business; by partners not to engage individually in any business, whether in competition with that of the firm, or not, etc.

In each of these instances, the special covenant directly restrains trade. It acts directly on trade by restricting the power or freedom of the covenantor to carry it on. A contract consisting wholly of such a covenant on the one hand, and a consideration however ample on the other, would as a rule be void on its face. But in each instance the whole contract, of which the covenant forms part, and therefore the covenant itself and the restraint of trade which it imposes, are valid. The reason is that though the contract, in one part of it and by its operation in one direction restrains trade, yet, taken as a whole, and notwithstanding such restraint, the contract enlarges and protects trade and is beneficial to it.

Thus, take the first of the cases, that of a seller who covenants not to engage in the business. Without the restraint imposed by the covenant there would or might be no sale in the particular case; and, in general, if the buyer could not protect himself by placing such restraint on the seller, there might be no buyers; a man wishing to retire from business might not be able to sell that business to another who would carry it on, but might be obliged to wind it up; in which case there would be a business the less, and trade would be lessened to that amount.

3. And so in other cases than sales or contracts of any kind. Every charge by way of toll on a turnpike or bridge, or for transportation on a railroad, is in itself, in one direction of its operation, a restraint on the commerce of those highways. The complaint in this case is that the Securities Co. restrains commerce by suppressing competition, which suppression increases charges and so lessens the volume of commerce. And if increasing the charges restrains commerce, it must be because any charge is a restraint, and indeed this goes without saying.

But it does not follow that those imposing this restraint on interstate traffic by rail, turnpike or toll-bridge are criminals under the Anti-trust law. Without such charges—without charges sufficient to maintain the turnpike, bridge and railway and pay the cost of operating the latter, and a reasonable profit on their value or the capital invested in them—the existing highways of this description would go to ruin and no more would be built. And so though the charge be a restraint, yet, looking at the cause which occasions it, and the great increase of commerce which that cause products, looking at the operation of the charge as furnishing the means of maintaining and operating the bridge or railway, and weighing the restraint against the increase, the latter greatly exceeds the former; and therefore, looking at the whole conduct of the proprietors of the turnpike, bridge or railway, they do not restrain trade.

No state has power to pass a law directly restraining such interstate commerce as consists in transportation. And a tax or charge on the gross receipts of such transportation is a direct restraint on such commerce. A law laying such tax on the gross receipts from interstate transportation by a railway already in operation is ultra vires of a State and is void.

But suppose a State, when chartering a company to build an interstate railway, requires the company to pay, for the whole period of its existence, 20 per cent of the fare received by it from each interstate passenger whom it carries. This last provision, taken by itself and in one aspect of its operation, is clearly void; it would certainly be void if enacted in respect to an existing railway. But in another direction it operates to enable the company to procure the charter and build a railway for interstate commerce. And so, taking the whole charter—the whole law—together, we find that its operation is to enlarge interstate commerce by creating a new route, and the charge is laid on a new commerce created by the act. The charge imposed by the act is laid on the commerce created by the act and which would not exist without it, and so commerce is not restrained, but enlarged; not enlarged so much as if the act had laid no burden on it, but still enlarged. And the act is therefore valid, and just such an act was sustained in Railroad Co. v. Maryland, 21 Wall., 456.

4. In every case where the question is whether a contract restrains the trade of a party to it, or a combination restrains trade among its members, or whether such contract or combination restrains the trade or commerce of others than the parties to it, the contract or combination must be judged as a whole, and in the light of the circumstances in which it was made. The whole enterprise of which it was an essential part must be taken into account; and if the whole enterprise, including the contract or combination, is in furtherance of trade—if the net result of carrying it out would remove from trade more or heavier shackles than are thereby laid upon it,—then the portion of the enterprise which, standing alone, would restrain trade, is free from objection whether at common law or under the Anti-trust law.

II.

1. The purpose of the formation of the Securities Co. is not open to question. The defendant railway companies were engaged in an immense enterprise of creating and building up an interstate and foreign commerce, which could not fail to be of inestimable benefit to the country traversed by their railways and to producers and shippers at all points along their lines or reached by their connections. As a necessary adjunct to this enterprise they bought the Burlington shares, incurring obligations therefor exceeding 200 millions of dollars. Immediately thereafter came the attempt of a rival line to defeat their enterprise, to destroy the commerce they were building up, and to subordinate the interests of the Northern Pacific shareholders and the interests of the territory which it served to those of a rival railroad and a distant section of the country, at the same time threatening the very means of existence of the Great Northern Co. This attack was made by the purchase of $78,000,000 of Northern Pacific shares in the market. The attack having been defeated by a concurrence of circumstances such as could not be hoped for in case of a second raid (no future raiders could make the fatal mistake of buying preferred shares instead of common), the holders of a majority of Northern Pacific shares and less than one-third of Great Northern common shares took measures for the defense of their own interest as shareholders and those of their fellow shareholders. A plan had long existed among these few shareholders of the Great Northern Co. for forming a corporation of which they should become members and to which they should transfer the ownership of their Great Northern shares. Their motives in this are stated, supra, p. 59. As a means of defense against a future raid it was determined that this projected company should be organized, and that the holders of the majority of the Northern Pacific common shares should have the right to transfer them to it. There was no contract on their part to do so, nor was there need of any, for they had a common interest and a common desire that these Northern Pacific shares should become the property of the new company. The company was also made large enough to acquire such shares of other Great Northern holders as should wish to come into it, and this solely for the reasons stated, supra, pp. 67-8. But there was no especial desire and but little expectation that any great number of them would do so, their shares being valued at from 15 to 20 per cent below their current market value for purposes of exchange for those of the new company. Still, the larger the amount of Great Northern stock held by the new company, the more efficient the defense, the greater the security, against future raids on the Northern Pacific Co.

That this defense and this security were the only thing aimed at, that the obtaining of them was the sole motive and the sole purpose in placing the ownership of a majority of the shares of either railway company in the Securities Co., cannot be questioned. The testimony is plenary, much of it offered and vouched for by the Government, and all of it from witnesses of the highest character.

2. Their sole motive and purpose, then, was self-defence. Did the danger exist? Was it of a character to require such a defence?

That it existed we have the testimony of witnesses than whom none more competent could be found were the whole country to be searched for such. Nor can there be any question of their credibility—some of this evidence also is produced and vouched for by the Government, and no opposing evidence has been offered.

The magnitude of the peril is shown by the same witnesses—by the anxious care they took to guard against it. And Mr. Hill, than whom there is no more competent judge, has testified in a passage quoted, (supra, p. 54), that in case of the success of such an attack the measure of the injury to the interstate and foreign commerce of the two railway companies "would be destruction."

Such was the sole purpose in forming the Securities Co. and vesting in it the title to a majority of the common stock of the Northern Pacific Co. and to such shares of the Great Northern Co. as the owners of them might choose to transfer to it—a purpose to preserve and protect the interstate and foreign commerce of the two railway companies (and especially that portion of it in aid of which the Burlington shares had been bought) from a danger which threatened and which had already nearly accomplished their ruin. Such were the means taken to effectuate that purpose, to preserve and protect such commerce. That the means were well chosen to ensure such protection cannot be questioned. By these means the protection has been secured, and it does not appear in evidence, nor can it be shown by argument, that any other means existed adequate for that purpose.

Certainly, the purpose was a lawful one. These men surely had a right to protect their property interests. A man may always defend his property, and sometimes even to the point of taking human life. "The law of self-defence and protection applies to one's business as well as to one's person." U. S. Chemical Co. v. Provident Chemical Co., 64 Fed. 946, per Priest, J.

3. And this one purpose was not only justifiable as a measure of self-defence, but it was laudable and meritorious insomuch as it defended and protected and secured the maintenance, and also the enlargement and upbuilding, of the interstate and foreign commerce of the two railway companies, including the identical 3 per cent of such commerce which they are now charged with conspiring to restrain and monopolize.

It made secure the Burlington connection with the manifold advantages described in the evidence, (supra, pp. 34, 41) both to the inhabitants of the Burlington territory and of the territory traversed by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific, not the least of the benefits to these last being that they thereby have an assurance they could not otherwise obtain of being supplied with the fuel that is necessary to enable them to live in the country at all.

4. It is also proved by direct testimony, much of which also was produced and vouched for by the Government and which no attempt has been made to contradict, that in all the proceedings of these gentlemen, they had no purpose whatever of creating a monopoly or restraining commerce in any way whatever. They never even thought of such a thing. (Supra, p. 83). And all the circumstances corroborate this (Supra, p. 98). Indeed, their minds were too full of the great commerce in which their millions were embarked, to have room for the 3 per cent competitive commerce they are charged with monopolizing.

5. The case is not here presented of an isolated contract or combination which in its purpose or effect restrains interstate commerce. The combination here was not isolated or independent. It was not made for the sake of making it and thereby restraining or monopolizing commerce. It would not have been made but for the fact that the companies had an existing interstate commerce and a great enterprise which was in jeopardy, not of restraint only but of destruction. It was in aid of that enterprise, to save commerce from destruction, that the combination was made. It was strictly ancillary to that enterprise as a necessary protection to it—as much so as the covenant of the seller of a business that he will not engage in it; and as fully as such a covenant, and on the same grounds, it must be deemed not in restraint of commerce, as such a covenant was so declared not to restrain trade in the Freight Association Case, 166 U. S. 290, 329.

And these shareholders had an even greater right to protect the very life of the commerce of their companies from aggression than the buyer of a business has to protect his purchase by exacting from the seller a covenant in terms restraining trade. Their need of protection is no less, and that of the buyer is a necessity of his own making. He is under no compulsion to purchase and thereby incur the risk against which he seeks protection.

6. The purpose of the formation of the Securities Co. was to protect the commerce of the railways,—to protect it from a restraint that would be destruction—and such is its effect, even upon the three per cent of that commerce which it is charged is in some measure restrained. But such restraint, if there be any, and if it is properly a result of the combination, neither of which we admit, is, at most, but incidental and wholly collateral to the principal effect of the formation of the company and the sole purpose of its founders.

If a combination formed to maintain and promote interstate commerce on a magnificent scale, and which does thus maintain and promote it, is to be adjudged a combination and conspiracy in re straint of commerce, and its members therefore criminals, because of such slight and incidental restraint as is alleged here,—a restraint, too, which proceeds, as is shown elsewhere, not from the combination, but from the ownership of the railway shares—then, in the language of this Court in the Hopkins Case, 171 U. S. 578, 600, "there would scarcely be an agreement or contract among business men that could not be said to have indirectly or remotely some bearing upon interstate commerce, and possibly to restrain it" And we may add there would not be prisons enough to hold the criminals, for hardly a business man engaged in affairs of any magnitude could avoid a daily violation of the law.

7. The case is not here presented of a contract or combination which restrains trade and is made for that purpose alone, but which, in its unforseen operations in other directions, enlarges trade elsewhere by removing a restraint from it—a case where the parties have builded better than they knew. Whether the parties to such a combination should fare any better than other sinners out of whose evil doings good may have been educed, is a question not arising in this case. Here the one purpose is to protect commerce from restrictions by its enemies which would strangle it.

8. On this matter of combination of shareholders for self-defence—for the defence of their property and the property and the interstate and foreign commerce of the railway companies in which they were so largely interested—the case is widely different from the Freight Association and Joint Traffic Cases, and the Addyston Pipe Case. In each of those cases the defendants combined, not to protect their own or their companies' business from attack by others, but (as they pleaded) to protect it from disastrous competition among themselves, and in the first two cases from a secret competition forbidden by law. They made an agreement on its face forbidden by law, to accomplish what they could just as well have accomplished by obeying the law. And in each case the agreement went far beyond what was needed for protection. In the railway cases an agreement against secret (and illegal) rate-cutting would have been sufficient and lawful. There was no call for an agreement surrendering the power to make and publish rates. All these agreements to protect the makers of them against themselves have no element of protection properly so called.

THIRD.

There is no evidence of the combination or conspiracy charged in the petition or of the combination or conspiracy found by the Circuit Court.

The proofs do show that a few gentlemen, not holding a majority or controlling interest in the stock of either railway company, projected an investment and financial company, at first simply to keep their shares together, and, in its ultimate stage, also as a means of defence of their interests as shareholders against aggression.

Only a very few of the alleged conspirators had anything to do with the formation of this company —the Securities Co.

Mr. Morgan and his firm had nothing to do with it, (supra, pp. 76-7; I, 300), and there is no evidence that Col. Lamont had.

There was no doubt a combination to organize the Securities Co., with power to acquire shares of the two railway companies, as well as of other corporations in exchange for its own, and it was expected that the holders of a majority of the Northern Pacific common stock would transfer their shares to it; and it was understood that all shareholders of both railway companies might do the same. But there was no combination to transfer any shares, no agreement to transfer any. It was left open to every one of the promoters of the company to go into it or stay out. See pp. 71-4, supra.

It is in evidence that Mr. Hill and his associates in the Great Northern Co. held among them (severally) about 33 millions of the 125 millions of the capital stock of that company, being about 27 per cent. They also held (severally) about 20 or 21 millions of Northern Pacific common stock, and J. P. Morgan & Co. held about the same amount until some time in August, 1901, when he sold some 10 or 12 millions to Mr. Hill and friends individually (Mr. Morgan I, 349-350; Mr. Kennedy I, 201-2,) the aggregate of these holdings being between 41 and 42 millions. J. P. Morgan & Co. do not appear to have held any Great Northern stock.

Now, if there was a conspiracy to turn over any stock at all to the Securities Co., it did not include the turning over of any stock not held by the conspirators. Counting Mr. Morgan's firm among them, they might turn over about 42 millions of Northern Pacific common stock, and about 33 millions of Great Northern common stock. This was not a majority or controlling interest of either. The outstanding shares of the Northern Pacific Co. amounted to 155 millions. True, the 42 millions might become a majority of Northern Pacific stock upon the retirement of the preferred stock, and remain so until the issue of the 75,000,000 of new common stock to take the place of the retired preferred stock. If these two proceedings were simultaneous, there never would be a time when 42 millions of common stock would constitute a majority or controlling interest. If the holders of the 42 millions should, upon the retirement of the preferred stock, avail themselves of their right to their proportionate share of the new common stock at par (i. e. 75/80 of 42 millions) on paying therefor $39,000,000, they would hold a majority of all the stock of the company. But the retirement of the preferred stock was a matter for the holders of the common and preferred, or of the directors. The conspirators, as holders of but 42 millions, could not compel it. Nor could they, after turning over their 42 millions to the Securities Co., provide that company with enough of the new issue of common stock to give it a majority. The Securities Co. would have to get that for itself.

And so with the Great Northern party. There is no evidence that they agreed to put in any shares, and certainly none that they contemplated putting in more than they had—about 33 millions; and of this from 2½ to 3 millions—part of Mr. Hill's holdings—were not put in.

But assuming that the 42 millions of Northern Pacific gave control, and that the conspirators agreed to turn over all their shares to the Securities Co., still the fact remains that the shares to be transferred by the conspirators and those which they did transfer, at most were "a controlling interest" in one company only, and that they did not conspire to and did not transfer a controlling interest in the Great Northern Co. Thirty per cent does not give control even of a shareholders' meeting, and these conspiring Great Northern shareholders never controlled that company in any sense of the word. Like all the shareholders—the other 70 per cent as well as themselves—they supported Mr. Hill's management and sent him their proxies, and in respect of "control" they stood on the same footing as the rest. So far as there was any control except in the whole body of the stockholders, it was in Mr. Hill alone.

Col. Clough, vice president of the Great Northern Co. from 1890 to 1901, says, on cross examination (I, 807):

> Q. Is it not a fact that Mr. Hill, with his group of friends, with their relatively small holdings in the Great Northern to which reference has been made, have found that sufficient to control the Great Northern Railway?
>
> A. It was not the holdings in the stock that Mr. Hill and his friends had that induced the great majority of the stockholders to send their proxies favorable to his re-election. It was the favor with which the policy of Mr. Hill and his associates had met for years that induced all the other stockholders as a body, practically, to support that policy and favor its continuation. It wasn't any holding that those other gentlemen had at all. That had nothing to do with it.
>
> Q. You think then that a strong body of very rich men, controlling 35 millions of the stock of the Great Northern Railway had nothing to do with their effectual control of the operations of the road?
>
> A. Absolutely nothing. I know from my own knowledge it had nothing to do with it. It was merely the support that the majority of the stockholders gave on account of their favoring the policy of Mr. Hill.

And the petition says (par. VIII) that he "was the president and controlling power in the management of the Great Northern Co." He possessed this control and power, not because of his stock ownership, but because of the confidence reposed in him by the shareholders by reason of the character of his management.

But such a "control" resting on such a basis, or any control not resting on the holding of a majority of shares, is in no sense a control of the stock, still less of the corporation. Otherwise, the holders of a majority of Northern Pacific shares, in conjunction with Mr. Hill, holding perhaps no more than 10 shares of Great Northern, would also "control" the Great Northern, or have a "controlling interest" in the stock of that company.

And certainly this control held by Mr. Hill by reason of his personality and the confidence reposed in him by the stockholders, was not a thing that could be turned over to the Securities Co., or that the conspirators conspired to turn over to it.

There was therefore no conspiracy to turn over a majority or controlling interest in Great Northern stock, however it might have been with the Northern Pacific shares. And if a controlling interest in the shares of both companies in the hands of the Securities Co. was needed to constitute a restraint of commerce, (and no other restraint than that held to result from such possession is found by the Circuit Court), then the conspiracy, being to turn over such interest in one company only, was not a conspiracy in restraint of commerce.

It is true that after the organization of the Securities Co. it acquired from other shareholders of the Great Northern Co. stock enough to give it a majority. But this was no part of the conspiracy, and these shareholders were not parties to the con- spiracy. They acted independently, each for himself, and so far as appears with no knowledge of the conspiracy, and even in ignorance that the Securities Co. held or was likely to hold any Northern Pacific shares. The company's circular to them of November 22, 1901 (supra, p. 88), and Mr. Hill's letter (supra, pp. 89, 90) are wholly silent on this point. It can't be said that their transfers or the company's acquisitions from them were part of the things which the alleged conspirators combined or conspired to do, especially when the things they did conspire to do are expressly declared and limited in the passage quoted from the petition.

And while the petition states that these acquisitions were "in furtherance of the unlawful combination or conspiracy aforesaid," this does not mean that they were among the acts which the conspirators conspired to do, especially as the petition, in the same paragraph VIII, had already alleged the previous turning over to the Securities Co., by the conspirators themselves, of all the shares which, by the terms of the conspiracy as charged in the petition, were to be turned over to it.

And these acquisitions from other shareholders were not necessary consequences of the acts to do which the conspiracy was formed, so that it cannot be said that the conspirators must have intended them, for each of them required the intervention of an independent actor, who might or might not sell, according to his own will and pleasure.

And while the petition does not charge that the conspirators contemplated such purchases of Great Northern shares by the Securities Co., it negatives any such purpose, for

1. It expressly states that the conspiracy included the acquisition of those shares only—that majority or controlling interest—possessed by the conspirators and which it says they turned over.

2. The possession of any additional shares by the Securities Co., was, according to the theory of the petition, not needed to effect the purpose of the conspirators. Having received from them either a majority or a "controlling interest," it would, according to the petition, have every power over the commerce of the roads—every power to suppress competition or monopolize the traffic, the object of the conspiracy—which stock ownership could give; every power which the conspirators thought necessary to the success of the conspiracy.

II.

The Circuit Court, however, adds a new feature to the combination or conspiracy, charged in the petition, by its finding that as part of their scheme the conspirators agreed with each other to use their influence to induce other shareholders to exchange their shares for those of the Securities Co., and that the Securities Co. was enabled to make its purchases of Great Northern shares from others than the promoters by the advice, procurement and persuasion of the promoters. (II. 1704, 1705; supra, pp. 10, 11).

We have elsewhere (supra, pp. 67-8, 90-95) pointed out the errors in these statements and adduced a portion of the evidence refuting them. We subjoin additional excerpts to the same effect. So far as we are aware there is nothing in the record—not even Mr. Hill's letter, (supra, p. 89)—which in any way impairs the effect of this evidence. There is not even a color of proof to sustain the findings.

By the evidence before printed (supra, 67-8, 90-95) and that which immediately follows) these facts are plainly established:

1. The promoters of the Securities Co. did not think it necessary for their purpose that it should acquire a majority of Great Northern shares, or any more than those held by such promoters.

2. They had no desire to admit such outside shareholders into the Securities Co., and would have preferred not to do so, except that they did not wish to expose themselves to criticism or complaint should such shareholders not be given an opportunity to come in.

3. They accordingly agreed that such opportunity should be offered, but never agreed to use their influence to induce its acceptance by such outside stockholders.

4. They did not advise, procure or persuade any of such outside shareholders to exchange their shares, nor did the Securities Co. obtain any of such shares by means of any such advice, procurement or persuasion.

Mr. Hill says (I, 87):

"After discussing the matter with Mr. Kennedy, and with some of my friends from abroad who were here in July, it was considered, and I may say determined, to go on and form the company. Many of them felt that they would like to give all the shareholders of the Great Northern the right to participate in any company, the old leading shareholders to put their stock in, and they said if a close corporation was formed it would be the first time in the history of the property that each and every shareholder had not the same opportunity that every other shareholder had, and they discussed that with me, sometimes one and sometimes another. There was no meeting to discuss it. The general feeling, however, was among those with whom I talked, and I had that feeling myself, that we would give each shareholder the opportunity to come in at the price we put our own in, if he desired, and if he preferred to stay out, that was his privilege."

I, 115: "Q. Was it your expectation and desire at the time of the organization of the Northern Securities Company that a majority of the stock of the Great Northern Railway Company should also be exchanged for Northern Securities Company stock?

A. I think it was expected that a majority would be exchanged. At the same time the market price at that time was considerably higher than the price the Northern Securities Company purchased the Great Northern stock at. It was a matter that was left to the shareholders."

Mr. Kennedy testifies (I, 194):

"Q. Now, Mr. Kennedy, is it not a fact that in the autumn of 1901 Mr. Hill, J. P. Morgan & Co., D. Willis James, George F. Baker, Lord Strathcona, and Lord Mount Stephen held a majority of the stock of the Great Northern and of the Northern Pacific?

A. I can't speak as to a majority of the Great Northern; I don't think they hold a majority of the Great Northern; I am pretty sure they don't."

I, p. 195:

"Q. Why did you plan on getting a majority of the Northern Pacific and not of the Great Northern, Mr. Kennedy?

A. Well, my idea was in consequence of what took place last May; we didn't want to be subject to such an attack as took place last year.

Q. You wanted to have a majority of the stock of the Northern Pacific where you could absolutely control it

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Under all circumstances?

A. Under all circumstances.

Q. You had no fears, Mr. Kennedy, that the Union Pacific nor the Canadian Pacific, nor any other railroad company could go into the market and buy up a majority of the Great Northern?

A. I don't remember thinking anything about it.

Q. Well, why did you distinguish? You say you wanted a majority of the Northern Pacific where you could absolutely control it so as to prevent another such occurrence as that of May 9?

A. Yes.

Q. Weren't you equally anxious to prevent the possibility of such an occurrence with reference to the Great Northern?

A. I think those who were called Mr. Hill's associates had enough stock to prevent anything of that kind."

(I, 196-7): "Q. It was a fact, Mr. Kennedy, that so far as your own feelings went you were perfectly satisfied that a successful attack could not be made on the Great Northern?

A. I was satisfied of this, that if we held the controlling majority of the stock of the Northern Pacific, the chances were remote that they would make an attack on the Great Northern.

Q. Now, it was finally determined, Mr. Kennedy, after it was decided to take in a majority or more of the stock of the Northern Pacific, to throw open the privilege to all stockholders of the Great Northern to go into the Northern Securities Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was that done for the purpose of placing a majority of the stock of the Great Northern in the Northern Securities Company, as well as a majority of the Northern Pacific?

A. I think not. The idea was to give the Great Northern stockholders who might desire to come in an opportunity to come in, that they might not feel that they were not fairly treated if certain persons went in and other persons left out."

(I, 215): "Q. On pages 233 and 234 of the testimony this question was asked you, Mr. Kennedy: 'Now, Mr. Kennedy, is it not a fact that in the autumn of 1901, Mr. Hill, J. Pierpont Morgan & Co., D. Willis James, George F. Baker, Lord Strathcona and Lord Mount Stephen held a majority of the stock of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific?

A. I could not speak as to a majority of the Great Northern; I don't think they held a majority of the Great Northern; I am pretty sure they don't; but we did hold a majority of the stock of the Northern Pacific; at least I was so informed.' Did you mean that those gentlemen held a majority of the Northern Pacific?

A. Not those gentlemen, but others who were friends of Mr. Hill; who they all were, I don't know.

Q. That was the common stock?

A. The common stock.

Q. You didn't mean the total stock?

A. No, no; the common stock."

(I, 216): "Q. Now, in the organization of the Northern Securities Company, or previous to the organization of the Northern Securities Company, was there any question made or any discussion that that company was organized for the purpose of acquiring a majority of the stocks of both those railroads for the purposes of maintenance of rates, railroad rates, suppression of competition, or controlling competition or commerce on those roads?

Mr. Boutelle: Objected to as not proper cross examination and incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

A. I have never heard of such a thing. I have never heard such a thing suggested in any quarter whatever."

Mr. Hill says:

I, 699: "When it came to making a holding company that would hold the ownership of the stock held by these people, they all hesitated about forming any company to hold the shares of the Great Northern Railway in which all the shareholders might not be allowed to participate, if they so desired. And in that way it became necessary—it was decided, and it was decided early, possibly in June; it had been discussed at least a year before that. I know Mr. Farrer, of the firm of Baring & Company of London, was here and he said, 'No matter what you do—your company has always had the reputation of dealing with all the shareholders on the same basis—no matter what you do, try and keep that.' Everybody seemed to be of the same mind—that all the shareholders might participate in any advantage that any shareholder might have, so far as related to the action of those who were most active in the company's affairs.

A. * * * we were to offer the Great Northern shareholders the right to come in if they desired, but the market price was higher than the price offered.

Q. The price offered was 180, I believe?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what was the market price of the Great Northern stock during the fall and winter of—

A. I think it ran from 187 to 190 or 195. I don't think it has ever been 180 from the time the offer was made to the present time."

(I, 706): "Q. And so, in order to continue the policy which had obtained for so many years for the benefit of the company and of the public, they arranged to put their holdings into this holding corporation,—these shareholders?

A. The eleven shareholders?

Q. Yes.

A. And asked that the same offer be made to all the shareholders so that they might not be charged with any discrimination, or doing anything for themselves that they were not willing to do for all the shareholders."

(I, 708-9): "If the question has reference to the desire or preference, I should answer that if the individual men who formed the Securities Company had their choice and all the shareholders were there and could say, 'We release you from any responsibility,' we would have preferred to have had the Northern Securities Company stock restricted to the 35 millions. There isn't any question about that. I have discussed that with the shareholders many, many times. One gentleman spent an afternoon with Mr. Grover; another spent an evening at my house; came over from London to discuss it. so, it is not a new question with us. The question was, shall we make a corporation and close the door on our old associates? If we do, it is the first time that anything has ever been done in which any shareholder had the advantage over all the shareholders. And that was the reason for making the offer, and the only reason for making the offer.

Q. Now, what was the response to the offer? How much stock of the Great Northern was exchanged for stock of the Northern Securities Co.?

A. Oh, I don't recall the amount. I know a great deal came in before—I should say nearly half of it came in very soon after—maybe 40 per cent. Then a lawsuit was started, I think by the State of Minnesota first, or Peter Power, I am not sure which—but a lawsuit was started, and we took pains then—a great many had sent their stock to the office—we took pains to notify them that a lawsuit had been commenced, and the stock was not purchased, the transaction was not closed, until they were notified and asked: 'Do you still want to sell your stock?' We felt it was a duty to let them know that such a lawsuit had been commenced, as that might make some difference in their view as to whether they wanted to sell their stock to the Securities Company or to hold it as Great Northern."

Col. Clough says, (I. 787):

"Q. Had you knowledge of the fact of transfers of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific to the Northern Securities Company?

A. Yes, sir, I knew about that; it was done under my supervision.

Q. You had general charge of the New York office of the Northern Securities Company?

A. As far as it is entrusted to the officials; the business affairs of the Northern Securities Company are, under its charter and by-laws, controlled by its board of directors and its executive committee.

Q. You were in the office, and had charge of the office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, state whether the transfers were individual, absolute, without reservation, and without solicitation from the Northern Securities Company—fully.

A. To answer the first question, every purchase of stock that has been made by the Northern Securities Company (whatever stock it may be) has been by direct individual transactions and negotiations with the owner of that stock, except in the one instance that I have referred to in my previous testimony of the purchase of the Harriman and Pierce stock, where J. P. Morgan & Co. negotiated the purchase and the purchase was assigned to the Northern Securities Company.

Q. Now, were the transfers absolute?

A. They were absolute and unconditional in every case.

Q. Were they solicited by the Northern Securities Company?

A. No, sir; in no case. The Northern Securities Company, some time in November, I have forgotten the precise date, I think it was the 22nd, issued a circular to each individual stockholder of the Great Northern Railway Company, of which a copy has been introduced.

Q. Were you present in the office of the Northern Securities Company at the times when holders of shares came there to make transfers or to make inquiries?

A. Yes, sir; I was there constantly in attendance at all times during practically every business day from the time of the organization of the company until, I might say, last Friday."

Q. Now, were a considerable number of transfers made there by parties appearing personally or by their representatives?

A. Yes, sir, quite a good many people brought their stock in personally; many others sent it by mail.

Q. What information or suggestions were made to them respecting the transfers?

A. Why, there was nothing special; the transaction would be that that individual would present his Great Northern stock, or Northern Pacific stock, as it might be, and ask to sell it to the Company and to receive in pay the stock of the Company. When litigation against the Company was threatened, I think in every instance that fact was communicated to every person bringing his Great Northern and Northern Pacific stock to the Securities Company to sell it.

(I. 790): "Mr. Morgan was very strenuous that when this stock was all out, if he sold his stock to the Northern Securities Company, that each of the other holders of the common stock, if he wanted to do so, should have the privilege of selling to the Northern Securities Co. at the same rate. He was extremely insistent on that. Some of the eight or nine or ten Great Northern stockholders who were consulted in this matter had quite early taken a similar view in regard to Great Northern stock. They suggested that it had been the settled policy of the Great Northern management that whatever benefits of any kind should be open to the holder of any of the Great Northern stocks should be open upon equal terms to all the others. * * *

It was believed by myself and Mr. Hill and Mr. Kennedy and some of the others who had watched things very closely, that there was very little probability of anything nearly like the whole of the stockholders, of the Great Northern at least, coming in, because that was a well established stock in the market. It had been on the market for ten years and had a high market value and was thoroughly well known. It was held entirely by investors. There had never been any speculative movement in Great Northern stock, and it was thought that, being held that way, the holders of a well-known and well-established stock would be loath to sell it and take in pay the stock of a new and comparatively unknown company. But finally it was said, and that was the argument which prevailed in fixing the amount at what it was—it was finally suggested by somebody and strenuously insisted (I think it came from Mr. Morgan perhaps first) that if the capital stock of the Northern Securities Company were fixed at any sum very largely below what would be required to purchase the capital stock of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern Companies, it would have an appearance upon its face as of an intention on the part of the gentlemen promoting this company to exclude some of the other stockholders from the benefits, whatever they might be, in the new organization.

(I, 835): "A. The purpose, as I said, in its origin—the only thought that I have ever heard expressed in its origin—in regard to the Northern Securities Company, related to keeping together all the stock of the gentlemen I have named as being those who were consulted. So far as the other stockholders were concerned, comprising the great majority of the stocks of both the Northern Pacific and Great Northern, and comprising the great majority of the stockholders of the Northern Securities Company—those gentlemen were given an opportunity to come in because the other gentlemen who had promoted this company thought it was only right and fair to give every stockholder in the same class with them the same opportunity for whatever advantages (if there were any, which would arise out of the sale of their stock to the Northern Securities Company."

FOURTH.

The conspiracy or combination in question, whether as alleged in the petition or found by the Circuit Court, was not a combination or conspiracy in restraint of interstate commerce, for the only things which the parties thereto combined or conspired to do or procure to be done, were (1) the organization of the Securities Co., and (2) the acquisition by the Securities Co., with their help, of a large majority of the shares of each of the defendant railway companies in exchange for its own shares.

The things so to be done or procured to be done (whether taken separately or together) are such as do not and cannot in any wise restrain interstate commerce, and hence a combination or conspiracy to do them or procure them to be done is not in restraint of interstate commerce.

The Circuit Court erred in holding (1) That the Securities Co., having acquired such majority of shares, has power to suppress competition between the railway companies; (2) that it obtained and holds such power by means of and as a party to the combination or conspiracy, and not as an incident of its ownership of the shares; (3) that the possession of such power to suppress competition is of itself, and irrespective of its exercise, a restraint of interstate commerce; and therefore (4) the combination or conspiracy in question was in restraint of such commerce.

I.

(1) If all the things which the parties to the conspiracy or combination conspired or combined to do or procure to be done would not, when done, restrain commerce, then, most certainly, their combination or conspiracy was not in restraint of commerce. A conspiracy to deprive a man of life or health by means of a wax figure representing him, to be prepared by the conspirators and by them melted before a slow fire, or pierced with knives or pins, would not be, in law, today (however it might have been 300 years ago) a conspiracy to murder or to injure the health of the intended victim. An indictment for such conspiracy as a conspiracy to murder, or a declaration thereon in a civil action for injury to health, with proper averment of damage, would be thrown out by any court. The reason of course is that the things conspired to be done are incapable of injuring the intended victim in any way whatever, and it is quite immaterial that the conspirators thought otherwise, and meant to kill or injure, and supposed they could do so, by the means they conspired to use.

The agenda of the parties to the conspiracy in question were the formation of the Securities Co. and its acquisition of the railway shares. The final act, as planned and performed, was and is its acquisition of the last of a great majority of the shares of each of the railway companies.

Hence, if the acquisition and holding of such majority of shares by the Securities Co. is not a restraint of interstate commerce within the meaning of the Anti-trust Act, the conspiracy or combination in question here was not a combination or conspiracy in restraint of such commerce, within the meaning of that act.

(2) Taking the Government's case on its own showing, or rather on the perhaps better showing made for it by the Circuit Court, and it amounts to this: Certain persons have combined to organize the Securities Co. and to sell to it, or help it to buy from others, (paying in all cases with its own shares,) a large majority of the shares of two competing railway companies engaged in interstate commerce.

The Government claims and the Circuit Court has held, that the Securities Co. has thereby acquired the power to suppress the competition theretofore existing between the companies; that its possession of such power (irrespective of any exercise of it) is a restraint of the commerce of the railways; and therefore the combination was a combination in restraint of commerce and under the ban of the Anti-trust Act.

It is not alleged or found in terms that this stock ownership by the Securities Co., in and of itself, without farther action on its part, suppresses competition, but merely that such ownership gives the Securities Co. power to suppress. But the possession of this power to suppress is claimed and held to be in itself a suppression—although it would seem that the exercise of the power must involve a precedent act of intelligence and volition on the part of the Securities Co., without which it will not occur—as, in point of fact, it has not yet occurred.

A pertinent question is, how can this power to suppress competition be exercised? To this there can be but one answer,—by voting for and electing the boards of directors of the railway companies, who conduct their commerce. And the Securities Co., having a majority of the shares of each railway company, and hence a majority of votes, can elect for each railway company such board as it pleases, subject to the statutes which require the membership of each board to be entirely distinct from that of the other.

That is to say, the Securities Co. has the power to suppress competition because of its ownership of the majority of the stock and the voting power which is an incident—and an inseparable incident—of such stock ownership.

And that any power of the Securities Co. to suppress competition has its source in and is an incident of its ownership of a majority of the shares of each railway company, is, in one portion of its decision, expressly conceded by the Circuit Court, which says (II, 1705):

> "The scheme which was thus devised and consummated led inevitably to the following results: First it placed the control of the two roads in the hands of a single person, to-wit, the Securities Co., by virtue of its ownership of a large majority of the stock of both companies."

See p. 153 supra

The case then is one where large purchases have resulted in the ownership by one person of a great majority of shares—enough, as the Government says, to give the owner power to suppress competition—that power being only capable of exercise, and being exercised, if at all, by use of the voting power which is an incident of the stock ownership.

Now these matters of stock purchases or exchanges and stock ownership, and the incidents of such ownership, whether the companies are or are not competing for interstate commerce, are not, any more than purchases or exchanges or ownership of other property, matters of interstate commerce, or embraced within the Anti-trust Act. They do not touch in any way the commerce of the companies. This is true whatever the company a majority of whose shares are thus acquired. And this being so where the shares of one railway company only are acquired, it is not easy to see how the purchase of a majority of the shares of two railway companies, though doing (as every railway, great or small, does) interstate business, and though competing with each other for such business, should not be equally apart from interstate commerce and outside of the Anti-trust Act and of the commercial power of Congress, as the purchase of shares of either one of them or the shares of any other company.

That such purchases are outside of the Anti-trust Act has been expressly held by this court in U. S. v. E. C. Knight Co., 156 U. S. 1, where it is said, p. 16:

"Congress did not attempt (by the Anti-trust > Act) * * * to limit and restrict the rights of corporations created by the states, or of citizens of the states, in the acquisition, or disposition of property, * * * or to make criminal the acts of persons in the acquisition and control of property which the States of their residence or creation sanctioned or permitted."

[The last clause was, of course, not intended to make the federal jurisdiction over property purchases, etc., depend on their validity under State law].

(3.) It is no answer to this to say that the stock purchases were made and ownership of the shares was acquired by the Securities Co in furtherance of a conspiracy to restrain interstate commerce. This does not alter the fact that in order to suppress competition the alleged power must be exercised, and that such power was not derived from the conspiracy. The ownership of a majority of the shares was obtained from persons not parties to the conspiracy, and the voting power of the shares was created and annexed to them by the charter of the company. This voting power and the right to exercise it is as inseparable an incident of ownership as the right to sell. And neither the right to vote nor the right to sell is in any way conditioned on the source from which or the manner in which the absolute ownership of the shares was obtained.

Undoubtedly if the holder of this voting power conspire with others to restrain interstate commerce by the use of it, such use may be restrained by injunction. But no such case is presented here. It is not claimed that the conspiracy charged included the making of such new conspiracy, or that it was part of the conspiracy that the Securities Co. should exercise this power to stifle competition.

The Securities Co., then, must exercise its supposed power to suppress competition before there will be any suppression of it or any restraint of trade. But the defendants did not conspire to cause or procure the Securities Co. to exercise the power. According to the petition and decision the things they were to do ended with the Securities Co's. acquisition of shares. In the use and disposition of them, or of any power incident to the ownership, the Securities Co. and its members were left absolutely untrammelled, and necessarily so, since the acquisition of the great majority of the shares marked the end of the conspiracy.

This conclusion is not weakened by the finding of the Circuit Court (without evidence to support it, as we have already pointed out) that the Securities Co. at its creation became a member of the conspiracy—was born into it. But it is not found that this addition to the combination made any addition to the things which the members of it combined to do. The last act still continued to be the acquisition of a large majority of shares by the Securities Co. And the Circuit Court itself does not hold to the contrary.

And hence it cannot be said that any acts the Securities Co. may do in the way of suppressing competition are acts done in pursuance of the conspiracy, or in carrying out its scheme.

(4) To the authoritative decision quoted from the E. C. Knight Case, may be added some additional reasons showing that even if the Securities Co. has the power to suppress competition, still this case is not within the Anti-trust Act.

That act does not define "restraint of commerce." Undoubtedly the common-law criterion is to be adopted in construing the act, though it brushes aside the common-law distinction between lawful and unlawful restraints and makes both kinds illegal and criminal.

"Restraints of trade" at common law were in almost if not quite every case, restraints imposed by a contract or combination upon one or more of the parties to it, the common instances being restraints as to the place of carrying on trade, or as to the amount of trade to be done or the prices to be charged, or as to the use of trade secrets, etc. In each case the restraint was imposed on the person's freedom to carry on his business at his own will, or to carry it on at all. Now, in this case there is no contract between the Securities Co. and anyone else —indeed no contract at all between any parties—requiring either railway company to cease or diminish its competition with the other, nor did the conspiracy or combination in question provide for any such contract.

At common law a cessation or diminution of competition springing from a unity of ownership—as where one competitor sold his business to another, or both sold out to a third person, etc.—was never regarded as a restraint of trade, such cessation or diminution being incident to the union of property or business in one ownership, and not a restraint imposed by contract.

And so such purchases, or agreements to purchase, have never been held contracts in restraint of trade.

In two recent and important cases the validity of such purchases was upheld.

In Trenton Potteries Co. v. Olyphant, (1899) 58 N. J. Eq. 507, the court say:

> "A person engaged in any manufacture or trade, having the right to acquire and possess property and to do with it what he chooses, may lawfully buy the business of any of his competitors."

In Oakdale Mfg. Co. v. Garst, (1894) 18 R. I. 484, a number of competing manufacturers of oleomargarine agreed to form a corporation to which they should convey their respective plants, assets and good-will. All this was done, payment being made by the new company in shares of its own stock. The preliminary agreement contained a covenant by each party to it not to engage in any like business for five years. One of them sold his stock, and at once engaged in the oleomargarine business in competition with the corporation, which sued for an injunction.

The covenant and, of course, the preliminary agreement and the formation of the corporation, and the sales to it for its own shares, were sustained—the covenant as not in unreasonable restraint of trade, and the rest as not in restraint of trade at all.

The court say of the transaction:

> "It is the common occurrence of a consolidation of firms. It is not illegal on the ground of reducing competition."

And so this Court, while holding that every contract or combination in restraint of trade, whether the restraint be reasonable or unreasonable, is condemned by the Anti-trust law, yet holds that such transactions among competitors as we are considering, though they may suppress competition, are not in restraint of trade, saying:

> "The formation of corporations for business or manufacturing purposes has never to our knowledge been regarded in the nature of a contract in restraint of trade or commerce. The same may be said of the contract of partnership." Joint Traffic Ass'n. v. United States, 171 U. S. 505, 567.

That partnership, etc., between competitors must have been meant by the court seems plain. It is hardly conceivable that the counsel to whose argument this declaration is a reply could have suggested or supposed that a partnership between persons not yet in business, or whose business was not competitive, had been declared in the Freight Association Case, then being re-examined, to be in restraint of trade.

And it is almost inconceivable that any other rule should be law among a liberty-loving and a commercial people, especially a people so given as are those of this country to changing from one locality and one business to another, and so requiring and demanding the largest liberty and the widest market for disposing of any business they may wish to relinquish. It seems an absurdity to say that a wholesale merchant in New York, wishing to retire, may not sell out his business to any one of his 25 or 50 or maybe 100 competitors—and this because competition would be thereby lessened; but that he must find, if he can, a purchaser who is a stranger to the trade, or else submit to the delay, expense and loss of a liquidation. And it is equally absurd to say that no two or three of those commercial houses may form a partnership or corporation to take over and own and carry on the business of each one of them; or that an individual, partnership or corporation, whether already existing or formed for the purpose, and whether already in the trade or not, may not lawfully buy the business of any two or three or more of these commercial houses, notwithstanding the suppression or diminution of competition that may ensue.

(5) And the liberty enjoyed by merchants cannot be denied to carriers. The rule of the common law and of the Anti-trust law is uniform and impartial. If the sale of a merchant's property and business does not restrain trade though suppressing competition, neither does a like sale by a carrier.

Take the case of two stage lines, each owned by an individual, and operated between towns ten miles apart, one in New Hampshire and the other in Vermont. There is a vast difference, it is true, between a ten-mile stage line and a transcontinental railway; but the Anti-trust Act puts them both on the same footing, just as the same law of commercial paper is applied to a note for ten dollars and a note for a million.

Of course any contract between the owners of these stage lines, by which either of them restrains his own freedom of making rates, etc., while still carrying on the business, is a contract in restraint of interstate commerce, and in direct restraint, for it operates directly on the commerce by depriving the carrier of his freedom. Such a contract is clearly a crime under the Anti-trust Act.

But there can be no doubt but that one of the stage-owners may agree to sell his business to the other, and may sell. And the buyer may discontinue one of the lines or may operate both. In the first case competition perishes for want of a competitor. In the second case the buyer has more than all the power attributed to the Securities Co. to suppress competition between the two lines, which the Circuit Court considers the decisive fact in this case.

Instead of a sale by one to the other, the two owners may form a partnership or corporation to which they may transfer the property, business and good will of their respective lines.

Or a third person, or a partnership or corporation formed for the express purpose, may buy both lines, their property, business and good will.

The actual or potential suppression of competition in these cases would not make the sales or the buyers' ownership in restraint of commerce; nor would the agreements for the sales, or the formation of partnerships or corporations to buy, be contracts, combinations or conspiracies in restraint of interstate commerce.

The reasons of this are not far to seek.

(a) The transactions touch not interstate commerce but property. They are purchases and sales of property—the very transactions which this court, in the passage quoted from the E. C. Knight case, declares not to be in restraint of interstate trade or commerce so as to be forbidden by the Anti-trust Act.

(b) In the various cases supposed, of sales of one or both of the stage lines, etc., resulting in placing both lines, their property, business and goodwill in a single ownership, and a suppression of competition or power to suppress it, this actual or potential suppression of competition is not effected by a contract operating either directly or indirectly on the commerce of the lines, or by any contract at all.

The power to suppress competition—indeed the suppression itself where it takes place—is an incident of the ownership of the property. It is the necessary and inevitable result of the unity of ownership. It is as much an incident of ownership as the right to sell, and is not, any more than the right to sell, affected by the source of the owner's title.

And because any such suppression is not made by contract but results from the unity of ownership, the agreements to buy and to form partnerships and corporations for that purpose are not contracts or combinations in restraint of commerce, and are not crimes under the Anti-trust Act. The above quotation from the E. C. Knight Case is directly in point.

(c) The only difference between the cases cited and the present is that in those the property itself, and all of it, engaged in interstate commerce was united in the ownership of a single person, firm or corporation, which had direct, immediate and absolute control over the commerce, and power to suppress competition. In this case not the property engaged in commerce—not the two railways—but the shares of stock of the railway companies, and not all of the shares, have passed under a single ownership. And we shall show that the owner—the Securities Co.—has not the power possessed by the buyer of the stage lines to suppress competition; that it has no power at all, and certainly no direct power.

In the cases supposed, the suppression of competition and the power to suppress it are the result of the unity of ownership resulting from the purchases, and are incidents of such ownership. The same is true here, except that the power of the Securities Co. —not a power to act directly on the commerce of the companies, but only to elect directors—is an incident of its ownership of the shares; a voting power inseparably incident to the shares.

(d) In this case as in those supposed, the source of title, the guilt or innocence of the agreements in pursuance of which the shares have been acquired, in no way affect the powers and rights incident to ownership, and which the owner has and exercises by virtue of his ownership.

And the Circuit Court itself, in a passage already quoted, recognizes that the power of suppressing competition which it attributes to the Securities Co., that company has not by reason of the conspiracy or anything done in execution of it, but solely because of its ownership.

(e) Should it be said that in the cases supposed the purchases of the stage lines are made for legitimate purposes, while here there is a conspiracy to suppress competition, the answer is plain. The only question in this regard under the Anti-trust Act is, does the contract or combination itself, or do the things the parties contracted to do, restrain commerce? If they do, the parties are criminals, however good their motives. If they do not, the parties are innocent, however reprehensible their designs. U. S. v. Freight Ass'n., 166 U. S. 290, 341; Addyston Pipe Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 234.

II.

Power to Suppress Competition not of Itself Suppression.

The Circuit Court's decision rests on the proposition that the power to suppress competition and its actual suppression are identical—an agreement to put into some one's hands the power to restrain commerce is an agreement to restrain commerce. The act must be construed as if it read that "every contract, combination or conspiracy in restraint of commerce, or to put into any one's hands the power to restrain commerce, is hereby declared to be illegal," and is made a crime.

The reasoning which makes the Securities Co. a suppressor of competition because of its power to suppress it, is not unlike that by which the learned Increase Mather proved (to his own satisfaction, at least) that Satan was a principal author of the thunder-storms which terrified the New England people in his day. For, as he says, no one can doubt the power of Satan in such case. He is the prince of the powers of the air, and has full access to all the ingredients from which thunder storms are made, and well knows how to mix and use them; and of his will to do all the harm in his power there can be no doubt.

But Mather's reasoning, though it may provoke a smile today, was sounder than that of the Circuit Court. Even in the case of the arch-enemy of mankind he did not assume that a will to do evil was involved and inherent in the power to do it. His argument does not rest on the mere existence of the power, but he postulates also the existence of an independent will apart from the power.

The Circuit Court's theory of the identity of the potential and the actual smacks of those transcendental metaphysics in which the ego and the non-ego are one, being and not being are the same, "and naught is everything and everything is naught," rather than of the plain common sense of the common law. And thought the adoption of the theory would be a great help to all having notes to pay and contracts or other legal obligations to perform, it has not as yet, so far as we are advised, been adopted into our jurisprudence.

And if adopted it would not help the Government's case; for if the Securities Co. has power to suppress competition, it has equal power to abstain from suppressing it, and of the two courses the latter is the easier and safer. On what ground should the court hold that the Securities Co. suppresses competition because it has power to suppress, rather than hold that it abstains from suppressing because it has power to abstain? Certainly, in this proceeding in equity, the Court should not read backward the ancient rule, and presume that to be done which ought not to be done—and because it ought not to be done.

Should it be said that it is for the interest of the two companies that competition be suppressed, and therefore the two boards of directors will join (conspire) to suppress it, we ask how can the Court judicially know that such suppression would be even for the pecuniary interest of the companies or would be so considered by the two boards, or by the officers or stockholders of the Securities Co.? And if they think it for their pecuniary interest, how can the Court say that they would set the money thus to be gained above their duty as citizens to obey the laws?—to say nothing of the penalties of the law as a motive to obedience. And is it certain that the railway directors would be such devoted trustees as to risk imprisonment in behalf of the shareholders? And if, as the Circuit Court erroneously holds, the directors are the mere agents of the majority shareholders, where is the presumption that an agent will commit a prison offence at the bidding of his principal? Unless the directors and shareholders of corporations can be differentiated in this respect from the rest of the community, the Circuit Court, in thus holding that they will commit any crime it is within their power and for their interest to commit, has done what Edmund Burke said he could not do—drawn up an indictment against a whole people. If that indictment stands—if its charges are true,—why may not our President well describe us in the language of the Dey of Algiers, to whom an English officer complained of some act of rapine. "Sir, my subjects are a band of robbers and I am their captain."

The extract from an opinion of Judge Lochren, of the same Circuit Court, printed at the end of the discussion of this fourth point, renders superflous any further refutation of this novel doctrine of his colleagues.

And certainly a criminal statute cannot be amended as required by the decision of the Circuit Court. The words "power to restrain" cannot be substituted for "restraint," the word "restraint" cannot be held to include or to be equivalent to "power to restrain" in the declaratory sentence of section 1, without applying the same treatment to the next following penal sentence. No rule of construction and no practice in construing criminal statutes permits any such dealing with them. This court has refused to read the word "unreasonable" into this statute to narrow its operation, because "no exception or limitation can be added without placing in the act that which has been omitted by Congress." 166 U. S. 290, 329.

Nor can the Court broaden the statute as asked for by the Government without a like unwarranted addition to it, an addition that would also have to be made to every other criminal statute, so that every railway company and every individual would be a perpetual criminal because of their undoubted power to violate one or more criminal statutes.

In the E. C. Knight Case, the American Co., as owning refineries with 98 per cent of all the refining capacity in the United States, and owning their product, sugar, an article that was inevitably destined, in the natural course of things, to enter largely into interstate commerce, had the unquestioned power to control such commerce and to restrain it.

But this court held that such power did not amount to a restraint of commerce.

It is apparent how enormously the scope of the act would be widened, what countless agreements would be made criminal, if every contract which, among its other tendencies, has a tendency to restrain interstate trade or empower some one else to do so, or which in its operations results in somebody's acquisition of power to restrain interstate trade or commerce, should be held to be within the Anti-trust Act. There is no reason to suppose that Congress meant any such extension of its already sweeping provisions.

III.

Securities Co. without Power to Suppress Competition.

And even were it conceded that power to suppress competition, is in itself a restraint of commerce, and that a combination to clothe some one with that power is a combination in restraint of commerce, that would not help the Government's case; for even then the combination would still be merely one to make the Securities Co. the owner of a large majority of shares, which ownership, however, would not give it power to restrain the commerce of the railways.

This position of the Government rests on a wholly erroneous view of the relations of the shareholders of a railway company to the commerce of the company, and of the power of a majority of the shareholders to restrain or otherwise control that commerce.

(1) The business of a railway company is managed by the board of directors. Its interstate and other commerce is conducted by the board and by officers, agents and servants appointed by the board. The stockholders do not, still less do the majority of them, carry on any part of the company's business.

But the directors are more than mere managers—mere agents of the corporation. They are its governors, as they are indeed called in some old charters. They are elected, it is true, by the shareholders, just as the governing bodies of a State or the United States are elected directly or indirectly by the people. Like "the Government of the United States," or that of a State, the government of a corporation is strictly representative. The people in the one case and the shareholders in the other do not directly govern. They elect their governors, but have no control over them during their term of office. Members of a State or of the Federal Government cannot be removed by popular vote, but only in the mode constitutionally provided. And so directors cannot be removed by the stockholders, not even for misconduct. To remove them resort must be had to the courts.

And in one respect the governing body of a corporation is farther removed from the shareholders than that of the Union or of a State is from the people. The latter not only derive their offices from the people, but the office itself is created and its powers conferred by the people in their constitution. But the office of director is not created, nor are its powers conferred by the stockholders. It is created and its powers are conferred by the State, either in its special charter or by the general corporation statute.

Even more, then, than the high officers of the Government elected for fixed terms are the directors of a corporation free from control by their constituents during their term of office.

The difference between the board of directors and mere agents is admirably stated by Judge Comstock in Hoyt v. Thompson, 19 N. Y., 207, 216, as follows:

> "The board of directors of a corporation do not stand in the same relation to the corporate body which a private agent holds toward his principal. In the strict relation of principal and agent, all the authority of the latter is derived by delegation from the former. But in corporate bodies the powers of the directors are in a very important sense, original and undelegated. The stockholders do not confer nor can they revoke those powers. They are derivative only in the sense of being received from the State by the act of incorporation."

And see, to the same effect, Burrill v. Nahant Bank, 2 Met. 163, per Shaw, C. J.

(2) The relation of the shareholders of a corporation to its governing board, and their want of control of the operations of the company, is nowhere better stated than by Chief Justice Waite, in Pullman Car Co. v. Missouri Pacific Ry. Co., 115 U. S. 587.

The Pullman Car Co. had contracted with defendant's predecessor in interest for exclusive use of its cars on the latter's road, and on all roads "controlled" by it. Plaintiff claimed that the contract was binding on defendant, and that defendant had violated it by refusing to allow the use of plaintiff's cars on the railroad of the Iron Mountain Company, nearly all the stock of which company had been acquired and was held by defendant. Assuming the contract to be binding on the defendant, and in answer to plaintiff's claim that defendant by such stock ownership, "controlled" the Iron Mountain road, the Chief Justice says (pp. 596-7):

> "We are also of opinion that the railroad of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Company is not controlled by the present Missouri Pacific Company in such a way as to require that company to haul the Pullman cars over it, if the contract is binding on the new company to the same extent it would be on the old were that company still in existence and standing in the place of the new. Confessedly the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Company keeps up its own corporate organization. It operates its own road. It has its own officers and makes it own bargains. The Missouri Pacific owns all, or nearly all, its stock, and in that way can determine who shall constitute its board of directors, but there the power of that company over the management stops. The board when elected has controlling authority, and for its doings is not necessarily answerable to the Missouri Pacific Company. The two roads are substantially owned by the same persons and operated in the same interests, but that of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Company is in no legal sense controlled by the Missouri Pacific.

"It is true the bill avers in many places and in many ways that the purchase of the stock of the St. Louis Iron Mountain and Southern Company was made by the Missouri Pacific Company for the purpose and with the intent of getting the control of the road of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern, and that the case is before us on demurrer to the bill. A demurrer admits all facts stated in the bill which are well pleaded, but not necessarily all statements of conclusions of law. What was actually done is stated clearly and distinctly. The effect of what was done is a question of law, not of fact. It is a matter of no importance what the purpose of the parties was if what they did was not sufficient in law to accomplish what they wanted. When there is doubt, the purpose and intention of the parties may sometimes aid in explaining what was done, but here there is no need of explanation. The Missouri Pacific Company bought the stock of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Company, and has effected a satisfactory election of directors, but this is all. It has all the advantages of a control of the road, but that is in law not the control itself. Practically it may control the company, but the company alone controls its road. In a sense, the stockholders of a corporation own its property, but they are not the managers of its business or in the immediate control of its affairs. Ordinarily they elect the governing body of the corporation, and that body controls its property. Such is the case here. This Missouri Pacific Company owns enough of the stock of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern to control the election of directors, and this it has done. The directors now control the road through their own agents and executive officers, and these agents and officers are in no way under the direction of the Missouri Pacific Company. If they or the directors act contrary to the wishes of the Missouri Pacific Company, that company has no power to prevent it, except by the election, at the proper time and in the proper way, of other directors, or by some judicial proceeding for the protection of its interest as a stockholder. Its rights and its powers are those of a stockholder only. It is not the corporation, in the sense of that term as applied to the management of the corporate business or the control of the corporate property." * * *

The foregoing decision of this court and the above quoted opinion of Judge Comstock, and that of Chief Justice Shaw, were pressed upon the Circuit Court at the hearing, and the Pullman Car Co. case is thus disposed of in the opinion (II, 1707):

> "In that case the meaning of the word controlled, as used in a private contract, was the point under consideration; and what was said on the subject cannot be held applicable to cases arising under the Anti-trust Act when the point involved is whether the ownership of all" [but the Securities Co. does not own all] "of the stock of two competing and parallel railroads vests the owner thereof with the power to suppress competition between such roads. We entertain no doubt that it does."

Of course, we rely on the decision of this Court, with which we shall not attempt to reconcile that of the Circuit Court.

But assuming them both to be law (for the latter is unreversed) and the relation of a majority shareholder to the corporation and its operations is something like this:

He has no control whenever control will make him liable on a contract.

He has absolute control whenever control will make him a criminal liable to fine and imprisonment.

(3) The charter of each of the railway companies gives to the board of directors all the powers attributed to it by Judge Comstock and Chief Justice Waite. The Northern Pacific directors "are hereby invested with all the powers of the corporation" (I, 412), and the Great Northern charter gives them the conduct of "all the affairs and business of said company," with sole power to make by-laws, etc. (I, 441).

The Northern Securities Co. exhausts its powers as a stockholder in electing a board of directors for each company. They are independent of it and cannot be controlled by it. If it aims to induce them to violate the Anti-trust law, it must do so by persuasion or corruption; it cannot compel.

And it is not only a single body of men that must be corrupted. The Statute of Wisconsin provides:

> "No officer of any railroad corporation shall be an officer of any other railroad corporation which owns or controls a parallel or competing line." (Rev. Stat. 1878, c. 87, §1804).

That of Minnesota provides:

> "Nor shall any officer of such railroad corporation act as an officer of any other railroad corporation owning or having the control of a parallel or competing line." (Gen. St. 1894, §2717).

The word "officer" in these statutes includes "director," and has always been so construed—as for instance when Mr. Hill, presumably under advice of counsel, resigned from the directorate of the Northern Pacific Co. (I, 24). The powers and duties of the board are but slightly, if at all, legislative. They are executive and administrative, such that the persons performing them are properly called officers.

The foregoing sufficiently exposes the error of the view which the Government seems to have taken in the conduct if not in the inception of this suit, viz: that the Securities Co., as majority stockholder, would hold the directors in its power, could elect the same individuals as directors of both companies, and could turn them out at pleasure (See cross-examination of Col. Clough, I. 841-4).

(4) It is no doubt true that the directors would naturally desire to carry out the wishes of the stockholders in all lawful things—perhaps even to the extent of being in a measure "controlled" by such wishes. But the case is very different where obedience to the wishes—yielding to the control—of a majority of the stockholders means the violation—perhaps a daily violation—of a criminal statute, under which, for each offense, every director is punishable by a $5,000 fine and a year's imprisonment. There is no conclusive nor any presumption that the directors of either railway company, much less the directors of both companies, will violate the Antitrust act and risk these penalties by combining to restrain the commerce of the companies or suppressing competition between them. The presumption is the other way. The purchaser of the majority of the shares of a railway company does not buy therewith and own, as an incident of his purchase, the intelligence, the will and the conscience of the directors.

(5) There is nothing in any claim that the Securities Co.'s stock ownership tends to a restraint of commerce.

As to "tendency": Undoubtedly, at common law, certain agreements are held void because of their tendency. But this case rests on a statute, and a penal statute. By the first section certain contracts, etc., are declared unlawful, and "every person who shall make any such contract * * * shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor." Everything declared unlawful by the first clause is made criminal by the second, and nothing is criminal under the second clause which is not unlawful under the first. The words "or tending to restrain" cannot be read into the declaratory clause, for reading them into that reads them also into the criminal clause.

And, besides, the holding of a majority of shares cannot be said to tend to restrain commerce, when any such restraint requires as a condition precedent the concurrent action of two independent boards of directors to violate a highly penal statute.

Moreover, conspiracies and acts which "tend" to restrain commerce are conspiracies and acts which do not actually reach it and restrain it. Hence acts which merely tend to restrain interstate commerce are not within the regulative power of Congress. Otherwise the E. C. Knight Case would have been differently decided.

(6) Since the Securities Co., no matter how large its holding of stock in the two railway companies, cannot by reason or by means of such holding, or without debauching two boards of directors to violate the Anti-trust act and incur its penalties, restrain the interstate commerce of either railway, it necessarily follows that the holding of a majority of the shares of each railway company by the Securities Co. does not restrain such commerce; and does not make the Securities Co. a combination in restraint of interstate commerce; and that a combination or conspiracy to form the Securities Co., and transfer to it a majority of the shares of the two railway companies, is not a combination or conspiracy in restraint of their interstate commerce; and therefore that no conspiracy or combination to restrain interstate commerce is either alleged in the petition or shown by the evidence.

Of course, if the Securities Co. should hereafter conspire or combine with directors of one or both of the railway companies to restrain their commerce by suppressing competition or by other means, or if the directors of the railway companies should make such a combination or conspiracy without the Securities Co., in either of these cases the Government could restrain the carrying out of the conspiracy and punish the conspirators. But until the Securities Co. engages in some such conspiracy or combination—and no charge or claim is made that it contemplates anything of the kind—it is in no way under the ban of the Anti-trust act.

IV.

Judge Lochren's Decision.

The positions of the Circuit Court in those portions of the decision that have been discussed under this our fourth point, could not receive a sounder or more destructive criticism than they have been subjected to by Judge Lochren of the same court, in the case of State of Minnesota v. Northern Securities Co. (123 Fed. Rep. 692), in which the decision now under review was pressed upon him as an authority to be followed. In the course of an opinion of marked ability and independence of outside influences, Judge Lochren says on this point:

> "The decision of the case last cited (i. e. State v. Securities Co.) as I read it and understand it, does not specify or point out any contract, agreement or act on the part of the defendants, or of any of them, which is directly in restraint of trade or commerce, or which has any direct reference to trade, commerce, transportation or rates; nor even any threat or avowed purpose on the part of any defendant to do any such act, or enter into any such contract or agreement.'
> "It is argued that because the Northern Securities Company has become the owner of a large majority of the stock of each of the two railroad corporations, it will be for its interests to suppress competition between them, by causing the two boards of directors of these railroad corporations, which it can fill by election, to enter into arrangements or agreements in restraint of trade which will suppress competition; and as a corollary to this reasoning (or conjecture) the decision holds that the formation of the Northern Securities Company and purchase by it of a majority of the stock of each of these railroad companies are acts or contracts in restraint of trade, though of themselves, and without further action (not yet taken, and perhaps never to be taken) by the directors of the two railroad companies, the formation of the Northern Securities Company and its holdings of stock have and can have nothing to do directly or indirectly with trade, commerce, transportation or rates.

"To epitomize this decision: It is held that it will be for the interest of the Northern Securities Company to restrain trade by suppressing competition between these two railroads, and that by coercing or persuading the two boards of directors whom it has the power to elect, it will certainly cause them to commit highly penal offenses by entering into combinations, contracts and arrangements in restraint of trade, in violation of the Anti-trust Act, and hence the Northern Securities Company is already guilty of these offenses that have never been committed or thought of by its officers or promoters, so far as appears, and it must be suppressed or destroyed.

"I am compelled to reject the doctrine that any person can be held to have committed, or to be purposing and about to commit a highly penal offense, merely because it can be shown that his pecuniary interests will be thereby advanced, and that he has the power, either directly or indirectly through persuasion or coercion of his agents, to compass the commission of the offense."

FIFTH.

The Petition does not allege, nor do the Proofs disclose, any facts showing a Monopoly or a conspiracy or attempt to monopolize, any Interstate or Foreign Commerce.

A monopoly of interstate commerce, however it be defined, is but one form or species of restraint imposed thereon—a species which Congress, in the second section of the Anti-trust Act, has segregated from other kinds of restraint and subjected to special provisions.

And therefore what has been said under the foregoing points to the effect that the Securities Co's. holding of the majority of the shares of the two railway companies does not restrain commerce or suppress competition, or give that company power to do either, is equally applicable in reference to the charge of monopoly. If such holding does not restrain commerce at all, it does not monopolize commerce, monopoly being but one sort of restraint.

And so what will be said under the following (sixth) point, to the effect that even though the Securities Co's. holding should restrain commerce, yet it does not directly restrain it, and hence is not forbidden by the Anti-trust Act, applies with full force to the subject of monopoly, for a monopolizing like any other restraint of commerce must be direct to be within the act.

I.

In the primary meaning of the word, a monopolist is one who has the exclusive sale of a thing. And in law a monopolist is one who has the exclusive right to carry on a business, etc., under a franchise which prohibits others from engaging in it. And so a patent or a copyright confers a true monopoly. And an exclusive franchise for a bridge, a ferry or a railway within a defined territory creates a monopoly within that territory.

In popular, and sometimes even in judicial speech, one is said to monopolize a thing when he possesses all of it. A man who carries on all the trade of a certain class in a town or city is said to monopolize it. And so it has been said in this Court: "From the very nature of the case, therefore, railroads are monopolies." (Per Shiras, J., in Texas & Pacific Ry. v. Interstate Commerce Com'rs, 162 U. S. 197, 210). "It is true that as to a majority of those living along its line a railway is a monopoly." (Per Peckham, J., in U. S. v. Freight Ass'n., 166 U. S. 290, 335). "Owing to the greater speed and cheapness of the service performed by them, railways become necessarily monopolists of all traffic along their lines." (Per Brown, J., in Pearsall v. Great Northern Ry. Co., 161 U. S. 646, 676). Elsewhere in the last-cited case, Mr. Justice Brown uses the word in the same sense, when he speaks of the monopoly of the railway traffic in northern Minnesota, should the Great Northern Co. become owner of the stock of the Northern Pacific Co., or be consolidated with it.

In none of these cases were the remarks in regard to the monopoly of railways necessary to the decision, nor any part of the reasoning on which the decision was based. Thus in the last case there were two questions. The first was whether a statute of Minnesota forbidding a railway company to own stock in a competing company was inoperative as to a projected purchase of Northern Pacific stock by the Great Northern Co. because of a provision in the latter company's charter (earlier than the statute) empowering it to own stock in other companies. The second was whether the particular transaction in question was a purchase by the Great Northern Co. itself, or a purchase by its stockholders.

It is obvious that the questions whether the charter provision was a contract, and, if it were, whether the subsequent statute impaired its obligation, and whether the proposed purchaser was the company or its stockholders, must have been decided in the same way whether railways are or are not monopolies, and whether a purchase of the Northern Pacific shares by the Great Northern would or would not monopolize traffic.

In none of these cases was the Court called on to give a legal definition of monopoly, the cases did not turn on any question of monopoly, the attention of the Court was not directed to the difference between a monopoly in common parlance and a monopoly in law. The former was what was in the mind of the Court, and so the word was used in its common and not its technical meaning.

And the same is true of many cases that might (and perhaps will) be cited, where courts have used the word under like circumstances in this popular sense.

And in U. S. v. E. C. Knight Co., 156 U. S. 1, it being argued for the Government that a monopoly of interstate commerce would be created, the Court says (p. 10) that "the conclusion to be assumed on this record is that the result of the transaction complained of was the creation of a monopoly in the manufacture of a necessary of life," and then goes on to consider and decide the case on this assumption, and without deciding or even considering (it was unnecessary to do either) whether there was any monopoly or not, for, if there were, it was of manufacturing and not of interstate commerce.

A definition of monopoly that would make all railway operation criminal could hardly have been that in the mind of Congress when it penalized, in the second section of the act, all monopolizing and attempts or conspiracies to monopolize—and this though Congress was doubtless not ignorant of the widely published fact that the railways of the country, and notably those of the Northwest, have for years been engaged in a persistent attempt to ruin the producers along the lines by carrying their products at lower rates and furnishing better facilities therefor than can be had in any other country on the face of the earth—an attempt so far successful that the lands of these same producers bring only four or five times the price they would have brought half a dozen years ago.

II.

In the Circuit Court, the counsel for the Government, in their brief and argument, defined monopoly as > "the concentration, in the hands of one or a few, of a business or employment theretofore in the hands of several, so as to control competition."

And just as they had argued that the power to restrain trade was in itself a restraint, so they contended that the possession of power to monopolize is itself a monopolizing. On this subject we refer to what is said under our last (fourth) point without repeating it.

The definition quoted assumes that the business concentrated is competitive, otherwise the effect would not be to control competition. And so, in the petition, the only basis of the charge of monopolizing made against the Securities Co. is that it has acquired a majority of the shares of each railway company, and thereby the control of the competitive interstate commerce of both.

There is no ground for holding that the Securities Co. monopolizes, or has conspired or attempted or is conspiring or attempting to monopolize commerce, even though this or any like definition of monopoly be accepted.

It has no control of the commerce of either railway company, and hence no control of their competition. This has already been shown under our last (fourth) point.

The monopolizing denounced by the act is a monopolizing of trade or commerce by persons engaged in either of them. The acquisition and ownership of property—in this instance railway shares—not the subject of interstate trade or commerce, is not a monopolizing, nor within the Anti-trust Act, even though such acquisition and ownership should put it in the owner's power to monopolize, or otherwise control or restrain interstate commerce.

And any power that might exist, in such case, to monopolize commerce, whether by controlling competition or in any other way, would be simply an incident of a purchase and ownership of property—a purchase made and ownership held by virtue of rights which Congress, even if it had the power to do so, has not attempted, in the Anti-trust Act, to limit or control. That act becomes operative on the owner of the stock when (and not until) he attempts or conspires to monopolize commerce, whether by using his property for that purpose, or by other means.

This definition does not come quite so close as the former to making the Anti-trust law an enactment of Proudhon's "property is robbery," but comes perilously near it. For if this is the monopoly meant by the act when it penalizes the monopolizing or attempt to monopolize "any part" of trade or commerce among the states, many of the commonest business transactions are made criminal, and shackles are placed upon the freedom of trade and commerce far heavier than any monopolies impose.

Take the illustration heretofore given of one of 25 or 50 merchants engaged in interstate trade, and competitors, selling out to another, or the two forming a partnership or corporation, or both selling to an individual, a partnership, or a corporation.

Or take the case of the little 10-mile stage lines, and the various transactions instanced.

Now this definition of monopoly would make every one of these transactions criminal, and the result of them also criminal, because "a concentration in the hands of one or a few of a business theretofore in the hands of several, so as to control the competition theretofore existing among them," and so a monopoly of "a part"—however small a part—of interstate trade or commerce.

The claim of this or any like definition to express what Congress meant by monopolize, may be further tested by the following transactions, every one of which were or are criminal under this definition:

Before the days of railways there was a great interstate commerce by coach and wagon on the highways between the different States—for instance between Boston and Albany, Boston and New York, on the great Cumberland Road, etc. Enterprising and far-seeing men—the Hills and Morgans of those days—projected railways for the express purpose of acquiring the commerce so carried on by horses, and acquiring the whole of it, for the railway must necessarily take it all, and could not prosper with less than all. They built the railways, drove the coach and wagon-carriers out of all interstate commerce, acquired—monopolized—it all. They were regarded at the time and have been regarded since as public benefactors, who had rendered inestimable service to the commerce of the country. Had this Anti-trust act been then in force would they have been criminals for monopolizing interstate commerce which had theretofore been competitive?

Should it be said that their acts, though otherwise criminal, were protected by state charters, the answer is plain and is furnished by the Circuit Court (II. 1708;) in its negative response to the question put by it, "Whether a charter granted by a state can be used to defeat the will of the national legislature as expressed in a law relating to interstate trade and commerce, over which Congress has absolute control." Indeed, those men, by getting a state charter and acting under color of it, would, according to the Government and the Circuit Court, be doubly guilty—guilty of violating the act of Congress and guilty of procuring the state to violate the Federal Constitution—making it a partner in their illegalities if not in their crime.

Other instances readily suggest themselves:

Two shopkeepers in competition with each other do all the business in a small town. The business falls away, owing to the decay of the town or for any other reason, until there is not enough to support both shops. One of them must close or both must. They agree that one shall retire and sell his business to the other, who thereby has all the trade —"monopolizes" the formerly competitive trade of the town. Now does the purchaser monopolize the trade he has thus acquired, in the sense which that word bears in the Anti-trust Act? If the business thus dealt with included interstate trade, would he, under that act, be a criminal?

Although no single dealer monopolizes all the interstate trade of any city, each has exclusive possession of the part he has secured to himself—monopolizes that part. Each enterprising merchant aims and bends all his energies to enlarge his business to the fullest extent. By larger capital and superior business capacity one such merchant is able to and does continually encroach on the business of his rivals until he acquires nearly all or all of it. He does to other merchants in interstate trade what the department store does to small retailers. Does he "monopolize" the interstate trade he has thus acquired, and is he a criminal, according to the Anti-trust act?

In all these instances, whether of carriers or traders,—and in the instances before cited of merchants or stage-line owners selling out to one another or to third prsons or uniting in partnerships or corporations,—the individual or company which has thus acquired exclusive possession of a certain portion of the interstate commerce or trade of the country, competitive or non-competitive, is just as fully a violator of the Anti-trust law as the Northern Securities Co. could be if it actually controlled and operated the two defendant railway companies and their railways.

And these instances are enough to show that the Anti-trust act is not violated—interstate trade or commerce is not, nor is any part of it, monopolized, within the meaning of the act—by the mere acquisition and exercise of exclusive control of some portion of the interstate trade or commerce of the country, whether competitive or non-competitive.

In the words of Judge Ricks:

> "If these acts are illegal and in restraint of trade, and if they constitute a monopoly under this act, it may well be denominated an act to restrain legitimate enterprise, and limit and qualify the ownership in property."
> In re Corning, 51 Fed. Rep. 205, 211.

This Court has not, in any of the cases under the Anti-trust act, settled the meaning of the word monopolize as used in that act. But in Addyston Pipe Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, monopolizing was (as in this case) a principal charge, though coupled with restraint of trade. A "monopolizing," or "conspiracy to monopolize" in the sense against which we contend, was clearly made out. But the court disregarded that charge, and held the contract and combination simply to be in restraint of trade, which would seem to indicate that the court did not consider the word "monopolize" to include even such cases as that.

III.

The true criterion of a monopoly of trade or commerce is thus stated by Circuit Judge Sanborn in U. S. v. Trans-Missouri Freight Assn'n., 68 Fed. 58; 7 C. C. A. 15:

> "A monopoly of trade embraces two essential elements: (1) The acquisition of an exclusive right to or the exclusive control of the trade; and (2) the exclusion of all others from that right and control."

The learned judge cites In re Greene, 52 Fed. Rep. 103, 115, where Justice Jackson, of this Court, then a Circuit Judge, says, in an opinion the whole of which should be read:

> "An 'attempt to monopolize' any part of the trade or commerce among the states must be an attempt to secure or acquire an exclusive right to such trade or commerce by means which prevent or restrain others from engaging therein."

And in Oakdale Mfg. Co. v. Garst, 18 R. I. 484, the Supreme Court of Rhode Island says:

> "Monopolies are liable to be oppressive, and hence are deemed to be hostile to the public good. But combinations for a mutual advantage which do not amount to a monopoly, but leave the field open to others, are neither within the reason nor the operation of the rule."

But the so-called "control" of the two railway companies and their interstate commerce by the Securities Co. does not preclude any other railway company, existing or to be formed, from engaging in such commerce in competition with them. Before the formation of the Securities Co. it was open to any persons desiring to compete for such commerce to form a company to do so, and it is equally open to them since the organization of the Securities Co. The policy of free trade in railway construction and operation has at all times held full sway in all the states through which these railways extend. The ten-years' "monopoly" of the Northern Pacific did not preclude the Great Northern from building a rival line to Puget Sound. And there is no pretence that the defendant railway companies or the Securities Co. have placed, or intend to or will place, any obstacle in the way of such construction of rival lines; or that they have any greater power or means of obstructing the building of any competing line than the railway companies themselves had before the Securities Co. was formed.

Within the definitions of Justice Jackson, Judge Sanborn and the Supreme Court of Rhode Island, this record discloses no violation of the second section of the act.

On a plain common-sense view of the situation all these charges of monopoly and suppression of competition—huge as be their dimensions—have little if any substance. Much has been said in the Circuit Court, and many cases were cited, about monopolies being against public policy, and about competition being required by that policy. But when as in this case the whole subject is regulated by statutes, there is no public policy outside the statutes. And even at common law there was no policy requiring any body to compete. True, a man could not bind himself not to compete, just as he could not restrict his freedom of trade in other respects, and for the same reason; he must be left free to compete or not.

The policy of the Statute—the Interstate Commerce Law—is that railways shall not compete, shall not use any of the many arts and methods by which one trader gets business away from another, for this is competition. The railway must not give better terms or greater favors to one shipper than to another. It can only charge a rate that has been and is kept published, open to all the world. A reduction of rates may well be made by two companies, not in the interest of one as against the other, but to develop some particular traffic or section of country for the benefit of both. But this is not competition. Suppose that one company wishes to get business away from another by reducing rates. His reduced rates must be published three days before they can be put in force. Its competitor at once knows of the reduced rate as soon as published and at once reduces its own. The first has had the benefit of any increased traffic by reason of the reduction for one or two days, hardly long enough for the reduction to become generally known. After the three days it simply has to carry at the reduced rate, with no better chance of getting business away from its rival than it had before the reduction. It is worse off—both are worse off—than before. Hence there is no inducement for any company to reduce rates as a matter of competition.

or otherwise than in concert with its so-called "competitor," to help the business of both.

However the Interstate Commerce law may have failed to meet some of the objects of its authors, it could not be more effective to destroy railway competition. No company has any interest to compete (as that word is understood in ordinary trade) unless it be to engage in what has been called "piratical competition"—competition of a strong road against a weak by reducing rates to a point where the latter is sure to be ruined whether it meets the reductions or goes without business by not doing so. The outcome being that the strong road directly or indirectly acquires the weak either by a forced arrangement of some sort or by a purchase at a receiver's sale,—perhaps at a sacrifice great enough to save it from the necessity of compelling the public to make good its losses in the competition.

And so railway consolidations, or railway "mergers," do not restrain or control any but a fictitious or "piratical" competition. And that they are a public benefit we have the statement of Interstate Commerce Commissioner Prouty at the examination of Mr. Harriman (I, 644:)

> "I think as you do that unless these consolidations and unifications result in the over capitalization of our railroads, they are good for the country and a good thing for the carriers," even though they may sometimes impose on the public an unjust rate.

Now, it would be a hard thing to say of public policy or of the law that it favors any such piratical competition as has been described. And looking at facts as they are, and not as they were before the Interstate Commerce act, it must be conceded that ordinary fair competition—such competition as obtains between merchants or ship-owners—is not today the policy of the law as to railway companies, nor does the statute permit such competition, nor does it exist.

In the examination of Mr. Harriman, it was stated by Mr. Prouty of the Interstate Commerce Commission: "You know, Mr. Harriman, that competing rates have to be practically the same between the same points." (I, 642, and see supra, p. 105.)

And it appears in evidence that the rates to and from all points on the road of either company and points on the line of any other railway are the result, not of an agreement, (which would be criminal,) but of acquiescence on the part of a very large number of companies, each one "competing" with some if not all of the others. See the "Westbound Tariff", Deft's. Exhibit 5. (I, 965.)

And when it is considered that of the so-called competitive commerce of these railways, the Securities Co., if it has the power to control competition or rates at all, can control the rates or the competition on only 3 per cent of that commerce, (supra, pp. 106-8) it must be conceded that the Circuit Court's picture of the Securities Co.'s power over competition, and of the stifling of competition, is to say the least, overdrawn.

SIXTH.

This case is not within the Anti-trust act, for in any view of the matters complained of, their effect upon commerce—whether much or little, for good or ill—is indirect and remote. The Anti-trust act and the regulative power of Congress under the commerce clause of the Constitution are alike strictly confined to matters which directly and immediately affect interstate or foreign commerce.

Assuming that the promoters of the Securities Co. combined, as the Circuit Court says, with a view to having it obtain by purchase and exchange a majority of the shares of both railway companies, (and not of the Northern Pacific alone, as shown under our third point,) and that the mere ownership of the shares thus acquired operates as a restraint of, or gives it power to restrain, the interstate commerce of the two roads, (and that it does not is shown under our fourth point,) then we submit that any such restraint of commerce is not a direct restraint, nor is the combination or conspiracy found by the Circuit Court a combination or conspiracy in direct restraint of commerce.

That the Anti-trust act is so limited to combinations, etc., in direct restraint of commerce has been reiterated by this Court, and with increasing emphasis, in each successive case under the act that has been decided by it.

In U. S. v. E. C. Knight Co., 156 U. S. 1, it was claimed by the United States that the so-called Sugar Trust was a combination in restraint of and to monopolize interstate commerce, because of its monopoly of the manufacture of sugar, a necessary of life, used throughout the United States, so that the manufacture must to a moral certainty be followed by shipments by the Trust to other states, or sales for shipment to other states. But the court held that an inevitable tendency to such result did not make the Trust a combination or conspiracy to restrain or monopolize interstate commerce, since its effect on such commerce, however inevitable, would be indirect only.

And it would be indirect because the manufacture of sugar was not and did not touch (any more than the acquisition of railway shares) interstate commerce; that besides the manufacture, one of two other things had to be done, each involving the exercise of volition on the part of one or more persons, before interstate commerce could be affected—that is, the sugar must be shipped to another state by the Trust itself on its own account, or be sold or contracted for shipment to another state.

And so in this case, the alleged conspiracy could not affect interstate commerce until after (1) the Securities Co. had acquired a majority of stock of both railway companies by the voluntary acts of the Great Northern shareholders in transferring their shares to it—they not being parties to the conspiracy; nor until after (2) the boards of directors of the two railway companies should have taken the action required to restrain their competitive commerce; action which the conspirators did not conspire to take or to have taken; action which the directors alone had power to take, and which action alone could act directly on their commerce.

Upon the points here involved, the Court, by the Chief Justice, says:

> "The argument is that the power to control the manufacture of refined sugar is a monopoly over a necessary of life, to the enjoyment of which by a large part of the population of the United States interstate commerce is indispensable, and that, therefore, the general government, in the exercise of the power to regulate commerce, may repress such monopoly directly and set aside the instruments which have created it. But this argument cannot be confined to necessaries of life merely, and must include all articles of general consumption. Doubtless the power to control the manufacture of a given thing involves in a certain sense the control of its disposition, but this is a secondary and not the primary sense; and although the exercise of that power may result in bringing the operation of commerce into play, it does not control it, and affects it only incidentally and indirectly."
>
> (p. 13). "It will be perceived how far-reaching the proposition is that the power of dealing with a monopoly directly may be exercised by the general government whenever interstate or international commerce may be ultimately affected. The regulation of commerce applies to the subjects of commerce and not to matters of internal police."
> (p. 15). "In Gibbons v. Ogden, Brown v. Maryland and other cases often cited, the state laws, which were held inoperative, were instances of direct interference with interstate or international commerce; yet in Kidd v.

Pearson the refusal of a State to allow articles to be manufactured within her borders even for export was held not to directly affect external commerce; and state legislation which, in a great variety of ways, affected interstate commerce and persons engaged in it, has been frequently sustained because the interference was not direct.

(p. 16). "Contracts, combinations, or conspiracies to control domestic enterprise in manufacture, agriculture, mining, production in all its forms, or to raise or lower prices or wages, might unquestionably tend to restrain external as well as domestic trade, but the restraint would be an indirect result, however inevitable and whatever its extent; and such result would not necesarily determine the object of the contract, combination, or conspiracy."

(p. 16.) "It was in the light of well-settled principles that the act of July 2, 1890, was framed. Congress did not attempt thereby to assert the power to deal with monopoly directly as such; or to limit and restrict the rights of corporations created by the States or citizens of the States in the acquisition, control, or disposition of property; or to regulate or prescribe the price or prices at which such property or the products thereof should be sold; or to make criminal the acts of persons in the acquisition and control of property which the States of their residence or creation sanctioned or permitted."

In U. S. v. Freight Ass'n., 166 U. S. 291, as well as in Joint Traffic Ass'n. v. United States, 171 U. S., 505, the contracts challenged were executory agreements, made between railway companies to regulate their competitive interstate commerce, and in terms restrained—indeed, took away—the independent rate-making power of each company.

Each contract was therefore in its terms and in the making of it a direct restraint of interstate commerce, since it operated by its own force, as soon as made, to restrain or destroy the freedom of each party to it in carrying on such commerce.

And the Court holds each contract unlawful because in terms, and by its direct, immediate and necessary effect it imposes such restraint, and holds also that if such restraint were not the direct effect of the contract, the contract would be lawful.

In the first case (166 U. S. 291), the Court says, by Mr. Justice Peckham:

> (p. 313). "An act which prohibits the making of every contract, etc., in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States, would seem to cover by such language a contract between competing railroads, and relating to traffic rates for the transportation of articles of commerce between the states, provided such contract by its direct effect produces a restraint of trade or commerce.
> (p. 341-2). "While in force, and assuming it to be lived up to, there can be no doubt that its direct, immediate and necessary effect is to put a restraint upon trade or commerce as described in the act.

It will be observed that the Court recognizes that even a contract between competing railway companies, relating to rates for interstate commerce, may be of such a nature as to restrain such commerce only indirectly, and so be valid.

In Joint Traffic Ass'n. v. United States, 171 U. S., 505, the Court, by the same Justice, after stating the terms and effect of the agreement in question, says:

> (p. 568). "In Hopkins v. U. S. (171 U. S. 578), decided at this term, we say (p. 592) that the statute applies only to those contracts whose direct and immediate effect is a restraint upon interstate commerce, and that to treat the act as condemning all agreements under which, as a result, the cost of conducting an interstate commercial business may be increased, would enlarge the application of the act far beyond the fair meaning of the language used. The effect upon interstate commerce must not be indirect or incidental only.
> "We also repeat what is said in the case above cited, (171 U. S. 600) that, 'The act of Congress must have a reasonable construction or else there would scarcely be an agreement or contract among business men that could not be said to have, indirectly or remotely, some bearing upon interstate commerce and possibly to restrain it."

Each of the cases of Hopkins v. United States, 171 U. S. 578, and Anderson v. United States, Id. 604, was the case of a live-stock exchange in Kansas City, in each of which the Exchange, though it did no trading itself, imposed various restraints upon the commerce of its members—such as a prohibition to employ agents to solicit consignments, except at a stipulated salary, or to send prepaid telegrams giving information as to the market. In the first case the members did an exclusively commission business, in the second they traded on their own account. In both cases the cattle dealt in came largely from other states.

In the first case the court says, by the same Justice:

> (p. 587). "We come therefore to the inquiry as to the nature of the business or occupation that the defendants are engaged in. Is it interstate commerce in the sense of that word as it has been used and understood in the decisions of this court? Or is it a business which is an aid or facility to commerce, and which, if it affect interstate commerce at all does so only in an indirect and incidental manner?"
>
> (p. 591). "Even all agreements among buyers of cattle from other states are not necessarily a violation of the act, although such agreements may undoubtedly affect that commerce."
> (p. 592). (Passages quoted in Joint-Traffic Case).

(p. 594). After instancing combinations affecting transportation—among others one of engineers, firemen and trainmen not to work for less than specified wages, and asking would any of these "be illegal because the cost of transporting interstate freight would be thereby enhanced?" the Court says:

> "In our opinion these queries should be answered in the negative. The indirect effect of the agreements might be to enhance the cost of marketing the cattle, but the agreements themselves would not necessarily for that reason be in restraint of interstate trade or commerce."
>
> (p. 599). "An agreement among business men not to send telegrams in regard to their business in certain contingencies, when the agreement is entered into only for the purpose of regulating the business of the individuals, is not a direct attempt to affect the business of the telegraph companies, and has no direct effect thereon."

(p. 600). (Passage quoted in Joint Traffic Case, supra).

The decision in the Anderson Case is in strict accord with that in the Hopkins Case.

Addyston Pipe Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, was the case of a combination of manufacturers, each doing business in several states in competition with the others. The agreement by its terms took away from each party to it the right to compete for business except in territory and at rates regulated by the agreement.

In holding the combination a violation of the Anti-trust law, the court, again by the same Justice, says:

(p. 229). "We think * * that the power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce comprises the right to enact a law prohibiting the citizens from entering into those private contracts which directly and substantially, and not merely indirectly, remotely, incidentally and collaterally, regulate to a greater or less degree commerce among the States."

"While unfriendly or discriminating legislation of the several States may have been the chief cause for granting to Congress the sole power to regulate commerce, yet we fail to find in the language of the grant any such limitation of that power as would exclude Congress from legislating on the subject and prohibiting those private contracts which would directly and substantially and not as a mere incident, regulate interstate commerce."

(p. 234). "If the necessary, direct and im- mediate effect of the contract be to violate an act of Congress and also to restrain and regulate interstate commerce, it is manifestly immaterial whether the design to so regulate was or was not in existence when the contract was entered into. In such case the design does not constitute the material thing. The fact of a direct and substantial regulation is the important part of the contract, and, that regulation existing, it is unimportant that it was not designed. Where the contract affects interstate commerce only incidentally and not directly, the fact that it was not designed or intended to affect such commerce is simply an additional reason for holding the contract valid and not touched by the act of Congress. Otherwise the design prompting the execution of a contract pertaining to and directly affecting, and more or less regulating, interstate commerce is of no importance.

(p. 234). "We conclude that the plain language of the grant to Congress of power to regulate commerce among the several States includes power to legislate upon the subject of those contracts in respect to interstate or foreign commerce which directly affect and regulate that commerce. * * *

"We are thus brought to the question whether the contract or combination proved in this case is one which is either a direct restraint or a regulation of commerce among the several States or with foreign nations contrary to the act of Congress."

And the court holds, upon a review of the facts, that such was the character of the combination, adding that, in determining the effect of a combination,

(p. 245). "All the facts and circumstances are, however, to be considered in order to determine the fundamental question—whether the necessary effect of the combination is to restrain interstate commerce."

II.

In none of the foregoing cases has the Court defined the words "direct" and "directly"—probably because their meaning is so plain, as will appear from the following:

What is a combination in direct restraint of commerce?

For answer we repeat what is said supra, p. 133, in commenting on the Act:

> "To constitute a combination in direct restraint of interstate commerce, the parties must combine to do acts which, if performed, will of themselves restrain such commerce, and will directly restrain it—that is, acts which operate directly on such commerce.
> "If the acts which the parties combine to do fall short of this, if they are not such as operate directly on the commerce, and by such operation directly restrain it, then the combination is not within the Act."

And when the acts to be done operate in the first instance and directly on something other than commerce, (as on the company's property,) though the effect of such operation be so transmitted as to reach commerce, such acts affect commerce only indirectly.

Thus the contracts in the Freight Association Case, the Joint Traffic Case and the Addyston Pipe Case acted directly on commerce—restrained the liberty of each party to them by the mere making of them. A probable result of the contracts would be a raising of rates or prices.

But a combination of railway engineers, firemen and trainmen to get better wages, though it accomplish the purposes of its formation in raising wages, does not operate directly and of its own force on the commerce of the railroad, by raising rates or otherwise. True, rates may be and very likely will be raised as a consequence of a rise in wages, just as they might be in consequence of a rise in fuel and supplies, the result of a combination among dealers. But in either case, the combination does not strike directly at the rates—does not reach the rates. Between the end of the work of the combination and the raising of rates must come the independent action of the directors of the company before rates can be affected. Hence such a combination of wage-earners is not within the Anti-trust Act. Hopkins v. United States, 171 U. S. 578, 594.

Though the increased cost of labor and supplies consequent on and caused by the combinations be regarded as a cause of the increase in rates, it is not the proximate cause. And it may not be wholly inaccurate to say that a contract or conspiracy is in direct restraint of commerce only when the doing of the acts which the parties contract or conspire to do will be the proximate cause of a restraint of commerce.

The distinction between direct and indirect regulations of commerce becomes important in those cases where the power of Congress to regulate directly is exclusive, and the question is on a state statute charged with encroaching on that power. And the cases hold that

A state may not tax railway earnings from transportation as such, for that is taxing the commerce and is a direct regulation of it.

Fargo v. Michigan, 121 U. S. 230.

Phila. Steamship Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 326, 338.

But it may tax the same money received from transportation (provided it is taxed as money and not as earnings) or any property that may have been bought with it, and, in fact, all the railway company's property in the state, whether used in trnsportation or not.

In the two cases, should the receipts from transportation be on hand, either in cash or in property bought, when the tax is levied, the effect on the company would be the same—so much money would be taken from its treasury by taxation of moneys that had been earned by transportation.

But the difference is that in one case the tax, being laid on the commerce, is a direct regulation of it. In the other case the tax is laid primarily on property, and if it operates at all on commerce to regulate it, does so indirectly.

And though a state may not tax earnings from interstate traffic, it may tax the tolls received by a local railroad company for the use of part of its road by another company engaged in interstate commerce; for this is a tax on property and not on commerce. Any increase of rates by the carrying company consequent on a raising of the tolls because of the tax is "too remote and indirect" to make the act a regulation of commerce.

Erie R. R. v. Pennsylvania, 158 U. S. 431.

This is the same distinction between property and commerce on which we have all along insisted.

A state may tax the franchise of a foreign corporation upon a valuation measured by gross receipts from interstate and foreign as well as domestic commerce. This is not a direct regulation; the tax is not laid on the commerce itself.

Maine v. Grand Trunk Ry. Co., 142 U. S. 217.

So a law imposing a privilege tax of $50 on every sleeping car running over the railroads of the state is void as to cars used in interstate transportation, for it is a direct regulation of commerce.

Pickard v. Pullman Southern Car Co., 117 U. S. 34.

But the state might tax the same cars, not (as in the Pickard Case) because used in commerce, but because within the state—as property in the state; and the tax may take the form of a tax on the company's capital. Here the tax is laid directly on the property of the company—its cars—and not on the use of the cars in interstate commerce, and if it regulates such commerce at all, does so indirectly.

Pullman's Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 25.

And so with the taxation of other property.

A state may not tax United States bonds as such. It may not tax an individual or corporation on the value of the bonds held by him, for this would be to tax the bonds directly. But shares in a national bank are taxable by a state at their full value like other property, no matter how much of the bank's capital is invested in United States bonds. Such tax does not fall directly on the bonds. Van Allen v. Assessors, 3 Wall .573, where the majority of the court held that the tax did not fall on the bonds at all, the minority that it did, though indirectly.

In the Circuit Court, it was argued for the Government:

1. "Direct means in a straight line. It don't mean to touch or come in actual contact with. It means legislation which is in the direct or straight line of commerce."

But direct legislation on commerce is something quite different from this. And as to the "straight line," a cannon-ball shot at a target and striking and smashing it, strikes it directly and not indirectly, whatever its trajectory.

2. The action of shareholders in choosing directors is "directly related to commerce."

3. If Mr. Morgan bought the railways, and thus gained power to suppress competition, "such a purchase would have a direct relation to commerce."

4. But no one can buy a railway. The stock only can be bought. Only by buying the stock of the companies could he get the power of suppressing competition, and if he bought the stock he would have the same power as if he purchased the railways, and hence his power "relates just as directly to commerce" as if he bought and took actual possession of the roads and rolling stock.

These positions have already been fully answered under our fourth point.

III.

(1). In all these declarations of the limitations of the Act and of the power of Congress, the court has merely repeated what has always been its settled doctrine.

Matters which affect interstate or foreign commerce, whether by way of regulation or otherwise, (excluding those of merely local concern) fall naturally into two classes—those whose effect is direct and immediate, and those whose effect is indirect and mediate or remote.

Those whose effect is direct and immediate are within the regulative power of Congress. Those whose effects are not direct and immediate are without the limits of that power. Their regulation is for the States; and whether the States regulate them or not, whether the States permit, proscribe or ignore them, in no way affects the impotence of Congress to regulate them. And the power of Congress under the Commerce Clause is confined to direct regulation.

The reason of this restriction on the power of Congress is this: If Congress could indirectly regulate interstate commerce, there would be no limit to the distance it might go from direct regulation; and as there is hardly any transaction of any magnitude, hardly any state legislation (—even the laws and their machinery for protection of property, authorizing and regulating the business of insurance, providing judicial remedies upon contracts, including contracts involving interstate trade, and countless others—) that does not in an indirect or remote way affect interstate commerce, pretty nearly the whole internal government of the States would be displaced by or made subordinate to Congressional regulations. As held in Hooper v. California, 155 U. S. 648, 655 per White, J.:

> "If the power to regulate interstate commerce applied to all the incidents to which said commerce might give rise, and to all contracts which might be made in the course of its transaction, that power would embrace the entire sphere of mercantile activity in any way connected with trade between the states, and would exclude state control over many contracts purely domestic in their nature."
> (Quoted with approval by the Chief Justice in Williams v. Fears, 179 U. S., 270, 278, which was a case of a tax on agents employed in hiring laborers to be employed beyond the limits of the State).

(2). The grant of power to Congress is "to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes."

The accepted definition of interstate commerce, early made and often repeated, is thus stated in Addyston Pipe Co. v. United States, 175 U. S., 211, 241:

> "Interstate commerce consists of intercourse and traffic between the states or inhabitants of different states, and includes not only the transportation of persons and property and the navigation of public waters for that purpose, but the purchase, sale and exchange of commodities." Addyston Pipe Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 241.

As incidental to the power to regulate commerce, Congress may pass all laws necessary or proper to carry that power to effect, and within wide limits Congress is the judge of such necessity or propriety.

In the exercise of this incidental power, Congress may legislate and has legislated by way of regulating the instruments and subjects of such commerce, and the persons engaged in it.

But the incidental power of Congress to legislate on such subjects, instruments and persons, does not make them or any of them interstate commerce, does not bring any of them within the definition above quoted or within the term "commerce among the several states" as used in the Anti-trust act.

(3). The acts which are charged to restrain and monopolize interstate commerce or to directly, immediately and necessarily effect that result so that a combination to do them would be a combination in restraint of commerce, are (1) the formation of a corporation under the laws of New Jersey, for the purpose of investing in corporate shares and securities, a purpose sanctioned by its laws—though it would in no wise affect the character of the defendants' acts as violating or not violating the Anti-trust law, should it appear that those acts were prohibited alike by New Jersey, Wisconsin and Minnesota. (2) The acquisition by that company, whether by purchase for cash or in exchange for its own shares, or by both means, of a majority of the shares of each of the two railway companies.

(4). Now the ownership of these railway shares cannot posibly be a direct restraint on commerce, nor can the combination found by the Circuit Court—a combination for the purpose of having the Securities Co. obtain the shares by purchase and exchange—be a combination in direct restraint of commerce. How can the mere ownership of shares, and nothing more done, directly restrain the commerce of the companies or affect it at all? Something further must be done by somebody before commerce can be directly restrained, and it must be done by the only persons who can act directly on the commerce—by the boards of directors.

And even if the Securities Co. a mere stockholder, though a majority stockholder, could of itself directly restrain the commerce of the companies, could do any act operating directly on the commerce, still it has done nothing of the kind. And the petition does not charge nor has the Court found that the conspirators ever meant or conspired to have the Securities Co. do anything more than buy the shares. It is not charged or found that they meant or conspired that the Securities Company should ever use its power as owner (if as owner it had any) to suppress competition or otherwise restrain commerce, directly or indirectly, whether by its own direct action, or by compelling the two boards of directors to engage in a criminal conspiracy.

It has been pointed out under our fourth point that between the Securities Co. and any act restraining or in anywise affecting the commerce of the two companies, must intervene the action of two independent boards of directors. We insisted there and insist now that this precludes any power of the Securities Co. to restrain the commerce of the companies either directly or indirectly. But surely it precludes any power of direct restraint. The acts restraining commerce which operate on the commerce itself to restrain it, and so directly restrain it, must be the acts of the two boards of directors, conspiring to commit a crime. We had thought (being instructed to that effect by this and other courts) that the board of directors of a corporation are quite different from agents and servants of the stockholders, seeing that agents and servants derive their office as well as every one of their powers from the principal or master, can act only in his name, and can be discharged by him at pleasure. But even in case of agents or servants, we never heard that the principal or master was conclusively presumed to have the power to compel them to commit crimes. And the decision of the Circuit Court, that the directors of corporations are little if anything more than puppets in the hands of the stockholders—at least when the commission of crimes is involved—is without support in principle or authority.

Of course, we concede, once for all that a conspiracy may contemplate the doing of acts by agents and servants of the conspirators, and that in this case had the conspiracy included the doing, by an agent or servant, of an act operating directly on commerce and directly restraining it, it would (if a conspiracy at all) be a conspiracy in restraint of commerce.

And so a conspiracy may well be taken to include not only the acts which the parties agree to do, but the necessary consequences of those acts, or the consequences that ensue without the intervention of any other independent cause. Thus if the conspiracy were to obstruct commerce by starting a huge rock in a high bank alongside the track as a train was approaching, the headlong descent of the loosened rock would be as much within the conspiracy as the act of loosening it.

But nothing of the kind is found here. After the last act to be done by the conspiracy (if as the court finds, the Securities Co. was a member of it) should have been completed by the making of the last stock purchase, no act could be done directly restraining the commerce of the companies except by persons not parties to the conspiracy nor subject to the control of the conspirators. Indeed, the Securities Co. itself was not subject to their control, the large majority of its stock (all above 140 millions) being held by the 1300 shareholders who were not conspirators, but who and their large holding, as well as the 600 existing Great Northern shareholders with their 30 millions of stock, are not taken into account by the Circuit Court. But it is these 1300 shareholders who have power to elect the board of directors of the Securities Co., and it is this board which has power to elect the boards of the two railway companies. And before it can be assumed that because of the conspiracy the Securities Co. will compel the railway boards to suppress competition, it might be well to inquire whether the 1300 shareholders who are not yet conspirators are going into any such conspiracy.

IV.

That the purchase and ownership of shares in railway companies are, even more than purchasers and sales of other property, matters not within the regulative power of Congress, is further shown by the following considerations:

Such property is of a somewhat peculiar nature. It is not an instrument of interstate commerce. It is neither visible nor tangible and cannot be transported from one State to another and so be the subject of interstate commerce. A share of stock is the interest of the holder in the company, and—

> "The interest of each stockholder consists in the right to a proportionate part of the profits whenever dividends are declared by the corporation during its existence under its charter, and to a like proportion of the property remaining upon the termination or dissolution of the corporation after payment of its debts. Gibbons v. Mahan, 136 U. S. 549, 557.

And it is property created by the State creating the corporation. The property of the company may be any natural or manufactured product of earth, air or sea, but that of the shareholder is always the same intangible "right," the same chose in action.

As incident to his stockholding, the holder has the right to vote for directors. This right, too, is created by the State.

The corporation being the creature of the State, the shares being property created by the State, the voting right annexed to them being created by the State, it necessarily follows that the power to determine who shall be original holders of shares in any corporation, and who may thereafter purchase and hold them, and the extent of the holding permissible to any individual or combination or corporation, and what voting power shall attach to the shares, and whether the individual or corporate holder of stock in one company may acquire any, and,if any, how many shares in a competing company,—the power to determine every one of those things belongs to the State which created the corporation and can belong no where else.

2. All this is denied by the Government in this case. Its contention is—must be—that Congress may not only regulate the interstate commerce of State corporations, (a power undisputed,) but may also regulate the holding of stock in all state corporations doing an interstate business. It would make the act read (so far as this case is concerned) thus:

> "The holding by an individual, partnership or any combination of individuals, of the majority of the shares in each of any two railway companies incorporated by any state or states, and competing with each other to any extent whatever for interstate business, is hereby declared to be unlawful, anything in any state statute authorizing such holding notwithstanding."

And Congress might go farther and provide who may hold shares in any railway company, (for there is hardly a railway in the country, however insignificant, but carries on some interstate commerce) how many shares any one person or association may hold, what voting power the holders may have, what shall be necessary to a transfer of shares inter vivos or by will, and to whom they shall go in case of intestacy. And it could incidentally regulate the management if not the creation of all stock-exchanges in which shares are dealt in.

And if the power to regulate directly the commerce of a company includes the regulation of its composition and internal constitution, Congress could certainly deal with stockholders and their shares in the manner just suggested.

But the commerce of a corporation is an utterly different thing from its composition, or its property or the property of its shareholders, and the power to regulate the one is entirely distinct from the power to regulate the others. And the whole case of the Government rests on a confusion of these two things—commerce on the one hand and composition and property on the other.

3. The claim of the Government in this case asserts for Congress the broadest power over the composition of state corporations, and asserts that Congress has exercised that power in the Anti-trust act by prohibiting an investment company, chartered by one state, from holding a majority of the shares of each of two railway companies engaged in interstate and local commerce, and created respectively by two other states.

Now, if this power exists in Congress, and has been exercised by the Anti-trust act, it is and has always been an exclusive power.

The Anti-trust act declares a uniform regulation throughout the United States. Any contract or combination that is within its scope is equally unlawful, equally criminal, whether made or formed in Minnesota or Massachusetts.

And it is perfectly well settled that where subjects for commercial regulation are of a nature to require or admit of one uniform system or plan of regulation, the power to regulate them is exclusive in Congress, and any attempted regulation by a State, whether to enlarge or to restrain, is simply ultra vires, for it is the usurpation of a power vested exclusively in Congress.

Wabash etc. Ry. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557, 574-5, per Miller, J.

Robbins v. Shelby Taxing District 120 U. S. 480, 492, per Bradley, J. and cases cited.

Phila. Steamship Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 326, 336, per Bradley, J.

Bowman v. Chicago, etc. Rd. Co., 125 U. S. 468, 480-1, per Matthews, J.

As the matters embraced in the Anti-trust act all admit of and require a uniform rule to which they are subjected by the act, they are all within the exclusive jurisdiction of Congress. Anything not within its exclusive jurisdiction is not within the act. If the act forbids such a holding of shares as that of the Securities Co., the three States which chartered these three companies could not authorize it.

The Government says in its petition that the Anti-trust act forbids such holding because effecting a "virtual" consolidation of the two railway companies and so a restraint of interstate commerce. If such is the effect of a mere "virtual" consolidation, an actual consolidation would be yet more obnoxious to the Anti-trust law, and must be as clearly within that law as is a "virtual" consolidation, and, like the "virtual" consolidation, a subject for Congress alone to regulate, and the Circuit Court so holds (II, 1708).

And if a State cannot authorize a consolidation of competing lines chartered by it and doing an interstate as well as local business, it cannot authorize the consolidation of connecting and non-competing lines. It is no answer to this to say that one would and the other would not restrain commerce. Both are or neither is a regulation of commerce. If it is a direct regulation (and unless it is, it is not with the power of Congress), then it is in the exclusive power of Congress, and the State is powerless to make it. If it is not a regulation of commerce at all (and this is its true character), or if it is an indirect regulation of interstate commerce, then it is within the power of the State and outside the power of Congress.

That such actual consolidations (and a fortiori mere "virtual" consolidation) are within the power of a state to authorize or forbid, has been expressly held by this Court. They do not, nor does the state law authorizing or forbidding them, directly affect interstate commerce. And the existence of such right in the State to legislate on the subject is conclusive against the Government's claim that such consolidations are within the Anti trust law because necessarily restrainining commerce, for that law is confined to those subjects only which Congress has exclusive power to regulate, and to those only which directly affect interstate commerce.

A "virtual" consolidation is no more within the law than an actual one.

And it is enough that the State has power to authorize or forbid consolidations of its corporations. Its jurisdiction and the want of any in Congress do not depend on its exercise of the jurisdiction in one way or another. So far as regards congressional power over any consolidation, the case is the same whether the state has authorized, forbidden or merely tolerated it.

4. A complete bar to the Government's attempted encroachment on the rights of the States and their citizens is found in Pearsall v. Great Northern Ry. Co., 161 U. S. 646, and Louisville & Nashville R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677.

In the former case a Great Northern shareholder brought suit to enjoin the carrying out of a contract between that company and the bondholders of the old Northern Pacific Railroad Co., by the terms of which, on the organization of the present Northern Pacific Co. (then about to tke place), one-half the capital stock of the Northern Pacific Co. was to go to the shareholders of the Great Northern Co. or to a trustee for their use.

The agreement was attacked as effecting a "virtual consolidation," because though in form the Northern Pacific shares were to go to the Great Northern shareholders, they were really to go to the Great Northern Co., which was to furnish all the consideration for them; and because it was in violation of the statutes of Minnesota of 1874 and 1881, forbidding two competing railway companies to consolidate and forbidding each of them to hold ny stock in the other.

On the other hand the company claimed that the unrestricted right to consolidate with any company which was given by its charter was not and could not be limited by the subsequent acts of 1874 and 1881.

The case showed that the lines of each company extended from St. Paul to Puget Sound, but it does not seem to have occurred to counsel on either side that the charter grant of a right to consolidate with a railway engaged in interstate commerce was beyond the power of the legislature, and that the general restriction of stock ownership and consolidations was also unconstitutional as applied to such railways. But the court must have had these points in mind, for they were made and ruled in the Louisville & Nashville Case, decided at the same time. The decision sustained the Minnesota legislation, on the ground that the stock was really to go to the Great Northern Co., and not to its shareholders, and, after stating this ground of decision, Mr. Justice Brown thus expressed the further decision of the Court as to the right of the shareholders to do what the company was prevented from doing by the Minnesota statute.

> "Doubtless these stockholders could lawfully acquire by individual purchases a majority, or even the whole, of the stock of the reorganized company, and thus possibly obtain its ultimate control; but the companies would still remain separate corporations with no interests, as such, in common."

The Court that made this decision could hardly have supposed that such a holding of stock would be a restraint of interstate commerce. They may not have had in mind the Anti-trust law, but a combination or conspiracy that is declared to be unlawful by that act was just as unlawful before and without it.

In Louisville & Nashville Rd. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677 (decided at the same time with the Pearsall Case), the State sought to enjoin the railway company from purchasing the property of a competing railway company at a judicial sale, contrary to the constitution of the State. Both railways were engaged in interstate commerce. In the first of the following paragraphs the right of the State to determine who shall and who shall not own stock in her corporations, is fully recognized. The rest of the quotation is a complete answer to the claim that Congress has any jurisdiction to regulate the stock-holding of a State corporation, or to authorize or prohibit the consolidation, actual or "virtual" of State railway companies, whether competitive or not, and whether engaged in interstate commerce or not.

The Court says (per Brown, J.):

(P. 693):

"It is true, as was observed in Pearsall v. The Great Northern, that the stockholders of the L. & N. Co. may individually become the purchasers of the Chesapeake Co. at a judicial sale, and may organize a new corporation but it would be still a corporation separate and distinct from that of the L. & N. Co. The inhibition of the Constitution is not against the sale to individuals, though they may chance to be stockholders in a competing line, but against the acquisition by a railway, in any form, of a parallel or competing line. If this could be evaded by going through the form of a judicial sale, the constitutional provision would be of no value. * * *

"But little need be said in answer to the final contention of the plaintiff in error, that the assumption of a right to forbid the consolidation of parallel and competing lines is an interference with the power of Congress over interstate commerce. * * * In the division of authority with respect to interstate railways Congress reserves to itself the superior right to control their commerce and forbid interference therewith; while to the states remains the power to create and regulate the instruments of such commerce, so far as necessary to the conservation of the public interests.

"If it be assumed that the states have no right to forbid the consolidation of competing lines, because the whole subject" (i. e. the whole subject of consolidations, whether to authorize or forbid), "is within the control of Congress, it would necessarily follow that Congress would have the power to authorize such consolidation in defiance of state legislation—a proposition which only needs to be stated to demonstrate its unsoundness." * * *

"While the constitutional power of the state in this particular has never been formally passed upon by this court, the power of state legislatures to impose this restriction upon the general authority to consolidate has been recognized in a number of cases."

This case is cited with approval in Louisville & Nashville Rd. v. Kentucky, 183 U. S. 503, 518.

This decision cannot be limited so as to uphold only such legislation concerning the consolidation of competing railroad companies or the purchase of stock in one by the other, as is prohibitory. The State may forbid such consolidations, etc., because it has the general power over all consolidations and stock purchases of railway companies of its own creation, to authorize or prohibit. And because it has this general power, it may, while authorizing one consolidation or one class of consolidations, forbid another or another class.

And such was the opinion of this Court in the case cited. The issue was, in its own language, whether "the whole subject is within the control of Congress"—that is, the whole subject of consolidations, what to authorize as well as what to forbid. And in the last sentence quoted the Court recognizes the power of the State to grant "general authority to consolidate," with or without restrictions, and, because of such general authority "to impose this restriction upon the general authority."

The Circuit Court takes no notice of this decision, but leaves no doubt tht it was fully aware that its own decision was a denial of the right of a state to authorize the consolidation of two of its own railway companies. After holding that the essence of the restraint of commerce was the suppression or restraint of competition, and that whatever combination (in corporate form or otherwise) effects this result is prohibited by the Anti-trust Act, it says (p. 1708):

> "Competition, we think, would not be more effectually restrained than it now is under and by force of the existing arrangement, if the two railroad companies were consolidated under a single charter."

The Court was perfectly aware of the far-reaching effect of its decision—that it denied to the states powers that had been exercised without question for two generations, and by the exercise of which the railway system of the country had reached its present form, and awarded to Congress powers over the acquisition and ownership of property within the states, and over the constitution and composition of corporations created by the states, which no one ever imagined it to possess before the bringing of this suit. And it is due to that court to acknowledge that in this momentous decision there is no paltering, no attempt to minimize its far-reaching effect; the Court certainly had the courage of its convictions.

5. The application of the rule so clearly stated in the case cited is this:

The interstate commerce of any corporation is exclusively subject to congressional regulation.

The composition and internal constitution of any corporation (whether engaged in interstate commerce or not) including all matters of its government and control, and all relating to the creation, acquisition, holding and transfer of its shares are subject to the exclusive regulation of the State, none of them being matters of interstate commerce.

If persons who have acquired a majority of the stock of each of two interstate railways conspire with the directors of either or both of the railway companies to restrain their interstate commerce, this will be a violation of the Anti-trust law and may be restrained by a proceeding like this.

But the mere acquisition and holding of a majority of the stock of two competing interstate railway companies by the same person or persons, individual or corporate, or any combination for that purpose, does not of itself restrain interstate commerce, or constitute a combination to restrain it, and does not render such persons subject to congressional regulation, or to proceedings under the Anti-trust act.

SEVENTH.

The very general language of the Anti-trust Act was not intended to include combinations to purchase railways or railway shares, competing or non competing, nor consolidations actual or "virtual" of railways or railway companies. Congress, when passing the Act, knew that the railway system of the country rested on such combinations authorized by State laws, some of them having existed many years. If Congress had meant to declare such consolidations and stock purchases of competing companies to be illegal, the securities issued by them void, and the State legislation unconstitutional, it would have said so in plain, specific and apt language.

The construction put on the Act by all branches of the Government and by everybody down to the commencement of this proceeding, has been in full accord with our position that the act has nothing to do with combinations to own railways or railway shares.

I.

1. From the infancy of railroads in this country,—before and since the passage of the Anti-trust act—the States have assumed and exercised the power of authorizing one railway company to purchase or lease a competing line, or to acquire a majority or all of the shares of a competing company, or to acquire all or the majority of the stock of two companies competing with each other though not with the purchaser, or to lease the competing lines of such companies, or to effect an out-and-out consolidation with the competing company.

And in the exercise of this power they have made no distinction between lines doing an interstate business and those (few, if any) purely local.

During all this period while questions had, from time to time arisen as to whether a particular consolidation, lease or purchase of railway or stock was authorized by the laws of a state, there never was any question as to the power of the State to authorize them. Nowhere in the law reports, the text-books, the writing upon railways and commerce, or the proceedings of the legislative bodies, State or Federal, is there to be found a suggestion or intimation that such leases, purchases, or consolidations were restraints (much less direct restraints) upon interstate commerce, or that the legislation authorizing them was ultra vires of the States and an encroachment on the exclusive power of Congress to regulate such commerce.

Now when Congress passed the Anti-trust act, it must be presumed that in so far as it intended to legislate in regard to railways and railway companies, it did so with full knowledge of the subject-matter of its legislation. Chesapeake & Ohio Tel. Co. v. Manning, 186 U. S. 238, 245. The railway interest was then as it has ever since been the most important of all those conducted by combined capital. Moreover the business of the companies is to perform for the sovereign a duty of the sovereign—to furnish highways for transportation—and to that end they are delegates of a prerogative of the sovereign. Congress knew, as the court must judicially know, the location and nature of that great highway the New York Central Railroad, and of other railways connecting the principal cities of the country, as well as it knew as those of the Mississippi River or any other natural highway.

Moreover, Congress had for some years been engaged in regulating the interstate commerce of all these roads, and its commission had reported to it some, at least, of these various instances of purchases, leases and consolidations of, and stock ownership in, competing companies.

3. While there can be no doubt that this court takes judicial notice of the formation of the great railway systems of the country by the processes mentioned and under State authority, and takes judical notice that such exercise of State authority was never questioned, and that all this was known to Congress when passing the Anti-trust law, we have produced for the information of the Court a mass of information on this subject extracted from the standard work on the subject of railways, a work at once contemporaneous and historical, (published as it is from year to year,) and of wide circulation and in general use by all persons interested in the history or present condition of the railway companies of the country and their lines, as the one recognized authority on the subject.

The proof of the character and wide circulation and accuracy and recognized authority of this series of books known as "Poor's Manual," is found in the testimony of Capt. Meany, (I, 876, 886-892) and is plenary.

In addition to Poor's Manual, we have also produced the reports of the Interstate Commerce Commission, made directly to Congress, in the year 1889 and subsequent years.

The extracts from Poor's Manual are Defendants' Exhibits 18 A to 18 E, inclusive, (II, 1013-1120).

Those from the Interstate Commerce Commission reports are Defendants' Exhibits 20 A—20 L, inclusive, (II, 1125-1615,) with an explanatory note by the Commission, Exhibit 20, (II, 1121).

These exhibits, when offered, were objected to, and an argument was had on the objections, to which we refer, without repeating it. (I, 876-886).

That all the matters for which these Exhibits are produced, are within the judicial knowledge of the Court, is we think beyond question. This was in effect admitted by the Solicitor General in the argument above refered to (I, 884, fol. 3509). And see Ohio Life & Trust Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. 416, 435, where the Court (by Taney, C. J.) says: "It is a matter of public history, which this court cannot refuse to notice, that almost every bill for the incorporation of banking companies, insurance and trust companies, railroad companies or other corporations, is drawn originally by the parties who are personally interested in obtaining the charter."

Railroad Co. v. Maryland, 21, Wall. 456, 469, where the court (per Bradley, J.) says of the Washington branch of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad: "That the road is one of the principal thoroughfares in the country for interstate travel is conceded, and indeed may be judicially assumed."

Brown v. Piper, 91 U. S. 37, 42, where the court (by Swayne, J.) quotes with approval the above passage from 16 How. 435, enumerates various classes of facts that need not be proved, among them those "of universal notoriety," and says: "Courts will take notice of whatever is generally known within their jurisdiction; and if the judge's memory is at fault he may refresh it by resorting to any means for that purpose which he may deem safe and proper."

Phillips v. Detroit, 111 U. S. 604, 606.

Lehigh Valley Rd. v. Pennsylvania, 145 U. S. 192, 201, where the question was on the validity of a state tax on receipts for transportation by rail between points in the State of Pennsylvania, a part of the railway over which the transportation was had being outside of the state. The court takes judicial notice that the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis Ry. Co. is a Tennessee corporation, but through freight and passengers carried by it from Nashville to Chattanooga pass over a few miles in Alabama and perhaps two in Georgia; and that the Erie Ry. Co. does not escape taxation in respect of its business between New York and Buffalo because some miles of its road are in Pennsylvania, while the New York Central is taxed on its business between the same places because its rails are wholly within the State of New York.

In Louisville & Nashville Rd. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677, 699, where the question was upon the validity, under a Kentucky statute, of the purchase of the railroad of one company by a competitor, the court takes notice of the "familiar instance of the three north and south railways through the State of Connecticut, one from Bridgeport to Pittsfield in Massachusetts, another from New Haven to Springfield, and another from Norwich to Worcester, and, of its own judicial knowledge, says: "These are strictly parallel lines, but only in a limited sense competing."

And these documents are offered not in proof of issuable facts, but to aid the Court in the construction of a statute. While it is not necessary to offer proof of matters of which the court takes judicial notice, there is no rule excluding it. And there is certainly no impropriety in furnishing the court, in a condensed statement admitted to be correct (I, 894, 917), what the court would have a right to seek in the many volumes from which the statement is made.

The Interstate Commerce reports, made to Congress, are of course primary evidence of the facts stated in them and that such facts were known to Congress. Poor's Manuals are also, as standard records and histories of the time, competent evidence of the matters stated in them, and certainly are the best evidence of their own contents and of the publication and repetition, year after year, of the statements we have extracted from them.

The Interstate Commerce Commission refused to furnish the documentary evidence in its possession which would have been primary evidence (I, 873-5, 984). And this refusal raises the presumption that such evidence, if produced, would have told in favor of the defendants, and removes any objection that might be made to Poor's Manual as not primary evidence.

4. The matters in Poor's Manual and the Interstate Commerce Commision Reports, are summarized in the following statement, which includes purchases, leases, etc., made since as well as those made before the passage of the Anti-trust act.

Boston & Maine Railroad Company.

The Eastern R. Co. of Mass., the Eastern R. Co. of N. H., and the Portland, Saco & Portsmouth R. Co. were respectively chartered by the States of Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Maine to build railroads in those states, connecting with each other and forming a continuous line of interstate railway from Boston to Portland. The whole line was completed in 1842, and the Eastern R. Co. of Mass. thereupon became the lessee of the roads of the other two companies. (II, 1014-5).

The Boston & Maine R. Co. was formed in 1842 by consolidation of three companies chartered by the same states to build from Boston to Portland. At an early date it built as far as South Berwick, Me., reaching Portland over the tracks of another company. In 1873, it completed its own line from Boston to Portland, adjacent to and parallel and competitive with that of the Eastern R. Co. (II, 1013).

On December 22, 1883, the Eastern R. Co. of Mass. leased to the Boston & Maine R. Co. all its property and franchises of every description, assigning its lease of its connecting roads (II, 1013).

Ever since that time the Boston & Maine Co. has operated as well for local as for interstate business, these two parallel and competing lines between Boston and Portland.

On May 9, 1890, the Boston & Maine and the Eastern of Mass. were consolidated, the stock of the Eastern being replaced by stock of the Boston & Maine (II, 1020-1), and on June 1, 1899, the Boston & Maine acquired in like manner all the shares of the Eastern of N. H., and, on January 1, 1900, all the shares of the Portland, Saco and Portsmouth, in exchange for its own shares created and issued for that purpose (II, 1024-5).

In 1887, the Boston & Maine Co. leased for 99 years the property and franchises of the Boston & Lowell R. Co., including its leased lines, among them the line of the Boston, Concord and Montreal Co. (since reorganized as the Concord & Montreal Co.), thus acquiring a line from Boston via Lowell and Concord to Groveton in New Hampshire, and connecting near that point with the line of the Maine Central R. Co. leading into Canada and connecting with lines to Quebec and Montreal (II, 1017-8). A majority of the stock of the Maine Central Co. was acquired by the Boston & Maine as early as 1890 (II, 1021) and has ever since been held by it.

In the same year, 1887, under its lease of the Boston & Lowell, the Boston & Maine Co. also acquired a lease for 99 years of the Connecticut & Passumpsic Rivers R. R. extending from White River via Wells River and St. Johnsbury to Newport, Vt., and also the Newport and Richmond R. R. extending from Newport to the Canada line and there connecting with railways reaching Montreal and also Quebec (II, 1018); and also a lease for 99 years of the Northern R. R. of N. H., extending from Concord on the line of the Boston, Concord & Montreal R. R. to a junction with the Conn. & Passumpsic Rivers R. R. at White River Junction (II, 1018), those three roads, thus forming a parallel and competing line with that by way of the Maine Central to Montreal and Quebec.

So that, at the date of the Anti-trust act, the Boston & Maine, by lease or stock ownership of competing lines, controlled all the rail lines from Boston ta Portland and all between Boston and Montreal and Quebec. The only other route was by steamer from Boston to Portland, and thence by the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada to Montreal and Quebec.

In 1889 the Boston, Concord & Montreal Co. was consolidated with the Concord R. Co., under the name of the Concord R. Co., and on June, 29, 1895, a new lease of its road from Nashua to Groveton Junction, for 91 years, was made to the Boston & Maine Co. (II, 1024).

New York, New Haven & Hartford R. Co.

The New York & New Haven R. Co. was chartered prior to 1850 to build and operate a railroad from New York to New Haven, Conn. It built from Williamsbridge on the New York and Harlem road, 14 miles from New York, to New Haven, 62 miles, securing a perpetual right over the Harlem road to New York. Its road was opened in 1849 (II, 1026-7).

In 1870 it leased for 99 years the Shore Line

Railway, extending from New Haven to New London (II, 1027-8).

In 1872 it consolidated with the New Haven & Hartford R. Co. owning a line from New Haven to Springfield, Mass., which had been opened in 1839, the new company being named the New York, New Haven & Hartford R. Co. (II, 1027).

In 1885 the Company had acquired the majority of the stock of the New Haven & Northampton R. Co. whose line, extending from New Haven to Northampton, Mass., had been operated since 1857, and was directly parallel to and in close proximity with the line from New Haven to Springfield (II, 1027, 1031). In 1887, it took a perpetual lease of that line (II, 1031).

In 1892 the company took a lease of the New York, Providence & Boston R. Co., whose line extended from New London, where it connected with the Shore Line, to Providence, where it connected with the Boston & Providence R. R. The lease was coupled with an agreement for an exchange of stock, which was carried out the same year, and it thus acquired all the shares of that company (II, 1031, 1034).

The New York, Providence & Boston R. Co. owned the majority of shares of the Providence & Stonington Steamboat line, operating steamboats between New York and Stonington, there connecting with the New York, Providence & Boston, and, with it and the Boston & Providence R. R., forming a through line between New York and Boston (II, 1033-4).

In 1893, the company leased the lines of the Old Colony R. Co., acquiring thereby that company's lease of the Boston & Providence Railroad, extending from Boston to Providence (II, 1036-7, 1038).

The company had thus acquired an all-rail line from New York to Boston.

The Old Colony Co. owned a majority of the shares of the Old Colony Steamboat Company (II, 1038), which, in connection with its rail line from Boston to Fall River, made the well-known Fall River Line between Boston & New York.

The company thus held an all-rail line from New York to Boston, and two of the three rail-and-water lines, viz, the Stonington and the Fall River Line.

Of the other lines between those cities, the all-rail line via Springfield was made up for more than half its length by the company's line from New York to Springfield, the rest being the Boston & Albany Railroad.

The only remaining lines between the two cities were those of the New England R. Co. consisting of an all-rail line and also a rail and water line (the Norwich Line, so-called) made up of the Norwich and New York Transportation Co., the Norwich and Worcester R. Co. (which owned all the stock of the steamboat company and was itself leased by the New England Co.), and the main line of the New England (II, 1041, 1043).

In 1898, the New England road (with its lease of the Norwich & Worcester and that company's stock ownership of the Norwich and New York Transportation Co.) was leased for 99 years to the New York, New Haven & Hartford Co., with an arangement for an exchange of stock, under date of July 1, 1898. By the end of that year the company had acquired, by such exchange, substantially all the stock of the New England Co. (II, 1043-4).

Thus the company, besides its rail line from New York to Boston via New London and Providence, and the greater part of the Springfield line, acquired also the only other rail line, and each of the three subsisting rail and water lines.

These acquisitions were made partly by lease and in part by stock ownership, and, in most cases, the leases were followed by large stock acquisitions, even to the surrender and merger of all the stock of the lessor.

The result of this is that one cannot go from New York to Boston by rail or water without going over one of several parallel and naturally and originally competing lines, but which are now operated by the New York, New Haven & Hartford R. Co. having been acquired in the manner above stated.

New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Co.

This company was formed by a consolidation of the New York, Central Railroad Company and the Hudson River Railroad Company, the former being itself a consoldidation fo a number of small companies (II. 1058, 1060).

Its line extends from New York City along the Hudson River to Albany, thence westward to Buffalo, connecting there and forming through lines with the principal roads to the west and southwest.

On November 24, 1885, it leased for 475 years from January 1, 1886, the West Shore Railroad, which had been opened for travel in 1884, and which extends from Weehawken, N. J., up the Hudson River to the Mohawk River, and thence alongside the New York Central to Buffalo to a like connection with railroads to the west and southwest, and with ferry connection between Weehawken and New York, by reason of its stock ownership and lease of the West Shore and Ontario Terminal Company (II, 1061-2).

Each railroad passes through Utica, Syracuse, Rochester and the other principal cities of central and western New York, and they are strictly parallel and competing lines for interstate business. At the time of taking the lease, the New York Central also acquired all the stock (being 10 million dollars) of the West Shore Co., and has ever since used that road for interstate business between New York and Weehawken and all points on its line and west or southwest or northwest of Buffalo (II, 1061-2, 1063, 1064, 1066).

On March 14, 1891, the New York Central Co. leased in perpetuity the lines of the Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg Railroad, which are parallel and competing lines with its own for local and interstate commerce (II, 1066-7).

The Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railroad Co. has for many years owned and operated a railway extending from Buffalo, N. Y. (where it connects with the lines of railroad leading from that city to New York, Boston and other eastern points), to Chicago (II, 1069).

In 1882, the New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railway Company (familiarly known as the "Nickel Plate") completed and put in operation a railway from Buffalo to Chicago, with like connections at each city as the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Co., and it was a strictly parallel and competitive railway with the road of that company (II, 1074-5). Later in the same year a majority of the stock of the Nickel Plate Co. was acquired by the Lake Shore (II, 1070, 1075). In 1887 the road was sold under foreclosure and was reorganized with a reduced capital of 30 millions, a majority of which has ever since been held by the Lake Shore Co. (II, 1073, 1074, 1075).

The Michigan Central Railroad Company completed its line from Detroit to Chicago in 1852, using the Illinois Central road for the last 14 miles into Chicago. In 1883, it assumed the operation of the Canada Southern Railway under a sort of partnership agrement (II, 1077), thus giving a through line from Buffalo to Chicago with eastern and western connections at both cities. These three roads, the Michigan Central and Lake Shore and the Nickel Plate constituted and were operated as competing roads for interstate business between Buffalo and Chicago and points east and west of those cities. In 1898, the New York Central & Hudson River Co. acquired about 45 millions of the 50 millions of capital stock of the Lake Shore (II, 1064, 1072) and about 15 millions of the 19 millions capital stock of the Michigan Central Co. (II, 1064, 1078). And these holdings have since been largely increased (II, 1064-5).

The result of these various acquisitions is that the New York Central Co. controls by stock ownership (and in case of the West Shore by lease also) two parallel and competing lines of railway between New York and Buffalo connecting there with three parallel and competing lines from Buffalo to Chicago of which it owns nearly all the stock—lines having perhaps the largest traffic of any in the United States.

Not long after its acquisition of the stocks of the Lake Shore and the Michigan Central, the New York Central Co. also acquired a majority of the capital stock of the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railway Company (known as the Big Four) and also of the Lake Erie & Western R. Co. The lines of these companies are shown in II, 1078, 1080, and it will be seen that they are parallel and competitive with each other and with the other lines controlled by the New York Central, as before stated.

Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

At an early date in the railroad history of the country, the State of New Jersey chartered the Camden & Amboy Railroad Company and the Delaware & Raritan Canal Company, the former of which built a road from Camden, N. J., opposite Philadelphia, with which it connected by ferry, to Perth Amboy, N. J., subsequently continued to Jersey City. This road was completed in 1838. In 1836, these companies, which had been in a measure united and were known as the United Companies, acquired a controlling interest in the Philadelphia & Trenton R. Co., the line of which last company, with that of the New Jersey Railroad & Transportation Company and those of the United Companies, formed another through line between Philadelphia and New York. In 1867 the United Companies and the Transportation Co. consolidated their interests by authority of a statute of the state printed infra, in the appendix.

In 1871, the Penn. R. Co. took a perpetual lease of these two parallel and competing lines of railway between New York and Philadelphia and has ever since operated them (II, 1083-4) 1087, 1089, 1090, 1092-3).

Since 1885, the Penn. R. Co. has owned substantially all the stock of the Philadelphia, Wilmington & Baltimore Railrorad Company, whose lines extend fom Philadelphia to Baltimore, and the Baltimore & Potomac R. Co., whose line extends from Baltimore to Washington (II, 1091-2). These two lines constitute, with the New Jersey leased lines before mentioned, a through line, and operated as such between New York and Washington.

The Penn. R. Co. also owns and operates a line from Harrisburg along the Susquehanna River to Williamsport, where it connects with the Philadelphia and Erie R. Co., connecting at Erie with the lines of shipping on the lakes and the lines of railroad running westward through Ohio and other states. It also controls the Erie & Pittsburgh Railroad Company with a line between these cities, which with the company's main line between Harrisburg and Pittsburg, constitutes a second parallel and competing line between Harrisburg and Erie, having at Erie the same lake and rail conections as the Phila. & Erie.

Prior to 1871, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company leased the roads of various companies and owned a majority of the stock in other railroad companies, all west of Pittsburg. In that year it organized a "holding and operating company," by the name of the Pennsylvania Company, under a charter obtained the year before, and transferred to the new company its interest in these leased lines and the shares owned by it in other companies. Among the lines leased by the Penn. R. Co. and the leases of which were transferred to the Pennsylvania Company, was the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railway, extending from Pittsburg, via Alliance, Mansfield and Fort Wayne, to Chicago, commonly known as the Fort Wayne Line. This road had been built and put in operation prior to 1869, and in that year was leased to the Penn. R. Co. for 99 years, with a provision for issuing to the lessee special stock to the amount of the cost of all betterments made by it. As a result of this provision the lessee has become the owner of 22 million dollars of such stock being a majority of the stock of the company (II, 1085-6, 1098, 1100).

At the time of the organization of the Pennsylvania Company, the Penn. R. Co. held a majority of the stock of the Pittsburg, Cincinnati & St. Louis Ry. Co., extending from Pittsburg to Columbus, Ohio, and also to Cincinnati and other points, and of the Chicago, St. Louis & Pittsburg R. Co., whose line extended from Columbus to Indianapolis, and also, via Bradford Junction, to Chicago (II, 1100, 1103).

The Pittsburgh-Chicago line thus constituted is a parallel and directly competing line with the Fort Wayne between Pittsburg and Chicago, and is known as the "Pan Handle Line." The two companies which united in its ownership, were consolidated in 1890 as the Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Ry. Co., the Pennsylvania Co. keeping the same "control through ownership of stock." (II, 1102, 1104).

The capital stock of the Pennsylvania Company was all issued to the Penn. R. Co. in consideration of the transfer to it of the leases and stockholdings of the latter company in roads of companies west of Pittsburg, and for no other consideration, and the whole of it has at all times been held by the Penn. R. Co. (II, 1087, 1901, 1097-8).

The Baltimore & Ohio R. Co. for many years owned and operated a very extensive system of railways competitive with that of the Penn. R. Co. It owned a line from Washington via Baltimore to Philadelphia (II, 1105-6), and in connection with the Philadelphia & Reading, operated the well known Blue Line between New York & Washington in direct competition with the Penn. R. Co. By means of this and its other lines, it operated a direct route between Philadelphia, New York, Washington and Chicago, and reached Pittsburg and most of the lake and river cities reached by the Pennsylvania Company. The Chesapeake & Ohio Ry. Co. owned and operated a line from Washington and from the seaboard at the mouth of the Chesapeake Bay, traversing the states of Virginia, West Virginia and Kentucky, reaching Louisville and Cincinnati, and forming a competing line with the Pennsylvania Company between these places, and also, by water transportation, a competing line to New York, especially for the carriage of bituminous coal. The lines of the Norfolk & Western Ry. traverse much of the same territory and were competing lines with the Chesapeake & Ohio. About the year 1899 or 1900, the Penn. R. Co. and the Pennsylvania Company acquired a very large holding of the shares of each of these companies (II, 1108-1112), which has since been increased to a majority.

The Reading Company.

The Reading Company is a holding Company. It was incorporated as the Excelsior Enterprise Company in 1871. Its name was changed to the National Company in 1873, and to the Reading Company in 1896. In the latter year it acquired all of the capital stock of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Co. and of the Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Co., and has ever since held them. The Reading Railroad Co., as is well known, is one of the principal coal carrying roads. A close competitor of it, and paralleling its lines at nearly all points, has been the Central Railroad of New Jersey, also a coal mining and coal carrying road. In 1901, the Reading Co. owned all the stock of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, and had acquired more than 53 per cent of the capital stock of the Central Railroad of New Jersey "and together with that company owns or controls about 63 per cent of all the unmined anthracite coal in the State of Pennsylvania." It would seem that, the Reading Company being a holding company pure and simple, we have here a case "on all fours" with that of the Securities Co., which, during the taking of testimony in this case, counsel for the Government were so anxious to have produced that they might prosecute it. (II, 1113, 1120).

5. The above statement includes one or more specimens of each of the various forms of transactions by which the operation of each of two competing interstate railways was placed under the same management, or where the stock ownership of two or more competing companies was placed in the same hands before and at the date of passage of the Anti-trust Act.

The Boston and Maine first leased the Eastern, and the lease was reported to Congress in the first report of the Interstate Commerce Commission, in 1889 (II, 1128). Before the following year the two companies had been consolidated by the greater absorbing the less, which went out of existence, so that in 1890 and following years the Eastern of Mass. makes no appearance in the Commission's reports (II, 1154).

The lease of the West Shore by the N. Y. Central was coupled with a transfer of the entire capital stock (10,000,000) of the former to the latter.

The Penn. R. R. Co.'s lease of the New Jersey railways was a lease of lines not competing with its own, but naturally competitive with each other, and which had for many years been in a measure consolidated under express legislative authority.

The Lake Shore Co.'s relation to its competitor, the Nickel Plate, was that of purchaser and owner of a majority of its stock.

Of the two competing lines from Pittsburg to Chicago—the Fort Wayne and the Panhandle—the Penn. R. Co. originally operated the first as lessee and held all or a majority of the stock of the other.

It transferred its holdings of stock and its lease, with other like property, to its creature the Pennsylvania Co., which it caused to be chartered for that purpose, and which paid for such transfers only by exchanging its own shares therefor (much like what is charged as showing bad faith when done by the Securities Co.), and all which shares—the entire capital stock of the Pennsylvania Co.—were thus obtained and have always been held by the Penn. R. Co.

As stated, all these transactions had necessarily been done under legislative authority. A railway company would have no power to do any of them without such authority. A few of the laws—or the material part of them—are printed as an appendix to this brief, to show that the States claimed and exercised the power to authorize such purchases, leases, consolidations, etc. And that such power and the lawfulness of the purchases, etc., authorized by it had never been questioned, was conceded by everybody, at the time the bill for the Anti-trust Act was presented to Congress.

6. We have attempted to show that even such intimate alliances as those of which then existed and were known to Congress, being matters of the composition of the companies or the ownership of the roads, whether in fee or for a long term of years, are not matters of interstate commerce, and do not regulate it—certainly do not directly regulate it, and that such was the prevailing—the universal—opinion in 1890. Is there any reason to suppose that Congress was of a different opinion, or, if it differed with the States on the question of power, that it had any objection to such purchases, leases, consolidations, etc., in themselves?

There is certainly no ground for either supposition. And if Congress shared the prevalent opinion, under which the States had legislated and railway systems had been built up, that these matters were matters to be regulated by the States and not by Congress, that such regulations did not directly regulate commerce, and such consolidations, leases and purchases, etc., did not directly affect (much less restrain) interstate commerce, then Congress considered that these matters were not within its jurisdiction, and certainly did not mean to include them in an act which embraces only direct restraints, and combinations in direct restraint, of commerce.

And Congress know that in aid of these railway and stock purchases and consolidations, stocks and other securities to the amount of tens—indeed, hundreds—of millions of dollars had been authorized by the States and had been issued, every one of which, if such purchases and consolidations were unlawful, was issued in aid of illegal transactions, for illegal considerations and purposes, and was utterly void.

And even if Congress failed to share the general opinion as to the seat of power to authorize such consolidations, stock purchases, leases, etc., of interstate railways, could it have meant by the general terms of the act to strike a ruinous blow at the railway systems of the country, and at the holders of their securities?

Had the bill for the act specified these various classes of consolidations, etc., declared them to be combinations in restraint of commerce and illegal, declared all the State laws authorizing them to be usurpations of the power of Congress, and contained also the existing 4th section requiring the Attorney General to proceed against them, can it be believed that Congress would have passed it? And had such a bill been passed, can there be any doubt of the panic that would have followed? Is it conceivable that Congress should have passed such an act to overturn past transactions? Would it not have limited its provisions to future cases?

But the language of the act has no such limit, and this is one of the many cogent reasons for confining it to executory and continuous agreements for carrying on trade or commerce. It includes all existing combinations in restraint of commerce. It does not purport to make them illegal, but declares them to be so. And there can be no question but that every combination declared illegal by the act, would have been equally so—no more, no less—before the act. And if not illegal before the act, it is not made illegal by the act. Combinations not directly restraining interstate commerce were not illegal before the act, and are not made so by the act. Combinations directly restraining that commerce are declared illegal by the act, but they were equally illegal before the act; and every one of the various consolidations is just as subject to a prosecution like the present as if it had been formed at any time since the passage of the Anti-trust law —as if it had been formed during the past six months.

That combinations in direct restraint of interstate commerce were illegal before the passage of the Anti-trust law, and whether authorized or not by State statutes, is pointed out by Justice Brewer in the Debs Case, 158 U. S. 564, 581, in a passage repeated with approval in Addyston Pipe Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 229.

II.

1. The foregoing argument drawn from the history and situation of the principal railway systems of the country before and at the time of the passage of the Anti-trust Act and known to Congress when passing it, is reinforced by the contemporaneous construction that has been placed upon the act by all branches of the Federal Government—including the department specially charged with its enforcement—by the State Governments, by the railway companies, and by the public at large.

The abstract of extracts from Poor's Manual shows that since the passage of the Act, the building up of great railway systems by the processes already described has been continued on a vaster scale.

The Boston & Maine Co. has enlarged its holdings in other companies and systems, until it controls by ownership of the stock of such companies, competing with it or with each other, not only the only two rail lines between Boston and Portland, but every line between either of those cities and Montreal or Quebec, save only the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada, running from Portland to the two last named cities.

The New York & New Haven operates by ownership and lease the Shore Line from New York to Boston; by lease and ownership of all the stock of the company, the competing New England road; by ownership, about two-thirds of the Springfield line. By its lease and ownership of the New England road, and ownership of the stock of the Norwich Steamboat Co., it operates the Norwich rail-and-water line between New York and Boston. Its absorption of the New York, Providence and Boston Co., and consequent ownership of all the stock of the Stonington line of steamers, enables it to and it does operate the Stonington rail-and-water line between New York and Boston. And it operates the celebrated Fall River rail-and-water line between the same cities by lease of the Old Colony railroad (in which company it has also a large stock interest) and by virtue of its ownership of a majority of the stock of the steamboat company.

Every one of these six lines is a naturally competing line with each of the others. If there is any other way of going between New York and Boston by rail or rail and water (except by way of Albany) it is not known to the writer.

The New York Central, while still holding its lease of the West Shore, and all the stock of that company, has leased perpetually the Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg road (a corporation doing a competing interstate business), and has acquired directly nearly all the stock of two (and indirectly a majority of the stock of a third) interstate competing lines, each extending and doing an immense business between Buffalo and Chicago, viz: the Michigan Central, the Lake Shore and the Nickel Plate.

It has also acquired a majority of the shares of two other interstate roads competing with the two last mentioned and with each other, viz: the "Big Four" and the Lake Erie and Western.

The Pennsylvania R. Co. has not been behind its great rival. It has acquired the stock control of the Baltimore and Ohio, the Chesapeake and Ohio and the Norfolk and Western Companies, and has unified competing interests to an extent surpassing anything done by any other company in that direction. And by its stock ownership of the Baltimore & Ohio, with its "Royal Blue" competitor of the Pennsylvania line between New York and Washington, and of the other lines, it has come to pass that no officer of the U. S. Government—no member of this Court—can go by rail to or from Washington except upon one of several lines, originally competing, but now either owned or leased by the Pennsylvania, or operated by a company in which the Pennsylvania owns a majority of the stock.

A reference to the extracts from Poor and the Interstate Commerce Reports will show other instances, but these are enough.

It would, however, be invidious to pass over two instances, one directly connected with this case, the other furnished us by the Government's evidence in this case.

In May, 1901, the Oregon Short Line purchased a majority of the stock of a competing railroad—the Northern Pacific—held it till November, 1901, when its majority was about departing from it, and then disposed of it. It was the acquisition of this stock —this "raid" on Northern Pacific—that brought on the panic of May 9, 1901.

By the testimony of Mr. Harriman, given before the Interstate Commerce Commission in January, 1901, in an investigation of "Consolidations and Combinations of Carriers * * * including the Community of Interest Plan," and which testimony was introduced in evidence by the Government in this suit (I, 598 et seq), it appears that the Union Pacific Ry. Co., besides owning all the stock of the Oregon Short Line, and, jointly with the Short Line, all the stock of the Oregon Railway and Navigation Co., owns also $75,000,000 of the stock of the Southern Pacific Co. (I, 608), and its voice usually controls the action of the latter's directors (I, 605). One man, Mr. Stubs, traffic manager of the Union Pacific, can make the rates on the Southern Pacific and the other lines (I, 650).

In effecting these and other like combinations hundreds of millions of corporate stocks and securities have been created and issued, and are now held by hundreds of thousands of persons in every walk of life. These holders bought them, sharing the general belief in the lawfulness of the transactions in which they were issued, and the validity of the State legislation by which they were authorized.

All these stocks and securities were, however, (like those issued in the combinations effected before the Anti-trust Act) illegal in their inception, and are utterly void, if the transactions in or in aid of which they were issued were combinations in direct restraint of interstate commerce, and so prohibited by the Anti-trust Act.

2. These various transactions were not done in a corner. They were had openly, one after another, during all the years that have followed the Anti-trust law. They were reported and commented upon in all the principal newspapers; appeared year after year in Poor's Manual, the history and terms of each transaction being repeated in each subsequent year; were included in the annual reports of the companies to the Interstate Commerce Commission, copies of which were requested of the Commission by the defendants and were by the Commission refused; were reported year after year in an abridged and condensed form by the Commission to Congress. They were known to every department of the Government.

The Oregon Short line purchase and the crash of May 9, 1901, which followed it, were as widely advertised and as well known as almost any event that has occurred in this country.

And their lawfulness was universally acquiesced in. The duty of restraining all violations of the Anti-trust act is laid by the act in express terms upon the Attorney General, but not one suit has been instituted in any of these cases. There can have been but one reason for this. The present incumbent of that office and his predecessors are not to be charged with neglect of sworn and plain duty in their abstention from prosecuting. They abstained, one and all, because in their judgment the act had no application; because, in their judgment, such combinations, whether formed before or after the act, were not combinations in direct restraint of interstate commerce, did not act directly upon it. Had the present Attorney General thought otherwise he could not have failed to prosecute in the Oregon Short Line Case. It is not to be imagined that even now, the Attorney General, if he considered such combinations to be infractions of the law, would shut his eyes to those doing business at the very capitol of the nation, at the city of his own residence, between the greatest cities of the country, everywhere east of the Mississippi River, should turn his back on them, and go half way across the continent in search of a violation of the act.

The judgment of the Attorney General and his predecessors, that none of the consolidations, purchases, leases, etc., that have been mentioned are within the act, is clearly right.

But if they are not within the act, the Securities Co. certainly is not. And if the act can be held to apply to the Securities Co., it applies far more directly to each and every of the companies that have been mentioned, and the Government's failure to prosecute them is without excuse.

3. The petition says (I, 8 a, par. VI):

> "By making the stockholders of each system jointly interested in both systems, and by practically pooling the earnings of both systems for the benefit of the former stockholders of each, and by vesting the selection of the directors and officers of each system in a common body, to-wit: the holding corporation, with not only the power, but the duty to pursue a policy which would promote the interests, not of one system at the expense of the other, but of both at the expense of the public, all inducements for competition between the two systems was to be removed, a virtual consolidation effected, and a monopoly of the interstate and foreign commerce formerly carried on by the two systems as independent competitors established."

Premising that the only stockholder of each system that is interested in both (except such holders of stock in each as have not come into the Securities Co.) is the Securities Co., we ask, what is there in this statement as to the Securities Co. and its shareholders, and the effect of the Securities Co. holding a majority of stock of both railway companies, which is not equally true of the New York and New Haven Co. and its stockholders, and the effect of its shareholding in other companies?

Or which is not true of the New York Central and its shareholders, and the effect of its holding directly nearly all the shares of the Lake Shore and of the Michigan Central, and, indirectly, nearly all the shares of the Nickel Plate?

Or which is not true of the Reading Co. and its shareholders, and the effect of its holding of all the stock of the Reading R. Co., and more than a majority of the stock of the Central R. Co. of New Jersey?

Or which is not true of the Penn. R. Co. and its purchases of shares in the Baltimore and Ohio, the Chesapeake and Ohio and Norfolk & Western, companies competing with it as well as with each other?

But the things alleged in this passage do not make a violation of the Anti-trust law when done by any of these companies. How do they violate it when done by the Securities Co.?

In paragraph VIII (I, 10 a), it is said that the Securities Co.:

> "Is now holding, as owner and proprietor, substantially all of the capital stock of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, and, as complainant believes and charges, a majority of the capital stock of the Great Northern Railway Company, but if not a majority, at least a controlling interest therein, and is voting the same, and is collecting the dividends thereon, and in all respects is acting as the owner thereof in the organization, management, and operation of said railway companies, and in the receipt and control of their earnings, and will continue to do so, unless restrained by the order of this court. By reason whereof, a virtual consolidation under one ownership and source of control of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway Systems has been effected, a combination or conspiracy in restraint of the trade or commerce among the several States, and with foreign nations formerly carried on by the defendant railway companies independently and in free competition one with the other has been formed and is in operation, and the defendants are thereby attempting to monopolize, and have monopolized, such interstate and foreign trade or commerce, to the great and irreparable damage of the people of the United States, in derogation of their common rights, and in violation of the act of Congress of July 2, 1890, entitled 'An act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies."

What is there in any of these things charged against the Securities Co. which is not equally true of the companies just mentioned in respect of their holdings of stock in companies theretofore competing?

But each and every of these things when done by either of the companies just mentioned are innocent of any violation of the Anti-trust Act. How then can it be that when done by the Securities Co., they are "in violation of the Act of Congress," etc., as charged in the foregoing passage?

In Paragraph XII (I, 13 a), it is said:

"If the Government fails to prevent the carrying out of the combination or conspiracy aforesaid, and the defendant, the Northern Securities Company, is permitted to receive and hold and act as owner of the stock of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern Railway Companies as aforesaid, not only will a virtual consolidation of two competing transcontinental lines, with the practical pooling of their earnings, be effected, and a monopoly of the interstate and foreign commerce formerly carried on by them as competitors be created, and all effective competition between such lines in the carrying of interstate and foreign traffic be destroyed, but thereafter, to all desiring to use it, an available method will be presented, whereby, through the corporate scheme or device aforesaid, the act of Congress of July 2, 1890, entitled "An act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies," > may be circumvented and set at naught, and all trans-continental lines, indeed, the entire railway systems of the country, may be absorbed, merged, and consolidated, thus placing the public at the absolute mercy of the holding corporation."

Aside from the expressed foreboding lest the Securities Co. absorb all the railways of the country, what is there in this passage which is not as true of each of the railway companies just mentioned as of the Securities Co., but which is wholly innocent in the case of those companies? Why are they any less innocent in the case of the Securities Co.?

As to the foreboding: What means has the Securities Co. of absorbing the entire railway system of the country which is not possessed by the New York Central, the Pennsylvania, or any powerful system? It may be said that these companies are not authorized by their charters to make unlimited purchases. Judging from what they have done and are doing, this would not seem to be true. But the whole matter of purchase and sale of railways and railway shares is in the hands of the states chartering the companies. If they deem it wise policy (and of this they and not Congress are sole judges), why may they not prohibit any person or company from hereafter acquiring shares in each of two competing companies, just as many of them forbid a railway company from holding stock in a competing company?

4. The Securities Co. is a mere shareholder in two competing lines. It directly controls the commerce of neither. The Pennsylvania Co. in its majority holding of Panhandle stock, controls that line as much as the Securities Co. can control the line of either defendant railway company. As lessee of the Fort Wayne it directly and absolutely controls that line, and it also holds a majority of its stock.

The Boston and Maine, by its own board of directors, directly and absolutely controlled the Eastern of Mass. and its leased lines until recently, when it absorbed them, issuing its stock in place of theirs (seemingly as reprehensible an act as the exchange made by the Securities Co.) and now directly operates them as its own.

The New York & New Haven seems to have a settled policy for leasing competing lines, and then absorbing them by replacing their shares by its own—notably in the case of the New England Co. Here, too, one board of directors directly operates several competing lines.

Under the New York Central's lease of the West Shore, its board of directors directly operates both roads.

Every one of these cases of absorption or lease of a competing line, with the result that a single board of directors directly operates both lines and makes rates for both, is far more obnoxious than the Securities Co. to the charges which it has pleased the Government to bring against that company. Yet in none of these cases is there any direct restraint of commerce, even if there is any restraint at all.

But if it is not a direct restraint of commerce or suppression of competition for one railway company to operate by its own board of directors both its own and a competing line, how can it directly restrain commerce for the Securities Co. to hold a majority of stock in two competing lines, neither of which it operates, and each of which is and must be operated by its own separate and independent board of directors?

5. It has been intimated that the fault of the Securities Co—a fault not shared by the companies that have been reviewed—is that it was formed for the purpose of taking over the shares of the two railway companies, and hence the Securities Co. is guilty while the Reading Co. and others are innocent. That if, instead of forming a new company, the promoters had got hold of an old charter as was done in the Reading case, and the company thus chartered had done just what the Reading Co., the N. Y. Central, and the Securities Co. have done, there would have been no cause for complaint.

And so, if instead of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern buying the Burlington shares, the Burlington had bought theirs, the combination would have been unobjectionable.

And that this difference explains the Attorney General's selection of the Securities Co. as a subject of prosecution to the exclusion of any of the other companies mentioned.

To all this there are several answers.

(1) The Act proscribes every combination in direct restraint of trade, and does not distinguish between combinations. Whether the holding of shares by one company in two others in itself restrains commerce in no way depends on the origin of the former company.

(2) It makes no distinction between corporations—none between hunting up an old charter to use as a means of restraining trade and forming a new one for that purpose.

(3) If it was a conspiracy in restraint of commerce for the promoters of the Securities Co. to form and carry out a plan to have the shares in the Great Northern and Northern Pacific purchased and held by the Securities Co., why was it not equally a conspiracy for the individuals composing the board of directors of the New York Central (or the whole body of stockholders, if they took action) to form and carry out a plan by which the shares in the Lake Shore, Nickel Plate and Michigan Central should be bought and held by the New York Central Co.?

Or for the promoters of the Reading Co. to combine to hunt up and acquire an old charter of a holding company, and have the shares of the Phila. & Reading R. Co. and the Central R. Co. of New Jersey, transferred to it?

What possible difference can it make in law whether in either case the purchasing company pays for the shares bought in its bonds (as was done by the New York Central) or in its own shares, as has been done over and over again by the Boston & Maine and the New York and New Haven and other companies?

6. Every difference between the Securities Co. and any of the railway companies mentioned is in favor of the Securities Co. And one great—in some respects the most important—difference remains to be mentioned. Those companies' lines are all in the East, in a fully-developed country. They combined to unite in one control an existing business. The Great Northern and Northern Pacific, fully as much as other far western lines, have had to create, and still have to create, the business by which they must live. They combined in the purchase of the Burlington, not to unite in one control an existing business, but to enlarge existing and create a far greater traffic. And their shareholders have combined to protect this enterprise. And yet the Government would have it that the Eastern combinations are wholly laudable, while this is wholly base and bodes ruin to the entire country.

EIGHTH.

Even though the Government were entitled to any injunction the decree goes far beyond what the Government was entitled to receive, or the Circuit Court authorized to grant.

The only authority for the Attorney General to bring this proceeding or for the Circuit Court to entertain it, or for the one to ask or the other to grant any decree whatever is found in the fourth section of the act (supra, p. 132), which clothes the Circuit Court with jurisdiction "to prevent and restrain violations of this act," and requires "proceedings in equity" to be brought under direction of the Attorney General, "to prevent and restrain such violations;" and "such proceedings may be by way of petition, setting forth the case, and praying that such violation shall be enjoined or otherwise prohibited."

The Circuit Court, in its decree, adjudges and decrees as follows:

1. The defendants entered into a combination or conspiracy in restraint of interstate commerce, denounced as illegal by the Anti-trust Act.

2. All the stock of either railway company claimed to be owned or held by the Securities Co. was acquired and is now held in virtue of such combination or conspiracy.

3. The Securities Co., its officers, etc., are enjoined,

(a) From acquiring or attempting to acquire any more of the railway shares.

(b) From voting any such shares.

(c) From controlling or attempting to control, etc., the corporate acts of either railway company by virtue of its stockholding.

4. The railway companies, their officers, etc., are enjoined—

(a) From permitting the stock held by the Securities Co. to be voted by it.

(b) From paying any dividends to the Securities Co. on account of such stock.

(c) From permitting the Securities Co., or its officers, etc., to exercise any control whatever over the corporate acts of either railway company.

In its petition (I, 14 a) the Government asks that the Securities Co. be required by mandatory injunction to recall and cancel all certificates of stock issued by it in purchase of or exchange for shares of the defendant railway companies, surrendering in return therefor the certificates of railway stock in exchange for which they were issued.

The Circuit Court was not authorized by anything in the Anti-trust law (its sole source of authority) to take away the property of the Securities Co. and give it to other people, or to compel the company to sell that property to, or exchange it with, other people. And if the Court had any such authority, the absence of the 1300 shareholders of the Securities Co. holding a majority of its shares for which the railway shares were to be exchanged, would be an insurmountable obstacle to the exercise of it.

The decree, however, whether that were its aim or not, succeeds in forcing the Securities Co. to do the very thing which it could not compel the company to do by mandatory injunction.

The Securities Co. is the absolute owner of the shares held by it. The decision itself says as much (II, 1705). But the decree divests it, if not of the naked ownership, yet of every use and every profit and every incident of ownership. It may not vote the stock, nor exercise any of the powers or rights of ownership, nor receive dividends, nor dispose of the shares except as permitted in the decree. There is no difference in law between stripping one's property of everything that gives it utility or value and depriving one of the property altogether. It is true there is a permission, if not an invitation, to the Securities Co. (an invitation of the royal kind, with all these injunctions in case of non-acceptance) to turn back its railway shares to their former owners in exchange for its own shares held by them—but not for cash; the Securities Co. may not sell the railway shares to others.

And all this under an authority to prevent and restrain violations of the act—i. e., to prevent and restrain combining and conspiracy to restrain commerce, and to prevent and restrain monopolizing commerce, or attempting or conspiring to monopolize it. The injunctions are against a single person, the Securities Co. The finding of fact in the decree does not state that the company is combining and conspiring or monopolizing, but only that at some time in the past it did enter into a combination or conspiracy and thereby got its shares. So far as appears there is no conspirator but the Securities Co., which can neither combine nor conspire with itself. The injunctions against exercising its ownership of the stock, by voting, etc., have no relation to any combining or conspiracy to restrain commerce. The company is not enjoined from conspiring or from carrying out any conspiracy, or even, by a narrower injunction, from using its shares in furtherance of a conspiracy or combination. It is enjoined from every use and benefit of its property, and is enjoined not as conspirator, but as owner. And see page 153, supra.

The injunction against receiving dividends (or, what is the same thing, against the railway companies to restrain payment of them) is even less justifiable. What possible restraint of commerce can be found in the payment by each of the two railway companies to its principal shareholder of the dividends on the latter's shares? How does the holding-up of these dividends (amounting in the aggregate to about $16,000,000 per year) relieve interstate commerce from restraint?

Of course, it is a most powerful reinforcement to the invitation to the Securities Co. and its shareholders to re-exchange their railway and investment shares; but the court can hardly be supposed to have intended to decree the injunction for any such purpose, as certainly it had no power to do so.

Other patent objections to the decree, among them that it turns over the control of the Northern Pacific Co. to directors chosen by the holders of two per cent of the stock (if so small a percentage could, under its charter and by-laws, take action at a corporate meeting), and of the Great Northern to a board chosen by the holders of 24 per cent need not be particularized.

The whole decree seems to go on the theory, already refuted, that whereas the individual defendants combined to form the Securities Co. and help it get a majority of the railway shares, and the Securities Co. was formed and got the shares, and so the work of the combination and the combination itself came to an end, yet, because (as the court says) the Securities Co., when born, was born into the combination as a member of it, and although it has survived that defunct combination, it is now a combination by itself, having the power to restrain commerce, and therefore to be deemed a restrainer of it, and to be stripped of everything but its corporate existence.

The decree appealed from should be reversed, and the cause remanded with directions to dismiss the petition and proceeding.

GEO. B. YOUNG,
Of Counsel for Northern Securities Co. and others, Appellants.

Laws, New Jersey, 1867, Chapter LXIX.

"An act to validate and confirm certain agreements between the Companies owning the railroad lines between New York and Philadelphia.

"Whereas, it is desirable that the Railroad lines between New York and Philadelphia, forming by their connection essentially one line, should be more closely united in interest and management, whereby great advantages would accrue to the public as well as to the stockholders; and whereas, the Delaware and Raritan Canal Company, and Camden and Amboy Railroad and Transportation Company, known as the joint companies, owners of one portion of said lines, and the New Jersey Railroad and Transportation Company owners of another portion thereof, have made or are about making an agreement for a consolidation of interests and an equality of dividends, therefore:

"1. Be it enacted, by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the said companies be and they are hereby authorized to make such agreement for consolidation of interests, as they may deem proper and expedient; and that any such agreement or agreements heretofore made or hereafter to be made for the purposes aforesaid, by and between the said companies or by and between them or any of them, and the Philadelphia and Trenton Railroad Company, be and the same are hereby validated, ratified and confirmed; * *

"2. And be it enacted. That when such agreement for consolidation is or shall be made, the said companies entering or having entered into the same shall be consolidated and united in interest according to the terms of such agreement or agreements, and shall be authorized to transact, manage and conduct the business, property and affairs of the said companies respectively as a joint concern, and by a joint board of directors, to be composed of the directors of the said several companies, a majority of which joint board shall form a quorum for the transaction of business; but the organization and election of directors of the several companies shall remain distinct, and the provisions of their respective charters, with all the restrictions and liabilities therein contained, except as necessarily modified by such consolidation, shall continue in force. * * *

"An Act in relation to the Leasing of Railroads.

"Be it enacted, etc., as follows:

"Section 1. The roads of two railroads shall be deemed to enter upon each other, connect or intersect within the meaning of section 170 of chapter 372 of the acts of the year 1874, if one of such roads enters upon, connects with, or intersects a road leased to the other railroad, or operated by it under a contract as authorized by said section. But the Eastern Railroad Company and the Boston and Maine Railroad may make with each other such contract or lease for the operation of their roads for such period of time as the directors of said companies may agree to, and as shall be approved by a majority in interest of the stockholders of each company at meetings called for that purpose; provided, that the facilities for travel and business on either of the roads of the said companies shall not be diminished; and provided further, that the income arising from such contract or lease shall be subject to the provisions of law in regard to the right of the state to purchase the said roads, or reduce their tolls in the same manner as that arising from the use of the roads.

"Section 2. No railroad corporation shall lease or contract for the operation of its road for a period of more than 99 years without the consent of the legislature; provided, that this act shall not apply to any corporation whose stockholders have already acted or voted upon a lease.

NORTHERN SECURITIES COMPANY AND OTHERS,

Defendants,

vs.

THE UNITED STATES.

BRIEF FOR APPELLANT NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY.

C. W. BUNN,
Of Counsel.

C. G. Burkhardt, Walker and Gordon Streets, N. Y.

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1903.

No. 277.

NORTHERN SECURITIES COMPANY AND OTHERS,

APPELLANTS,

vs.

THE UNITED STATES.

Brief for Appellant Northern Pacific Railway Company.

On July 2, 1890, Congress passed an act, section 1 of which says :

> "Every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several states, or with foreign nations, is hereby declared to be illegal."

Section 2 says :

> "Every person who shall monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, or combine or conspire with any other person or persons, to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce among the several states, or with foreign nations, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor."

In this suit the United States relying solely on said statute seeks to enjoin the Northern Securities Company from owning and voting the stocks of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern Railway Companies, which are corporations, one chartered by Wisconsin, one by Minnesota, engaged partly in interstate commerce. A portion of their interstate traffic is competitive. The United States asserts, that the statute makes it unlawful for one corporation to acquire and own the stocks of two competing interstate railways, or at least that such holding is unlawful by a corporation, the promoters of which organized it with the intent that it should acquire such stocks.

It is the purpose of this brief to meet the contention of the United States assuming that the facts found by the Circuit Court are all true. To other briefs is left discussion of the facts.

I.

The language of the statute is remarkable for its generality. It denounces every contract, combination and conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce among the States. Not every contract, combination or conspiracy is declared illegal, but only those in restraint of trade. The learned Attorney General cannot rest, therefore, on proof of combination or conspiracy, he must establish restraint of commerce. To do this he must prove that for one person or corporation to own the stocks of two competing carriers is per se a restraint of commerce.

The act does not define what is restraint of commerce. Notwithstanding, as the record shows, extensive railway consolidation and merger had been going on for years before 1890, and this had been reported to Congress by the Interstate Commerce Commission, and had been publicly discussed in the press and elsewhere; notwithstanding Congress and the people were perfectly familiar with all this, there cannot be found either in the debates of Congress or in the press of the country, or in any public discussion contemporaneous with the act the slightest mention of railway mergers, or consolidations, or the qualifications of stockholders in parallel lines as among the things intended to be regulated by the statute. Considering this, and that the act introduces no new definition of restraints of trade, and that it is purely a penal statute, it is at the outset rather startling to be told that its very general language makes criminal, and therefore unlawful, combinations to consolidate two interstate railways, or to gather together in one hand the control of their stocks.

II.

The statute must be interpreted so as to fall within the Constitutional powers of Congress. Construed as the Circuit Court read it, or as the learned Attorney General asks to have it read, the act seems to us far beyond the scope of those powers. It is nothing less than an overturning of all settled rules upon the subject to say that the power of Congress extends to determining in what corporations stock may be held by citizens of the States; or that it extends to the regulation of the consolidation and merger of railway companies chartered by the States.

To the States belongs the power to regulate, and restrict as far as they may think advisable, the rights of their citizens and their corporations to own property. To Congress belongs the power to regulate the use of such property in commerce between the States.

The power of Congress has never been more accurately or completely described, than by Chief Justice MARSHALL in Gibbons vs. Ogden, 9 Wheat., 1 (189–190):

> "Commerce, undoubtedly, is traffic, but it is something more—it is intercourse. It describes the commercial intercourse between nations, and parts of nations, in all its branches, and is regulated by prescribing rules for carrying on that intercourse."

This definition has been frequently repeated by the Court; The Passenger Cases, 7 How., 283, 394, 462; Henderson vs. Mayor, 92 U. S., 259, 270; Champion vs. Ames, 188 U. S., 321, 346.

Commerce consists of intercourse, and the power of Congress to regulate consists in "prescribing rules for carrying on that intercourse," By no straining of language, or perversion of thought, can the rules by which property in the States is to be bought, held or sold be said to be among the rules for carrying on intercourse among the States.

Congress may pass an interstate commerce law, it may fix rates, regulate traffic and the ways and vehicles of traffic, but unless the States are to be shorn of many of the most important powers they have heretofore exercised, and been universally understood to possess, Congress cannot regulate the mere owning of property within the States, or the intents, aims and purposes with which it is acquired.

All the power of Congress is conferred by Section 8, Article I., of the Constitution :

> "To regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes."

And by the Tenth amendment all power not thus granted is reserved to the States.

We concede the full, absolute and supreme character of the power of Congress to regulate commerce. Within its sphere that power acknowledges no limitations other than those prescribed in the Constitution. But the power of Congress is only to regulate, and is, to use another phrase of Chief Justice MARSHALL in Gibbons vs. Ogden (p. 196), the power "to prescribe the rule by which commerce is to be governed."

Congress has not the constitutional power, under the guise of regulating commerce, to prescribe the general rules by or under which either real estate, or personal property, stocks or bonds, may be bought, owned, sold, passed by descent, or willed within the States. Congress cannot regulate the manufacture of articles in a State, though they may be intended ultimately for shipment to another State. Much less can Congress say that I may not buy property within a State because I may intend to use it in a business carried on with the intent to monopolize or restrict interstate commerce. No more can Congress restrict the right of partnerships, or corporations organized by virtue of State laws to buy within the States, either real or personal property, including stocks and bonds.

Mr. Justice JACKSON, then Circuit Judge, said, In re Greene, 52 Fed., 104, 112 :

"But Congress certainly has not the power or authority under the commerce clause, or any other provision of the constitution, to limit and restrict the right of corporations created by the States, or the citizens of the States, in the acquisition, control and disposition of property. Neither can Congress regulate or prescribe the price or prices at which such property, or the products thereof, shall be sold by the owner or owners, whether corporations or individuals. It is equally clear that Congress has no jurisdiction over, and cannot make criminal, the aims, purposes and intentions of persons in the acquisition and control of property, which the states of their residence or creation sanction and permit. It is not material that such property, or the products thereof, may become the subject of trade or commerce among the several states or with foreign nations. Commerce among the states, within the exclusive regulating power of congress, 'consists of intercourse and traffic between their citizens, and includes the transportation of persons and property, as well as the purchase, sale, and exchange of commodities.' County of Mobile v. Kimball, 102 U. S., 691–702; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S.. 203."

The case of United States vs. E. C. Knight Company, 156 U. S., 1, involved the question whether the power of Congress over commerce and the Trust Law of 1890 extended to making unlawful a combination of corporations and individuals engaged in manufacturing and selling sugar. The Court held that the act did not extend to prohibit a combination of sugar refineries within a state accomplished by transfer of stock in corporations, although the intention might be to export the manufactured sugar, or some part thereof, to other states. The case settles that the act cannot be held to prohibit such a combination, whether of individuals or corporations, from owning the real estate or machinery, or the stocks and securities, necessary to form such a combination of factories. The Court said (p. 16) :

> "It was in the light of well-settled principles that the act of July 2, 1890, was framed. Congress did not attempt thereby to assert the power to deal with monopoly directly as such ; or to limit and restrict the rights of corporations created by the states or the citizens of the states in the acquisition, control or disposition of property ; or to regulate or prescribe the price or prices at which such property or the products thereof should be sold ; or to make criminal the acts of persons in the acquisition and control of property which the states of their residence or creation sanctioned or permitted. Aside from the provisions applicable where congress might exercise municipal power, what the law struck at was combinations, contracts and conspiracies to monopolize trade and commerce among the several states or with foreign nations ; but the contracts and acts of the defendants related exclusively to the acquisition of the Philadelphia refineries and the business of sugar refining in Pennsylvania, and bore no direct relation to commerce between the states or with foreign nations. The object was manifestly private gain in the manufacture of the commodity, but not through the control of interstate or foreign commerce. It is true that the bill alleged that the products of these refineries were sold and distributed among the several states, and that all the companies were engaged in trade or commerce with the several states and with foreign nations ; but this was no more than to say that trade and commerce served manufacture to fulfill its function. Sugar was refined for sale, and sales were probably made at Philadelphia for consumption, and undoubtedly for resale by the first purchasers throughout Pennsylvania and other states, and refined sugar was also forwarded by the companies to other states for sale. Nevertheless it does not follow that an attempt to monopolize, or the actual monopoly of, the manufacture was an attempt, whether executory or consummated, to monopolize commerce, even though, in order to dispose of the product, the instrumentality of commerce was necessarily invoked. There was nothing in the proofs to indicate any intention to put a restraint upon trade or commerce, and the fact, as we have seen, that trade or commerce might be indirectly affected was not enough to entitle complainants to a decree. The subject matter of the sale was shares of manufacturing stock, and the relief sought was the surrender of property which had already passed and the suppression of the alleged monopoly in manufacture by the restoration of the status quo before the transfers; yet the act of congress only authorized the circuit courts to proceed by way of preventing and restraining violations of the act in respect of contracts, combinations or conspiracies in restraint of interstate or international trade or commerce."

From the definitions of the Congressional power to regulate, stated in Gibbons vs. Ogden, and from the fact that we have a dual system of government—power not granted to the United States being reserved to the States—it follows, that the power of Congress extends only to those things that directly and immediately pertain to commerce, while the powers of the States cover a large field, including a multitude of things which indirectly, though importantly, operate upon commerce (Gibbons vs. Ogden, p. 203).

And every case in this Court arising under the statute in question has reaffirmed and insisted upon this line of demarkation between National power and State power.

In the joint traffic case (United States vs. Joint Traffic Association, 171 U. S., 505) the Court said:

> "As examples of the kinds of contracts which are rendered illegal by this construction of the act, the learned counsel suggest all organizations of mechanics engaged in the same business for the purpose of limiting the number of persons employed in the business, or of maintaining wages; the formation of a corporation to carry on any particular line of business by those already engaged therein; a contract of partnership or of employment between two persons previously engaged in the same line of business; the appointment by two producers of the same person to sell their goods on commission; the purchase by one wholesale merchant of the product of two producers; the lease or purchase by a farmer, manufacturer or merchant of an additional farm, manufactory or shop; the withdrawal from business of any farmer, merchant or manufacturer; a sale of the good-will of a business with an agreement not to destroy its value by engaging in similar business; and a covenant in a deed restricting the use of real estate. It is added that the effect of most business contracts or combinations is to restrain trade in some degree.
> "This makes quite a formidable list. It will be observed, however, that no contract of the nature above described is now before the court, and there is some embarrassment in assuming to decide herein just how far the act goes in the direction claimed. Nevertheless, we might say that the formation of corporations for business or manufacturing purposes has never, to our knowledge, been regarded in the nature of a contract in restraint of trade or commerce. The same may be said of the contract of partnership. It might also be difficult to show that the appointment by two or more producers of the same person to sell their goods on commission was a matter in any degree in restraint of trade.

"We are not aware that it has ever been claimed that a lease or purchase by a farmer, manufacturer or merchant of an additional farm, manufactory or shop, or the withdrawal from business of any farmer, merchant or manufacturer, restrained commerce or trade within any legal definition of that term; and the sale of a good-will of a business with an accompanying agreement not to engage in a similar business was instanced in the Trans-Missouri case as a contract not within the meaning of the act; and it was said that such a contract was collateral to the main contract of sale and was entered into for the purpose of enhancing the price at which the vendor sells his business. The instances cited by counsel have in our judgment little or no bearing upon the question under consideration. In Hopkins v. United States, decided at this term, post, 578, we say that the statute applies only to those contracts whose direct and immediate effect is a restraint upon interstate commerce, and that to treat the act as condemning all agreements under which, as a result, the cost of conducting an interstate commercial business may be increased, would enlarge the application of the act far beyond the fair meaning of the language used. The effect upon interstate commerce must not be indirect or incidental only. An agreement entered into for the purpose of promoting the legitimate business of an individual or corporation, with no purpose to thereby affect or restrain interstate commerce, and which does not directly restrain such commerce, is not, as we think, covered by the act, although the agreement may indirectly or remotely affect that commerce. We also repeat what is said in the case above cited, that 'the act of congress must have a reasonable construction, or else there would scarcely be an agreement or contract among business men that could not be said to have, indirectly or remotely, some bearing upon interstate commerce, and possibly to restrain it.' To suppose, as is assumed by counsel, that the effect of the decision in the Trans-Missouri case is to render illegal most business contracts or combinations, however indispensable and necessary they may be, because, as they assert, they all restrain trade in some remote and indirect degree, is to make a most violent assumption and one not called for or justified by the decision mentioned, or by any other decision of this court."

In the case of Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. vs. United States, 175 U. S., 211, the Court, on page 228, said that Congress has power to prohibit the performance of those contracts between individuals and corporations, the effect of which is "to directly, and not as a mere incident to other and innocent purposes, regulate to any substantial extent interstate commerce." And on page 229 the Court restricts private contracts subject to federal control under the Commerce Clause to those which "directly and substantially, and not merely indirectly, remotely, incidentally and collaterally, regulate to a greater or less degree commerce among the states." To the same effect are Hopkins vs. United States, 171 U. S., 592, and Anderson vs. United States, 171 U. S., 615.

The decisions of this Court are conclusive to the point that the interstate commerce power of Congress justifies only such regulations as act upon that commerce directly, and does not authorize regulations abridging the police powers of the States or the personal rights and privileges of individuals, if they affect that commerce only "indirectly, remotely, incidentally and collaterally."

It is submitted that the facts, even as found by the Court below, make a stronger case for the application of this principle than was presented in any of the previous litigations in this Court.

In addition to concert of action by several persons in the acquisition of a majority of the shares of two competing interstate railroads—before such acquisition can touch interstate commerce—various conditions must exist or must arise which may never exist or arise at all. Thus—the ordinary principles which govern human conduct being applied—

(a) There must exist or arise in the purchasers of such shares a motive to restrain commerce inspired by the conviction that their immediate pecuniary interests will be thus promoted.

(b) There must exist or arise in such purchasers a purpose to promote those special interests strong enough to overcome their sense of duty as law-abiding citizens, and to obscure their perception of their general interests as citizens.

(c) There must exist or arise an agreement between such purchasers—deemed binding in honor if not in law—by which each shall undertake that his stock shall be used so as to promote the unlawful purpose.

(d) Persons must be found for directors of the two competing interstate railroad companies who can be relied upon to restrain interstate commerce.

(e) Finally, the directors so chosen must actually do what is expected of them, and must violate the law—at the risk of the legal penalties involved—by using their power so as to restrain commerce.

It is plain, therefore, that concert of action in the acquisition of shares of two competing interstate railroads, so far from acting upon interstate commerce directly, is separated from such commerce by a variety of circumstances and conditions, the occurrence of any one of which is manifestly uncertain and contingent.

That the power of Congress over commerce does not extend to those things which operate indirectly on commerce may be variously illustrated.

That power does not include many things done locally within a State, or by its authority, notwithstanding they may have an influence and effect upon commerce, even to imposing burdens. For example, taxes levied on the property of an interstate carrier are valid, notwithstanding they render transportatien more expensive, and so restrict commerce. The same is true of inspection laws; health laws; laws regulating speed of trains and for the stopping of trains at towns or crossings; laws for the licensing of engineers; and other examples of the exercise of general police and governmental functions of the state. The Court said in Gibbons vs. Ogden (pp. 203-4) of such state laws that, while they had a considerable influence on commerce, a power to regulate commerce was not the source from which the right to pass them was derived.

The States make an infinite variety of regulations, all valid notwithstanding they have a bearing or effect upon interstate commerce. By either common law or statute law of the States, railway corporations and other carriers are subjected to all sorts of liabilities for the torts of their officers, agents and servants. Will the proposition be seriously advanced that Congress, under guise of regulating commerce, may enact that railways and other carriers shall not be liable for the torts of their officers or agents? Or suppose a State, by statute, abolishes railway crossings of highways and streets at grade; this would increase the expense of constructing the railways, and would therefore burden interstate commerce, but will it be contended that therefore Congress may overrule such State legislation and make grade crossings permissible?

It must be remembered that individuals and corporations engaged in commerce have other relations to the community. They are citizens of the States first, and as citizens owe certain duties to the States and to the people thereof, from the performance of which, the fact that they are engaged in interstate commerce, cannot absolve them, and for the violation of which their business cannot be an excuse. The busy merchant may find it a serious inconvenience to serve on juries, but no Court would excuse him from this duty because he was engaged in interstate commerce; nor would it be a defense to an indictment for swindling to set up that the goods were imported from another State; the owner of a warehouse may be compelled to put up a fire escape, although the building is used exclusively for interstate goods.

The States, as the protectors of the health, safety and general welfare of their citizens, may regulate the conduct of all persons and corporations within their borders, and the manner of their using their property so far as may be necessary, and such laws, unless they are regulations of commerce in disguise, are valid, although they affect interstate commerce. And being valid, we know of no power in Congress to declare them void, because the power of Congress is restricted to providing the rules by which intercourse between States and nations shall be carried on.

The distinction is nowhere better drawn than in Sherlock vs. Alling, 93 U. S., 99. The State of Indiana had enacted a law that whenever a person was killed, under such circumstances that an action could have been maintained had he lived, an action might be brought by his representatives. The death in question was by a steamboat collision on an interstate navigable river. It was urged that as this law created a liability which did not exist, either by common or maritime law, it imposed an unlawful burden on interstate commerce. But the Court, by Mr. Justice FIELD, said that in all those cases where State laws had been held void, because regulations of commerce, the legislation condemned operated directly upon commerce. The opinion continues:

> "In the present case no such operation can be ascribed to the statute of Indiana. That statute imposes no tax, prescribes no duty, and in no respect interferes with any regulations for the navigation and use of vessels. It only declares a general principle respecting the liability of all persons within the jurisdiction of the state for torts resulting in the death of parties injured. And in the application of the principle it makes no difference where the injury complained of occurred in the state, whether on land or on water.

General legislation of this kind, prescribing the liabilities or duties of citizens of a state, without distinction as to pursuit or calling, is not open to any valid objection because it may affect persons engaged in foreign or interstate commerce. Objection might with equal propriety be urged against legislation prescribing the form in which contracts shall be authenticated, or property descend or be distributed on the death of the owner, because applicable to the contracts or estates of persons engaged in such commerce. In conferring upon congress the regulation of commerce, it was never intended to cut the states off from legislating on all subjects relating to the health, life and safety of their citizens, though the legislation might indirectly affect the commerce of the country. Legislation, in a great variety of ways, may affec commerce and persons engaged in it withou constituting a regulation of it, within the meaning of the Constitut on."

"It is true that the commercial power conferr d by the Constitution is one without limitation. It authorizes legislation with respect to all the subjects of foreign and inter-State commerce, the persons engaged in it, and the instruments by which it is carried on. And legislation has largely dealt, so far as commerce by water is concerned, with the instruments of that commerce. It has embraced the whole subject of navigation, prescribed what shall constitute American vessels, and by whom they shall be navigated, how they shall be registered or enrolled and licensed; to what tonnage, hospital and other dues they shall be subjected; what rules they shall obey in passing each other, and what provisions their owners shall make for the health, safety and comfort of their crews. Since steam has been applied to the propulsion of vessels legislation has embraced an infinite variety of further details to guard against accident and consequent loss of life."

"The power to prescribe these and similar regulations necessarily involves the right to declare the liability which shall follow their infraction. Whatever, therefore, Congress determines, either as to a regulation or the liability for its infringement, is exclusive of State authority. But with reference to a great variety of matters touching the rights and liabilities of persons engaged in commerce, either as owners or navigators of vessels, the laws of Congress are silent, and the laws of the State govern. The rules for the acquisition of property by persons engaged in navigation, and for its transfer and descent, are, with some exceptions, those prescribed by the State to which the vessels belong; and it may be said, generally, that the legislation of a State, not directed against commerce or any of its regulations, but relating to the rights, duties, and liabilities of citizens, and only indirectly and remotely affecting the operations of commerce, is of obligatory force upon citizens within its territorial jurisdiction, whether on land or water, or engaged in commerce, foreign or inter-State, or in any other pursuit."

The same principle applies to State laws prescribing who may form corporations, and what property corporations may acquire and own, by whom and for what purposes joint associations may be formed, under what conditions real and personal property generally may be bought, held and disposed of. Although all such State laws may operate to a certain extent upon interstate commerce and restrain and burden it, yet none of them are regulations of commerce, or come within the power of Congress under the constitution. They have always been regarded as valid, notwithstanding they ultimately and indirectly operate upon interstate commerce, and notwithstanding a holding of property within a State may put it into the power of someone to monopolize, or restrict competition in interstate commerce.

If power is actually used to make unreasonable interstate rates, or to regulate the prices of goods sold into other States, or otherwise to actually restrict or burden interstate commerce, such use of power or property and such actual restraint on commerce are contrary to the Federal law; but a case is not brought within the jurisdiction of Congress over commerce, simply because a corporation or individual may have power or influence over interstate rates, or because it or he may exercise an influence to reduce competition in trade among States. The question in this case is not what may be obnoxious to the common law, or to any regulations States have imposed, or may impose, but concerns only what is prohibited by the Constitution of the United States and the law of Congress. In order to bring a case within the Constitution and the law of Congress, the thing sought to be restrained must be an actual and direct restraint of commerce.

The case of Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company vs. Kentucky, 161 U. S., 677, 701, seems to us controlling. It was argued in that case that the State of Kentucky had no right to forbid the consolidation of competing interstate railways, because that was a subject pertaining to commerce and therefore subject to the jurisdiction of Congress under its power to regulate commerce. But the Court said (p. 702–3):

> "It has never been supposed that the dominant power of Congress over interstate commerce took from the states the power of legislation with respect to the instruments of such commerce, so far as the legislation was within its ordinary police powers. Nearly all the railways in the country have been constructed under state authority, and it cannot be supposed that they intended to abandon their power over them as soon as they were finished. The power to construct them involves necessarily the power to impose such regulations upon their operation as a sound regard for the interests of the public may seem to render desirable. In the division of authority with respect to interstate railways congress reserves to itself the superior right to control their commerce and forbid interference therewith; while to the states remains the power to create and to regulate the instruments of such commerce, so far as necessary to the conservation of the public interests.

"If it be assumed that the states have no right to forbid the consolidation of competing lines, because the whole subject is within the control of congress, it would necessarily follow that congress would have the power to authorize such a consolidation in defiance of state legislation—a proposition which only needs to be stated to demonstrate its unsoundness."

The Court cites a number of decisions in which State statutes prohibiting or permitting consolidations had been enforced. They were obviously enforced erroneously, and the Louisville and Nashville Case, as well as the Pearsall Case, were erroneously decided if the things complained of fall within the power of Congress over commerce, for that power, if it exists, is exclusive of all State action.

If to regulate the consolidation of interstate railways chartered by the States and the qualifications of their stockholders belong to the Commerce power of Congress, that power is capable from the nature of the subject to uniform regulation only. In its very nature the subject would be one not susceptible of treatment by Congress in the way of diverse local regulation. It would be impossible for Congress to authorize a consolidation of the appellant's railways in Wisconsin and to forbid it in Minnesota. It would be impossible to allow a joint holding of stock as to that part of the lines in a particular State only. Therefore, if the subject belongs to the Commerce power, it could be dealt with only by uniform regulation.

It is only as to matters capable of local regulation, like pilotage (Cooley vs. Board of Port Wardens, 12 How., 299) lights to be displayed by ships in harbor (The James Gray vs. The John Fraser, 21 How., 184) and dams of rivers wholly within a State (Pound vs. Turck, 95 U. S., 459) that the States may make certain local commercial regulations until Congress has acted.

The rule first definitely formulated in Cooley vs. Board of Port Wardens, was thus stated by Mr. Justice CURTIS in that case:

> "Whatever subjects of this power are in their nature national, or admit only of one uniform system or plan of regulation, may justly be said to be of such a nature as to require exclusive legislation by Congress."

Mr. Justice BRADLEY thus stated the doctrine in Robbins vs. Shelby Taxing District, 120 U. S., 492:

> "The constitution of the United States having given to congress power to regulate commerce, not only with foreign nations, but among the several > states, that power is necessarily exclusive wherever the subjects are national in their character, or admit only of one uniform system or plan of regulation. * * * Another established doctrine of this court is, that where the power of congress to regulate is exclusive, the failure of congress to make express regulation indicates its will that the subject shall be left free from any restrictions or impositions, and any regulation of the subject by the states, except in matters of local concern only, as hereafter mentioned, is repugnant to such freedom."

The same rule was laid down in County of Mobile vs. Kimball, 102 U. S., 691; United States vs. E. C. Knight Company, 156 U. S., pp. 11, 12; Addyston Pipe & Steel Company vs. United States, 175 U. S., 230.

Therefore, if the decision of the Circuit Court is correct, all the State laws either forbidding or authorizing consolidations of interstate carriers are and always have been void. And this is as true in case of connecting and other non-competitive carriers as in case of competing carriers; every consolidation, every sale, every lease between interstate carriers, every holding of stock by one in another has been always illegal, though authorized by State laws, and whether accomplished before the passage of the act in question or since. There is no escape from this conclusion, if regulation of these matters forms part of the commercial power of Congress; for if the power of Congress covers the subject, it is, whether exercised or not, exclusive and prohibitive of State action.

III.

Except as it punishes contracts, combinations and conspiracies, the statute introduces no new rule of law. That is, whatever is a restraint of commerce now, was such before this statute. The act is new only in making the preliminary conspiracy a crime.

It was settled In re Debs, 158 U. S., 564, that the Constitution itself forbade all restraints of interstate commerce, whether by individuals or states. That was the very point of decision.

It was argued that the power of Congress was limited to preventing the states from imposing restraints on commerce, but the Court said (p. 581), by Mr. Justice BREWER:

> "If a state with its recognized powers of sovereignty is impotent to obstruct interstate commerce, can it be that any mere voluntary association of individuals within the limits of that state has a power which the state itself does not possess?"

The Court held that the power of the United States over interstate commerce was that of direct supervision, control and management, and was not limited to prevention of restraints imposed by state law; and that any restraint upon the free transaction of interstate commerce imposed by individuals, or associations, was as obnoxious to the control of commerce granted by the Constitution to Congress, as any state action could be. This doctrine was laid down without any reference to, or reliance upon, the Trust Act of 1890; see concluding paragraph of the opinion.

The doctrine was reaffirmed in the Addyston Pipe Case (p. 230) and followed logically from the principles laid down in Gibbons vs. Ogden.

It certainly cannot be disputed that any restraint of interstate commerce offends the power to regulate vested in Congress when accomplished by subtle and peaceful means as in the Addyston Pipe Case the same as when accomplished by threats and violence as in the Debs Case.

Therefore, if it be true that a consolidation of competing carriers to-day, or a common holding of their stock, is really a restraint of interstate commerce, it was equally so before the Anti-trust Act and from the beginning.

If a contract, arrangement or combination does restrain interstate trade, it is immaterial whether it has the sanction of State law or not. A State law would be contrary to the power vested in Congress. In the case at bar, or in any similar case, the transaction, if it in truth restrains commerce, could not be sustained though fully authorized by State law.

For a holding company to own the stock of competing interstate carriers is plainly no more prohibited by the act than for one interstate carrier to purchase, lease, or otherwise control the property of a parallel or competing carrier.

Railways have been bought, or leased, or controlled through stock ownership, by railway corporations owning parallel lines, the country over. So, the country over, have individuals, partnerships and corporations held stock in competing railway companies. These things have been done commonly, openly and notoriously during the past fifty years, both before and since the Act of 1890. Largely this has been done under the express sanction of State law; but whether so or not is immaterial. If these things are restraints on interstate commerce, they are and always have been invalid. We have pointed out that they were as invalid before the act as since, because contrary to the settled doctrine that, even in the absence of legislation by Congress, neither States nor individuals can restrain, or impose burdens upon interstate commerce.

No more serious or far-reaching question could be put, than whether such transactions are really the subject of State regulation, or whether they are restraints upon interstate commerce, and consequently within the exclusive power of Congress under the Constitution.

Parallel telegraph lines have been built and have been acquired by purchase, or otherwise controlled, so that to-day practically all the telegraphs of the country belong to two corporations. Have all such acquisitions of property been invalid because restraints upon interstate commerce?

If the owner of a steamboat, or of a stage line running between states, buys up, or leases, or acquires stock in, or consolidates with a competing steamboat or stage line, is that a restraint upon interstate commerce? If so, a State law cannot legalize it.

The same question may be put in innumerable forms. Is it a restraint of interstate commerce for a merchant or manufacturer, engaged in selling goods and shipping them to other States, to buy out or go into partnership with, another engaged in the same business? This Court said it was not in the case of the Joint Traffic Association.

If two or more individuals, owning stock in competing mercantile or carrying corporations engaged in interstate traffic, unite in a co-partnership, turning in their stock as partnership assets, is that a restraint of interstate commerce? And is such a partnership, though authorized by State law, void as contrary to Federal law?

If the same individuals, instead of forming a co-partnership, form a corporation sanctioned by State law, is their doing so, or the corporation buying stock of them, obnoxious to the law of Congress and is it a subject of Federal control?

Suppose I combine with my neighbor to buy a piece of real property; is that contrary to the Federal law because our intention is to manufacture, ship, or receive upon that property goods in the transaction of a business, which aims to monopolize, or restrain interstate commerce? Is the mere right in such cases to take title to the real estate a subject of Federal control, or of State control, and is not Federal control limited to prevention of the actual use of the property to restrain interstate commerce?

The acts stated in all the supposed cases may have a tendency to reduce competition in interstate commerce, or to facilitate and make more easy restraints upon that commerce, but the acts themselves are not commerce and their effect upon and connection with commerce is indirect and remote.

If the Act of 1890 and the power of Congress over commerce are to be pressed to the extent of making such transactions void, Congress is by one stroke invested with the regulation of a large portion of those affairs hitherto supposed to belong exclusively to the States. It would place in Congress the general right to regulate who may and who may not buy, hold and sell real estate and personal property, including stocks and other securities, within the several States; with the regulation of the law of partnership and of corporations, even although such partnerships and such corporations are not engaged in any kind of commerce.

IV.

If a thing restrains interstate commerce, it is immaterial with what innocent intent it may be done. On the other hand, if the thing complained of does not restrain interstate commerce, it is immaterial how evil may be the intent. As the Court said in United States vs. Freight Association, 166 U. S., 290, 341, the question is, does the agreement restrain trade or commerce in any way.

If an action be lawful, it is elementary that its purpose is immaterial; Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. vs. United States, 175 U. S., 211, p. 234, where the Court said:

> "If the necessary, direct and immediate effect of the contract be to violate an act of congress and also to restrain and regulate interstate commerce, it is manifestly immaterial whether the design to so regulate was or was not in existence when the contract was entered into. In such case the design does not constitute the material thing. The fact of a direct and substantial regulation is the important part of the contract, and that regulation existing, it is unimportant that it was not designed.
> "Where the contract affects interstate commerce only incidentally and not directly, the fact that it was not designed or intended to affect such commerce is simply an additional reason for holding the contract valid and not touched by the act of congress. Otherwise the design prompting the execution of a contract pertaining to and directly affecting, and more or less regulating, interstate commerce is of no importance."

The following decisions support this conclusion:

"Bad motives in doing an act which violates no legal right of another cannot make that act a ground of action" (Phelps vs. Nowlen, 72 N. Y., 39, 45).

"The exercise of a legal right cannot be affected by the motive which controls it" (Kiff vs. Youmans, 86 N. Y., 324, 329).

An act which is not in and of itself a fraud, is not made so by alleging that it was induced by a desire to deceive and defraud the plaintiff (Wood vs. Amory, 105 N. Y., 278, 281).

"The purpose of an act which in itself is perfectly lawful or, under all the circumstances, reasonable, is seldom, if ever, material" (Lough vs. Outerbridge, 143 N. Y., 271, 282).

"An act legal in itself, and violating no right, cannot be made actionable on account of the motive which superinduced it" (Adler vs. Fenton, 24 How., 407, 410).

It is not sufficient to charge an unlawful intent, or to aver that a combination or a course of business is in restraint of trade, or a monopoly of trade, in order to constitute a crime. Acts relied upon to make the offense must be stated (U. S. vs. Greenhut, 51 Fed., 205, 211; the same thing is held In re Greene, 52 Fed., 104, 111, 112).

"No action can be maintained against one on account of the exercise of a legal right, whatever the motive that dictated such exercise" (Randall vs. Hazleton, 12 Allen, 412, 418).

To the same effect are Brackett vs. Griswold, 112 N. Y., 454; U. S. vs. Isham, 17 Wall., 496; Dickerman vs. Northern Trust Co., 176 U. S., 181; Fahrney vs. Kelly, 102 Fed., 403; Mogul Steamship Co. vs. McGregor, App. Cas., 1892, pages 25, 41; Allen vs. Flood, L. R. App. Cas., 1898, p. 1.

Stress is laid upon the Securities Company being organized for the purpose and with the intent of acquiring the stock of the two railway companies. The authorities we have cited show that this intent, if conceded, is utterly immaterial. If the buying and voting the stock restrains interstate commerce, it is illegal. If it does not restrain interstate commerce, it is legal; and the conspiracy behind the formation of the company was a conspiracy to do a lawful thing; Bohn Mfg. Co. vs. Hollis, 54 Minn., 223, 234.

The intention to buy these stocks existing before the formation of the Securities Company, and the formation of the company for the purpose of buying these stocks do not make this case differ in the slightest from one, where a partnership or a corporation already organized primarily for other purposes should resolve on buying the same stocks. For, in the case of a partnership, or corporation primarily organized for other purposes, the conspiracy and combination to buy the stocks would have to exist before the stocks were bought. And such a combination to buy stock of competing railway companies is exactly as vicious and exactly as innocent, as a combination to form a corporation and have the corporation buy the same stock.

V.

The opinion of the Court below proceeds upon the proposition that a combination of two competitors is a restraint of trade, because it lessens or tends to lessen competition.

But the act says nothing about competition. It forbids combinations in restraint of trade. In order to bring the case within the act, it must be shown that, when competition is lessened by consolidation of two companies, or by their stock being acquired by one interest, a combination is formed in restraint of commerce, but the opinion below makes no attempt to prove this by any course of reasoning or reference to authorities.

The decisions of this Court in the Trans-Missouri Freight Case, the Joint Traffic Case and the Addyston Pipe Case are cited, but they prove only that a contract expressly and directly restraining the right of rival companies to compete is a restraint of trade. But here there is no agreement of any kind, certainly no agreement restraining or restricting the right or ability of either carrier to compete. The cases cited contain no intimation that a single person or corporation, or two or more persons jointly, may not own interests in rival carriers and exercise such rights as result from their ownership. This case is not, therefore, within those decisions.

The opinion below assumes that a contract or combination restrains commerce whenever it destroys or lessens the motive for competition. But a partnership does that; so does the organization of a corporation where its stock is held by more than one. But the Court said in the Joint Traffic Case (171 U. S., 567): "The formation of corporations for business or manufacturing purposes has never to our knowledge been regarded in the nature of a contract in restraint of trade or commerce. The same may be said of the contract of partnership." In the Addyston Pipe Case, 54 U. S. App., 744, TAFT, J., says: "Again, when two men become partners in a business, although their union might reduce competition, this effect was only an incident to the main purpose of a union of their capital, enterprise and energy to carry on a successful business and one useful to the community." A combination may, therefore, destroy competition without restraining trade.

As was said by Mr. Justice PECKHAM in the case of Trans-Missouri Freight Association, 166 U. S., 328: "Contracts in restraint of trade have been known and spoken of for hundreds of years both in England and in this country." A clear and complete statement of the law regarding such contracts and its development is given by Judge TAFT in the Addyston Pipe Company case, 54 U. S. App., 741. It appears from the cases there collected that from early times various contracts by which parties undertook to restrain themselves in regard to their trade or business have been held by the Courts non-enforceable, although not otherwise illegal and not criminal. The policy of the law was to encourage trade, and the objection to these restraints was that, by excluding the persons making such contracts from the exercise of their trades, enterprise and industry were discouraged, competition prevented, and the public exposed to the evils of monopoly. Exceptions to the rule were gradually introduced, the principal one being that, when one sold his business, he might lawfully restrain himself to a reasonable extent from carrying on a similar business, so as to compete with the purchaser. Such limited restraints were regarded as incident to the main purposes of the transaction, which was promotive of trade.

But among all the cases there is none in which it has been intimated that a contract restrains trade when competition is ended or lessened by the association in a common enterprise of two or more persons previously competitors, or when one, or two, or more jointly acquire such a controlling interest in competing enterprises that there is no longer a motive for competition between them. In the case of a partnership, although competition between the members is checked the exertions of all are employed for a common object, and trade on the whole is thereby promoted. The same is more clearly the case where one or more persons acquire a controlling interest in two competing corporations, for in that case every person interested in the corporations may compete with them; and each corporation may compete with the other.

The action of every corporation is directed, to a certain extent, by its own interest. When the stockholders of a corporation exercise their power against a certain course of competition with a rival they do not thereby restrain trade; they only direct the business of the corporation as a single trader would direct his own business. The exercise of this power does not become a restraint of trade, because their action is affected by a pecuniary interest which they may have in a rival. Indeed it is not necessary to destroy the motive for competition that the majority holder of shares in one corporation should also own a majority in a competing corporation. The ownership of any substantial number of shares in both would be sufficient for that purpose and, therefore, to sustain the reasoning of the Court below it must be held unlawful for a single person, partnership or corporation to acquire any interest in two competing enterprises engaged in interstate commerce.

The law does not require that persons or corporations shall compete or conduct their business in opposition to one another, and it does not forbid the acquisition of such interests in different enterprises as lessens the motive for competition. All that it requires is that corporations and individuals competing in interstate commerce shall not restrain themselves from competing, but shall remain free to act as their interests shall dictate.

The business of a rival in trade may be purchased for the very purpose of being rid of his competition.

> Gamble vs. Queens Co. Water Company, 123 N. Y., 91, 104; Diamond Match Co. vs. Roeber, 106 N. Y., 473; Rafferty vs. Buffalo City Gas Co., 37 N. Y. App. Div., 618, 621; Trenton Potteries Co. vs. Oliphant, 56 N. J. Eq., 680; Oakdale Co. vs. Garst, 18 R. I., 484.

In such a purchase there is nothing that has ever been understood as a restraint of trade or commerce. Indeed, it appears that during the discussion of the act in question by Congress an amendment was proposed that prohibited any contract for the purpose of preventing competition in the transportation of persons or property, and this amendment was rejected (166 U. S., p. 317). Nobody appears to have been bold enough to propose an amendment forbidding the purchase of such interests in different enterprises as would take away the motive for competition or give the persons acquiring such interests the power to stop it.

The case is summed up by the Circuit Court in the sentence: "Competition, we think, would not be more effectually restrained * * * if the two railroad companies were consolidated under a single charter." But there is no reason for doubting that the two companies might have been consolidated without any violation of the Sherman Act. Consolidation in many similar cases has taken place under the authority of State laws, and it has never been doubted, we believe, that consolidations so authorized are valid. And yet in that case all competition would be absolutely destroyed. It is impossible, therefore, to maintain that the destruction of competition or the motive for competition, is equivalent to a restraint of commerce, for if that were so, as we have previously shown, every State law authorizing consolidation of competing enterprises engaged in interstate commerce must be held to have been a restraint of interstate commerce and void.

VI.

The question being whether there was any violation of the Anti-trust Act of 1890, it is to be noted that the Securities Company is neither alleged nor proved to have done or omitted anything which can be construed as such violation. If it has had the power to suppress or diminish competition between the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Companies, it has not used it. Hence, if the act has been violated at all, the violation must be due to one of three things; to the mere existence of the Securities Company as a corporation, to its powers as applicable to Great Northern and Northern Pacific shares, or to something illegal in its origin and organization.

1. But the existence of the Securities Company as a legal person is, on the theory of the Court below quite immaterial, and is a fiction of which, in the interest of substantial justice, no account is to be taken.

In the view of the Circuit Court the company is simply a medium—an agency—through which the natural persons creating or represented by it act—to which they stand in effect in the relation of principals—and which in no way relieves them of responsibility for its acts.

To quote the language of the Court, the Securities Company is nothing but "a few men acting in concert in its name and under cover of its charter." So that in considering the decree of the Circuit Court the Securities Company may be dismissed from consideration unless it can be shown that the powers given or sought to be given it can not be exercised through any agent, or, if through any, not through such an agent as the Securities Company.

2. But it cannot be maintained—it is not indeed suggested—that the powers over the Great Northern and Northern Pacific shares conferred upon the Securities Company by the natural persons of which it is the organ must be exercised by them personally and not through an agent, or that the Securities Company for any reason lacks the corporate capacity to act as agent for the exercise of those powers.

There is indeed nothing peculiar or extraordinary in those powers. They are the same—no more or no less —possessed by the owners of the shares before their sale to the Securities Company. Before such sale those owners were majority stockholders in both the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Companies, and thus could elect the directors and to that extent indirectly control the affairs and operations of both companies. The Securities Company now has exactly the same powers, and in accordance with the doctrine of the Court below is really the same "few men acting in concert in its name and under cover of its charter."

The powers of the Securities Company being those of "the few men acting in concert"—those powers being legally capable of delegation to the Securities Company and of performance by that company—and no violation of the Anti-trust Act by the "few men acting in concert" through the exercise of those powers by the Securities Company being even claimed—the mere possession of those powers by the Securities Company—i. e., by "the few men acting in concert"—is the thing upon which the Government must rely to establish a breach of the Anti-trust Act. That is, indeed, the precise position of the Court below, which rules that, if the power to suppress competition between competing interstate railroad companies is acquired and possessed by "a few men acting in concert," there is a necessary violation of the Anti-trust Act, and which holds that in its ruling it simply follows and applies a doctrine already affirmed by this Court. But—

(a) The cases cited by the Court below on this point do not sustain its contention. In each of them, persons or corporations, beside possessing the power to suppress competition, had actually used it by entering into agreements actually accomplishing that precise result.

(b) The mere power to stifle competition between interstate railroad companies acquired and possessed as one of the incidents of the general control of a corporation by stockholders is not made illegal by the Anti-trust Act. No such operation can be given to the act either as the result of the terms employed or by necessary or reasonable implication from those terms.

If the purpose of the statute were to do away with all power to suppress competition on the part of such stockholders, there would be found in it appropriate language to that effect.

It would prohibit a single stockholder from buying a majority of the stock of two such competing companies, or, if he had bought a majority of the stock of one of them, would incapacitate him from taking by inheritance or otherwise, or from continuing to hold, a majority of the stock of the other.

It would either prohibit a majority of the stocks of two competing interstate railroad companies from passing by inheritance to an heir or heirs or from being taken for debt by a creditor or creditors, or it would in each case compel a sale by the party or parties interested of his or their shares in one or the other of such companies.

In short, if the statute had meant to strike at all power on the part of stockholders of two competing interstate railroad companies to suppress competition between them, it would have enacted in express terms that neither one person nor several persons should own a majority of the stocks of both such companies.

And it would have said that such railways could not consolidate and that one could not be controlled by another.

But the statute contains not a word or a syllable which looks in that direction or which can be tortured as contemplating or effecting any limitation upon the right to acquire and hold property.

It is the use—not the acquisition or ownership—of property which the statute forbids, and the forbidden use must be (1) in restraint of trade, and (2) the result of a contract, combination, or conspiracy.

Hence, no violation of the Anti-trust Act can be held to result from the simple ownership by the Securities Company of a majority of the stocks of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Companies—from the mere fact that the Securities Company, or the "few men acting in concert" of whom it is said to be the organ have the power—in the exercise of the general control vested in a majority in interest of the stockholders of both those companies to suppress competition between them.

3. For the purposes of the present suit the existence of the Securities Company being unimportant, the mere power to violate the Anti-trust Act possessed either by the Securities Company in its capacity of stockholder or by the natural persons holding its stock not of itself constituting such violation, the further question is whether there is anything in the mode of acquisition of that power which makes its possession unlawful under the Anti-trust Act. The Court below rules that there is, and that that thing is the concert of action in the procurement of the power between the men creating the Securities Company as their organ and representative.

That is, in the view of the Court below, though a single individual as a majority stockholder in two competing interstate railroad companies may lawfully possess the power to violate the Anti-trust Act, though several individuals as such majority stockholders may lawfully possess the same power through accident, through operation of law, or in any way not involving their mutual co-operation to that end, yet, if several individuals get the same power by concert of action, its possession falls within the interdictions of the Anti-trust Act and forthwith becomes unlawful.

If it be asked how such a concert of action can work such a result, the answer is—in the view of the Court below—that the "concert" is conclusive proof of unlawful intention. Realizing that the mere possession of power to violate the Anti-trust Act cannot of itself be a violation, but must be accompanied by an intent to use it for that purpose, the Court below holds that concert of action in acquiring the power supplies such intent. It is held to do so as matter of law, and because, according to the Court below, the power being obtained, every motive for competition is destroyed and every man is presumed to intend the necessary consequences of his acts.

These propositions, it is submitted, as applied to the case at bar, are unsound alike in law and in reason.

First. The acquisition or possession of power to do an illegal act cannot be held as matter of law to extinguish all motive to refrain from such act.

No such doctrine has ever been laid down, either by Courts or by jurists.

It ignores the consideration that, as the true interest of every member of the community is that the law should be universally respected, he has always a strong motive to be himself law abiding.

Any such doctrine is not only without warrant in our jurisprudence, but is in direct antagonism to one of its most salutary and best-established tenets.

Nothing in our law is better settled or deemed more vital than the principle that every man is charged with knowledge of the law and credited with the desire and the purpose to obey it—whence the presumption of innocence until guilt is proven.

But such a presumption would manifestly be a mere form of words—devoid of all substantial value—if the mere acquisition or possession of a power to break the law were held to remove all motive to obey it and to justify a presumption of intent to disobey it.

SECOND. Equally untenable is the proposition that, if several persons by concert of action become majority stockholders in each of two competing interstate railroads and thus acquire the power to destroy competition between them, the legal consequence of such concert is to convict them of an intent to destroy such competition and thus to violate the Anti-trust Act.

(a) It is conceivable that several persons might co-operate in buying of the owners not a majority of the stock of each of two competing interstate railroads but only the right, at their option, to vote such majority at corporate meetings so as to do away with competition.

It might then be urged with great force that such a special power must have been obtained for use and with the intent to use it, and a court or jury might so find as matter of fact. Even in that case, however, there would be no legal presumption to that effect.

(b) The case at bar, however, presents no such situation. Nothing appearing except that several persons have by concert of action acquired a majority of the stocks of two competing interstate railroads, not only is an illegal intent to violate the Anti-trust Act not a necessary and therefore not a legal consequence of the "concert," but the parties concerned are entitled to the presumption of their "concert" being for entirely lawful and laudable purposes.

Thus the parties concerned may have looked into the market value and earning capacity of the stocks in question and may have arranged to acquire a majority interest in them solely because of their intrinsic financial merits.

Their concerted action may have had no other object than to determine how and when and through what agency or agencies each should buy—that they might not uselessly bid against each other and raise market prices beyond their normal or fair value.

Their concerted action may have been based on the natural and proper view that the railroad properties in question were desirable investments only if the ultimate control of the properties was secured to themselves as investors and thus placed beyond the reach of mere speculators.

Their concerted action may have been based on the conviction that the stocks in question would be good investments only if desirable changes in the management of the properties could be brought about through the assured control of a majority ownership.

Their concerted action, indeed, may have been prompted by nothing else than threatened or apprehended violations of the Anti-trust Act on the part of those then in control of the properties, and may have had as its precise object the prevention of such violations and the rescue of the properties from the injurious consequences of such violations.

Or their concerted action may have been for the purpose of preventing the control of either railway from passing to people mainly interested in the development of other sections of the country and lines of traffic other than those wherein they conceived their true interests to lie.

In short, to declare that an intent to violate the Anti-trust Act follows as a necessary consequence from the concerted action of several persons in becoming majority stockholders of two competing interstate railroads is to state a proposition repugnant to common sense and common experience and without foundation in reason or in fact.

As matter of law, such a proposition directly conflicts with that legal presumption of lawful purpose and intent which attaches to every act not either malum in se or malum prohibitum.

If the rule laid down by the Court below be sound there is no possible reason for limiting its application to the Anti-trust Act and to the case of several persons by concert of action acquiring a majority of the stock of two competing interstate railroads.

On the same theory and for the same reason, if several persons by concert of action acquire a majority of the stock of one interstate railroad, those persons, as they have the power, are to be charged with the intent to violate the Interstate Commerce Law respecting discriminations between customers, to disobey the statute respecting couplers of cars and other safety appliances, and to break any law that Congress may have enacted under its general power to regulate commerce, including the act in question.

The power itself to do interstate business necessarily involves the power to restrain it. Any railway company or corporation or person engaged in commerce has power to restrain it. The power to do involves the power to restrain. If the doctrine of the Court below is correct, every combination of capital and brains to engage in and expand commerce must therefore be condemned as criminal and illegal.

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1903.

No. 277.

NORTHERN SECURITIES COMPANY AND OTHERS,
APPELLANTS,

vs.

THE UNITED STATES.

BRIEF FOR THE GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY.

The decree in this suit enjoins the defendant, the Northern Securities Company, from holding, voting, receiving dividends on and acting in other ways as owner of, the capital stock of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway Companies, a majority of which it had purchased and paid for in cash, and in its own stock, before the suit was commenced, upon the grounds that the ownership by any single interest, individual or corporate, of a majority of the stock of competing corporations engaged in interstate trade, is, through the voting power of the shares to elect a separate board of directors for each corporation, a direct regulation of such trade; that though, in fact, the power may be used to enlarge trade and increase competition, in law there is a conclusive presumption that it will not be so used; and that Congress, in the exercise of Federal control has, by the Sherman Anti-Trust Act, forbidden and made criminal the acquisition of such ownership through purchase from two or more owners, if such owners had previously come to an agreement or understanding to make the sale.

The Decree.

FIRST. "IT IS DECREED THAT THE DEFENDANTS ABOVE NAMED (JAMES J. HILL, WILLIAM P. CLOUGH, D. WILLIS JAMES, JOHN S. KENNEDY, J. PIERPONT MORGAN, ROBERT BACON, GEORGE F. BAKER AND DANIEL LAMONT) HAVE HERETOFORE ENTERED INTO A COMBINATION OR CONSPIRACY IN RESTRAINT OF TRADE AND COMMERCE AMONG THE SEVERAL STATES SUCH AS AN ACT OF CONGRESS, APPROVED JULY 2, 1890, ENTITLED 'AN ACT TO PROTECT TRADE AND COMMERCE AGAINST UNLAWFUL RESTRAINT AND MONOPOLIES,' DENOUNCES AS ILLEGAL."

SECOND. "THAT ALL OF THE STOCK OF THE NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY AND ALL THE STOCK OF THE GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, NOW CLAIMED TO BE HELD AND OWNED BY THE DEFENDANT, THE NORTHERN SECURITIES COMPANY, WAS ACQUIRED AND IS NOW HELD BY IT IN VIRTUE OF SUCH COMBINATION OR CONSPIRACY IN RESTRAINT OF TRADE AND COMMERCE AMONG THE SEVERAL STATES."

Pages 1714–15.

Case as Stated and Found by the Court.

The findings of fact by the Court upon which the decree rests are contrary to the evidence. To make this clear, the findings will be separated, and the evidence bearing upon each finding referred to. It is a fact, that in the transaction under review, there was no device or intent to evade the "Anti-Trust Act," to restrain competition, to monopolize trade, to inflate securities, water stock, or create fictitious capital.

First Finding.

"THESE ROADS ARE, AND IN PUBLIC ESTIMATION HAVE EVER BEEN REGARDED AS PARALLEL AND COMPETING LINES. FOR SOME YEARS AT LEAST AFTER THEY WERE BUILT THEY COMPETED WITH EACH OTHER ACTIVELY FOR TRANSCONTINENTAL AND INTERSTATE TRAFFIC" (page 1704).

The volume of competitive interstate traffic is insignificant. The reason for this is, that the lines of the two roads traverse a sparsely settled country. They really occupy two broad belts of territory running from the Mississippi River and Lake Superior to Puget Sound. For the greater part of the way, they are as far apart as would be two lines of railroad, one running through the middle of the State of New York and the other through the middle of the State of Pennsylvania. They come together at only two points in North Dakota where there is an appreciable amount of interstate traffic—Fargo and Grand Forks—two points in Montana—Helena and Butte—one interior point in Washington—Spokane—and at Seattle and four or five small towns on Puget Sound. The line of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company extends from Chicago, St. Paul and Minneapolis to Fargo; the Union Pacific System extends to Butte and Spokane. Puget Sound rates are made by water competition

Defts.' Map, Ex. 4, p. 964.

Rates of defendant companies cannot be higher to the points named, than the rates of other carriers by rail or water, from a common territory.

(a) All interstate traffic, except that beginning and ending on the respective lines of the defendant railway companies, is carried under joint tariffs with eighteen railroad companies operating west of the Mississippi River and between that river and the Pacific coast, and one hundred and twenty companies operating east of the Mississippi River, and so connecting as to furnish through routes between practically all important traffic centers of the country, both east and west of the Mississippi River (fol. 3802).

The rates in joint tariffs are made by agreement between all the parties, and the tariffs are subject to withdrawal or change at the option of any party, not only as respects the rates, but the division of rates between the parties. In respect to traffic carried under joint tariffs, neither of the defendant companies has ever had, and neither of them can have, an independent rate-making power or control. All joint tariffs to and from points common to the lines of the defendant railway companies have always been, and necessarily will be, the same whether the traffic is carried by one or the other company. Joint rates from all the territory named in the joint tariffs have always been, and always must be, such as lines of railway competing with defendant railway companies for interstate traffic from such territory are willing to adopt. There is no competition between the defendant railway companies, as respects traffic carried under such joint tariffs, other than competition regarding divisions of the joint rate, and this does not affect nor concern the public. Should the defendant railway companies, through consolidation, become one company, the joint rates from all the territory named would not, for that reason, be different from what they otherwise would be, because such consolidation would not, as respects rates or facilities, change the relation with other railway companies parties to the tariff.

(b) Ninety-seven per cent of the total interstate traffic of both companies is carried under joint tariffs to which they are parties, and concerning which they have no voice other than to accept terms and conditions which all other parties to the tariffs are willing to accept. Joint tariffs will not be different from what they otherwise would be because the board of directors of each company is selected by a single shareholder, holding a majority of the shares of the companies, instead of by many shareholders owning a majority of such shares.

The following table shows the percentage of interstate traffic subject to control by the defendant companies in the exercise of their rate-making powers. It does not equal three per cent. of the total interstate traffic of either company, and does not amount to $600,000 a year out of interstate earnings of each company exceeding $18,000,000.

The percentage of interstate traffic on the lines of the defendant companies, which can be controlled by joint action of the companies, is as follows:

Great Northern	2.78
Northern Pacific	2.89

Percentage of interstate traffic, the rates on which can be controlled by joint action of defendants with connecting lines:

Great Northern	.65
Northern Pacific	4.90

Percentage of interstate traffic, the rates on which can be controlled only by agreement with lines competing with the defendants:

Great Northern	6.89
Northern Pacific	2.58

Percentage of interstate traffic, the rates on which can be controlled only by agreement with lines competing with defendant companies and with connecting lines:

Great Northern 17.09
Northern Pacific 13.25

Percentage of interstate traffic moving between stations on line of Great Northern Company, neither of which is reached by lines of the Northern Pacific 72.59

Percentage of interstate traffic moving between stations on line of Northern Pacific Company, neither of which is reached by lines of the Great Northern 76.38

Interstate business forwarded from and to towns reached by lines of the defendant railway companies only:

Great Northern $471,218.88
Northern Pacific 554,395.24

Total interstate business, both companies:

Great Northern $16,920,906
Northern Pacific 19,253,852

Exhibit "6," fol. 3819; Exhibit "7," fol. 3834; Rec., fols. 3147–3188.

Second Finding.

"IN THE SPRING OF THE YEAR 1901 THEY (THE DEFENDANT RAILWAY COMPANIES) UNITED IN PURCHASING ABOUT 98 PER CENT. OF THE ENTIRE CAPITAL STOCK OF THE CHICAGO, BURLINGTON & QUINCY RAILWAY COMPANY AND BECAME JOINT SURETIES FOR THE PAYMENT OF BONDS OF THE LAST-NAMED COMPANY, WHEREBY THE PURCHASE WAS ACCOMPLISHED, WHICH WERE TO RUN TWENTY YEARS AND BEAR 4 PER CENT. INTEREST PER ANNUM. THE AMOUNT OF STOCK SO ACQUIRED WAS OF THE PAR VALUE OF ABOUT $107,000,000, AND, AS IT WAS PURCHASED AT THE RATE OF $200 PER SHARE, THE BONDED INDEBTEDNESS OF THE TWO COMPANIES WAS THUS INCREASED TO THE EXTENT OF $200,000,000."

Rec., p. 1704.

The purchase was not joint. Each company purchased an equal interest in ninety-eight per cent. of the entire capital stock of the Burlington Company.

They did not become joint sureties for the payment of bonds of the Burlington Company. They executed their own joint and several bonds on account of the purchase of the Burlington stock, and pledged the stock as security for the bonds. The Burlington Company did not execute an obligation in connection with this purchase. The stock of the Burlington was worth all that was paid for it, and there was no thought of the Northern Securities Company or of any single ownership of a majority of the shares of the defendant railway companies, in connection with the purchase.

First Thought of Purchase.

MR. HILL:

"Q. Why was it, Mr. Hill, that you took no steps for the purchase of the Burlington road, or some other eastern connection, prior to 1900 and 1901.

"A. The earliest consideration of that question, which I recall, of a line to the south—and the Burlington was mentioned at the time—was in 1897. It was by some friends of mine in London. But we were just emerging from a period of business depression, and the undertaking was a very large one for the Great Northern Railway—a very large one. It was thought that, if the two roads having the same general interest in the broad question of developing their local business would take it up, the burden would be very much less, and the Northern Pacific was hardly in a condition to take it up sooner than the time when it was taken up. Its earnings and dividends were hardly established. While its earnings had been increasing quite rapidly, the company's recent reorganization left its credit somewhat on a different basis from the Great Northern, which had been paying dividends from its organization or commencement.

Fol. 2719.

MR. MORGAN:

"Q. When did you first hear of the proceeding or negotiation to purchase the entire capital stock, or endeavor to do so, of the Burlington by the Northern Pacific? * * * * * *

"A. If you will allow me to state to you the history of that in my own words, I will tell you the transaction from beginning to end. I think it was in 1899—it may have been in 1898.—I made up my mind that it was essential that the Northern Pacific Railway Company should have its terminus practically in Chicago, and in the same manner that the New York Central, of which I am a director, at that time or soon after decided the same thing with regard to their line, that the western terminus of their line should be in Chicago, practically by acquiring the Lake Shore; in other words, that the transcontinental line should come to Chicago, and that the eastern line should go to Chicago, so that was to be the central point, and I talked it over with a great many people interested in the Northern Pacific, and I found they all agreed with me.

Fols. 1304–1307.

Why The Purchase Was Made.

The defendant railway companies have expended millions of dollars in building great instrumentalities of commerce. They have little to sell but transportation, and they are confronted with the problem of finding a market in which to sell it. The traffic beginning and ending on their respective lines is light, owing to the fact that the country traversed is sparsely settled or not settled at all. The commodities furnished for carriage are raw materials of great weight and bulk in comparison to value, and which will not bear transportation to market, except at a low rate, such as can only be made profitable by an increase in volume of traffic. The cost of running a train is practically the same whether it is light or fully loaded. The cost of moving a ton of freight on any railroad decreases as the number of tons moved on it increases. It became indispensable to the welfare of the defendant companies, and to the development of the country which they serve, that they should take steps to increase their volume of interstate and international traffic, in order to be able to reduce rates and meet, not only the competition of railway lines, but competition on the ocean and by way of the Suez Canal. To do this it was necessary to reach markets for the products of the territory along their lines, and to secure connections which would furnish the largest amount of traffic for their respective roads, and thus increase trade and interchange of commodities under conditions more favorable, because more permanent, than joint tariffs subject to be withdrawn or changed at any time, without their consent and against their protest. Had the line of the Burlington Company not been constructed, and had the defendant companies constructed it as it is now located, the act would have been regarded as a great achievement for the country served by it, as well as for the country served by the lines of the defendant railway companies, because of the advantages to be derived in creating and interchanging traffic. The resulting increase in volume of traffic would enable the companies to reduce rates, and thus strengthen each company in its competition with the more southerly lines, with the Canadian Pacific Railway, and with European carriers, for the trade and commerce of the Orient.

MR. HILL:

Q. State whether the Pacific coast, and the population reached by your lines there, furnished a sufficient market for the commodities which it was necessary for you to carry westward, in order to give low rates eastward on your line.

A. At the time the road was completed, (it was in 1893) and for a short time afterward, the westbound merchandise furnished more than enough empty cars to move the lumber east, but within a short time, two or three years, the lumber trade had grown very rapidly, and the Alaska trade sprang up, and that furnished a larger westbound movement. Honolulu increased the westbound movement, and to some extent in 1896, by making very low rates, we were able, for the first time, to take American rails to Japan (fol. 2647).

Q. What steps did you then take, what markets did you seek for westbound traffic on the line?

A. Well, we took every step we thought would result in developing the trade. I sent men to Japan and China and kept them there—one man for over a year. His business was to get a manifest of every ship that entered or left a Chinese or Japanese port, as far as he could; to find what the exports and the imports of those countries consisted of, and where they went. Afterwards we sent one of our traffic representatives and kept him there for a time. We also had men in the east, and wherever there was any business or likelihood of business.

Q. I wish you would go on now, and state in a general way the growth and development of this Oriental business and traffic, what steps you took to secure transportation across the Pacific Ocean, and also what connection or relation, if any, there was between the building up of this Oriental commerce and the purchase of the Burlington road or the stock of the Burlington?

A. We found that the lumber supply of the United States, east of the Rocky Mountains and north of the Ohio River, was becoming more and more dependent upon the Washington and Oregon forests, and that the time was rapidly approaching, when the States that theretofore furnished the lumber for that region would not be able to furnish lumber enough to meet their own consumption. Michigan furnished, for a long time, the bulk of the lumber going into the States east of Lake Erie or of Detroit, and also the large markets in Chicago and west of Chicago. I think it is reasonably safe to say, that Michigan does not furnish to-day as much lumber as she consumes. I have given a great deal of attention to that matter, because at the time we considered building the road, and when I first went to the Pacific coast, if we could not carry that lumber to market there was absolutely nothing else for us to carry, and no use in building a road there. I felt, after making a thorough examination of the lumber trade of the country, that it was only a question of time when that would be the source from which all the northern lumber would have to be supplied, or practically all; and the result has shown that the time when such would be the case is much shorter than I anticipated. But in order for that lumber to move, it must be moved at a low rate; and in order to make a low rate you must have a large tonnage, and you must load your cars in both directions. That carried us to investigating the different markets to which we could send anything that was made in the east. In 1896, in the fall, we had just closed an agreement with the Japanese General Steamship Company to put on a line of through steamers running to our terminal at Seattle in connection with our road, and the conditions of the contract were such as to enable us to make a rate from the east to the Orient. I remember when those men were present with us. Some of them were interested in securing rails for their railroads. I asked them where they were going to get their rails. They thought they would either get Belgian or English rails. The Belgian rails would come from Antwerp, the English rails from Middlesboro. I asked them, as they were going to stay here a day or two, to let me see what could be done for American rails. I immediately cabled to my friends in London and got quotations for Antwerp and Middlesboro rails, and the best charters to Yokohama. I remember that the rails could be laid down at about $29, the English or Belgian rails. I telegraphed to Chicago. The time was rather a quiet one in American manufactures, especially with the rail mills (the Joliet and one or two otheas were about closing down) three or four weeks before election, and possibly they were a little anxious to keep their mills running. I told them if they would make a price of $19.50, we would give them a rate of eight dollars a ton—or 40 cents a hundred—from Chicago to Yokhama, which would be $1.50 a ton lower than the English or Belgian quotations. After some hesitation they made the price and got the contract for 15,000 tons.

Fols. 2647–2656.

Cotton.

Some Japanese were passing through. The men I had out there reported the amount of cottan spun in Japan, and the fact that the cotton came—raw cotton —mainly from India; a short staple cotton, which made an inferior yarn and sold at a low price. I got these gentlemen to try a small shipment of American cotton, with the guaranty, if it did not prove profitable to mix our long staple with their short staple of India, that I would pay for the cotton. The result of that was very satisfactory. The cotton trade has grown very fast, both raw and manufactured, but especially raw cotton. We have chartered ships to run to Honolulu, and make low rates there. The rates we made, and the rates we are making now, are very low. We make a rate from Minneapolis to Hong Kong, or from St. Paul, or any part of the state here, to Hong Kong, that would enable them to ship flour, if the Chinamen wanted to use flour, or were able to buy it (they are rather poor over there just now, and have to be content with millet, they can't buy flour). In carrying this business forward we were soon brought to a point where we realized that the rates, in order to build the traffic upon a permanent basis, must be permanent, or reasonably so. We found, in going to the south for cotton—Texas cotton going to Galveston, and the Gulf states cotton going to New Orleans, that it went at different rates, and went from New Orleans to foreign ports at such rates as the ships were inclined to make, according to the supply and demand for tonnage. We found that it was necessary for us, in order to be on a permanent basis, to have more than a joint rate, to have more than a joint tariff, which might be withdrawn at any time. We could not build up a great permanent business, extending across the continent, and even across the ocean, on the basis that to-morrow the rate might be changed, or the party with whom we were working to reach the different points of production or consumption, had some other interest, or some greater interest elsewhere. It was necessary in doing this that we should have some reasonable expectation that we could control the permanency of the rate and that we would be able to reach the markets. In other words, if the man producing lumber on the coast, or cattle on the ranges, or ore in the mines, could not find a market for it, and if we could not take it to a market that would enable him to sell his stuff for a profit, he would have to stop making it. That was the line we worked upon, and that was the reason we felt called upon to put ourselves in a position where we could control access to the markets for him and access to the production for the west-bound. The Burlington reaches, more than any other road in the country, I think, these particular conditions; I think probably as much as all the other western roads put together.

Q. In that particular, as to the places which it reaches, what are the distinguishing features of the Burlington, as compared with the other roads; what points does it reach?

A. Well, if you will commence in the west, it connects with the Northern Pacific at Billings; it reaches Denver; it reaches Lincoln and Omaha, Nebraska; coming east to Des Moines and to Burlington, and going south to St. Joe, Kansas City and St. Louis; and then you may commence at St. Louis; and it reaches every town between St. Louis and the Twin Cities. It reaches Chicago, Peoria, Galesburg, Aurora—all those large points in Illinois. I had the figures and probably I might be able to find them. It reaches a very large percentage of all the manufacturing interests in the state of Illinois, and Illinois is a large manufacturing state.

Q. What are the principal markets in the West for the cattle that are brought over your line from the ranges?

A. Well, the principal markets in this country over all lines are Omaha, St. Joe, Kansas City and Chicago.

Q. All reached by the Burlington?

A. By the Burlington.

Q. As for this ore from the mines, that is shipped eastward?

A. Well, the Burlington runs to Denver and has connection over some road to (Pueblo) Colorado, but Denver and Pueblo are the principal western terminal smelting points.

Q. Omaha?

A. Omaha, Kansas City, Aurora (Illinois) and the Black Hills. I think, outside of the copper smelting in Montana, those points cover three-quarters of the smelting in the United States.

Q. What advantage does the Burlington give you in regard to obtaining cotton for shipment?

A. The Burlington, at St. Louis and Kansas City especially, connects with all the southern railways reaching the cotton fields. To illustrate. Mr. Ripley, President of the Atchison, a few weeks ago told me he found they could make more money loading their cars that went down to Texas and back to St. Louis with cotton, than they could in hauling the cotton to San Francisco. They would rather haul it up to St. Louis in the return cars and give it to us and let us take it abroad, because they had to haul the car that took it to San Francisco back empty. They had no lumber to bring back, and we had lumber to bring back, for every car we carried. So that the question is one that depends on the low rate, on the bulk of the traffic, the density, the amount of the traffic and the ability to load in both directions. It would seem rather strange that we should take cotton from Texas to Puget Sound (I think Puget Sound last year carried 75% of all the cotton that left the Pacific coast, and it is the farthest port from the cotton) but the conditions are such as to enable us to carry it there.

Fols. 2657 to 2666.

MR. MORGAN:

"There was the St. Paul, and the Burlington & Quincy and the Wisconsin Central. Of course, we would not have taken the last one anyway. Consequently we came down to the question of the St. Paul. I made up my mind that of the two I would rather have the St. Paul. Soon after that I met Mr. Hill, and I said 'Mr. Hill, I think that is the best thing we can do.—I think your line perhaps is in the same condition.—I think we had better go to work and secure the St. Paul road, or a road to Chicago, and if you will share with us, we will do it together.' He said 'All right.' So he said, 'Who would take it up?' I said, 'I will; I think we had better take the St. Paul.' He said he thought we had better take the Burlington. I said I would rather have the St. Paul; because the financial responsibility to take the St. Paul would be less. He did not agree with me, but he acquiesced in my decision, and we discussed that question. I took up negotiations—not in any secret manner. We went directly to the directors of the road and told them what we wanted. We found some of them disposed to make the transaction, others were not. I will tell you what my reasons were for taking the St. Paul in preference to the Burlington. Mr. Hill's opinion—I will give you what I understood to be his opinion—was that the Burlington system offered a better market for the coarse freight we were hauling from the Pacific Coast for distribution than the St. Paul, and he wanted the Burlington because he thought that would have been open for the freight from the Pacific to greater advantage than the St. Paul. However, as I say, he acquiesced in my decision. These negotiations, as I said, went on for some time, and finally the directors of the St. Paul asked me for a conference, and then they told me very frankly that they had decided they would not let us have the road on any terms. * * * Then I went to Mr. Hill and told him so. You can go ahead and see what he could do with the Burlington, and he took up negotiations with the Burlington, which were carried through successfully. That is the whole story. * * * It was a transaction entirely independent of all other transactions that you have in mind, or anything of the kind. It was a perfectly independent transaction, and it was done to attack nobody or to do anything. It was simply to bring those two northern lines to Chicago.

Fols. 1308–1312.

Joint Rates.

MR. HILL:

Q. In reference to shipments of cotton especially, and other articles, what disadvantage was there in its being carried over separate lines under a joint tariff, which you do not have where it is carried with both roads under the same control, for instance, in the matter of breaking bulk, or anything of that kind, shifting from cars?

A. Well, it is almost a necessity, if business is to be at all permanent, to be able to control the rate. The rates on the high seas vary according to the supply and demand for ships; and we, in order to take this business west, must be in a position to compete to take the traffic, one day with another. The line between here and St. Louis, if the Burlington, was not in a position to work with us, and to continue to work with us, might find some other connection that would give it a larger division than we could make of the rate; they might find or feel that it was their interest to work with somebody else. Maybe they would give them some other business in lieu of this, and we would have to hire some other road to haul that business from St. Louis here, at the best rate we could get. We could not control it except through the option of some other road, which might at any time withdraw the rate; might at any time refuse to make a joint rate with us, except on terms that would be prohibitory. And in that way, we could not go very far. We would not be in a position to compete for that business. We must either take that business to the Coast—we must take all the westbound business we can get to the Coast, or else we must advance the rate on the lumber. Now, outside of cotton—take nails, wire, articles of that kind, that business has grown to very large dimensions, but our rate is a very low one. From Lake Erie to Hong Kong it is 45 cents a hundred, $9 a ton, on those commodities. But the demand for American steel at home makes it almost a matter of indifference whether they send it or not, so we have to look, not only for cotton, but we have to look to anything that will furnish us business going to the west, whether it is going to the Pacific coast or to Alaska, or to Honolulu, or to the Orient, or Manila—anywhere; we must try everything. During the season of open water, during the season of navigation, we can make rates from Buffalo and the lower lake ports by way of Lake Superior on our own lines, but that does not reach to the south, and only takes the manufacturing districts south of the lakes during the season of navigation. A line reaching St. Louis and all the trunk lines of the south, and the trunk lines of the east, between St. Louis and Chicago, puts us in a vastly different position, and that is the reason why it was of such importance for us to control the situation. We could not control it without controlling the access to the main centres. We could not control it unless we could give a market for the production of the line—products raised along our road—whether it was out of the mine, from the farm, or out of the forest. If the man who produced it could not sell it, he would stop producing. And that was the problem we had to meet, and with the Burlington we find ourselves able to meet it.

Fols. 2686, 2690.

Q. Now, to get back to the increase of traffic that was to come to you from the Burlington by reason of your acquisition of it. Do you wish to be understood as stating that because the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern purchased the Burlington road, traffic was actually created by that fact? Or did you mean to say that you would get a larger portion of the Burlington's traffic by reason of your ownership of the Burlington?

A. Not by any means. The object was to make it possible to carry out a clearly and well-defined plan. If we depended upon joint tariffs, if we depended upon lines of railroad coming here that had no interest in our road, or we had no interest in them—take for instance, the St. Paul road, which has just been or is advertised as having been allied with the Union Pacific; the Chicago and Northwestern which comes here and has a contract with the Union Pacific; their lines reach away out to Omaha and into the Platte Valley; they have a direct interest in taking their business over their own lines and not bringing it here. Now, we wanted to be in a position where we were not subject to the good will or the changes of ownership of any railway; we wanted to be in a position where we could reach these centres, and to do that the Burlington gave more ground than any of the other lines —practically, I think, as much as all of them. And it was to put us in a position where we would not be defeated in building up the traffic of these northern States and the northern lines to the East.

Fol. 2916.

Q. I ask you now, do you state that the acquisition of the Burlington by the Northern Pacific and Great Northern will create traffic that would not otherwise exist?

A. It has created traffic. The figures show that the traffic has increased very materially. Now, how much of that traffic would have been created, or would have existed, it is very difficult for me or anybody else to say. But we know that the traffic has increased since the acquisition of the Burlington, to an enormous extent, and we know further that we are able not to compete alone with railways, for that is a small matter in this business, but to compete in the matter of rates with the ships going from New Orleans or from Galveston, or the railways carrying it anywhere, or in connection with any other system of transportation. Now, we are able to make a rate that will take that business. And it was that rate I had reference to, and that policy and that ability that I tried to make plain yesterday.

MR. HARRIS:

Q. What is the mileage of the Burlington?

A. In the state of Illinois, 1,500 miles; Iowa, 1,400 miles; in Nebraska, 2,400; Missouri, 1,100; Kansas, 260; Colorado, 400; Montana about 200; Wisconsin, 223; Minnesota, 38; altogether about 8,200 miles main track, counting straight main track, and about 460 miles of double track.

Q. Will the acquisition by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific of the shares of the Burlington restrain trade and traffic between the states and foreign countries?

A. On the contrary, I think it will promote business very greatly, and develop latent resources and enable forest, mineral, and other products and resources to be utilized which are now idle.

Q. Speak on that subject with respect to general merchandise, manufacturing industries and products.

A. I think that the practical extension of the Burlington road to the Pacific coast, by reason of its connection and union with those two lines (whatever you may call it,) and the practical extension of those lines into the Mississippi and Missouri valleys, and throughout all the country occupied by the Burlington lines, by affording an opportunity to merchants and manufacturers to extend their markets, that they will do it, and that the opportunity to trade will be taken advantage of to promote business and commerce.

Fols. 2969-2972.

MR. MELLEN:

Q. Did the acquisition of the stock of the Burlington road by the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern have any effect or influence to restrain or hinder trade or commerce between the states and with foreign countries.

A. I thought it promoted rather than hindered it.

Q. Will you tell us in what respect it promoted it?

A. It resulted in a much freer interchange of business between the Northern Pacific and Burlington. The business increased very much. It has been more to the interest of the two companies to work closely together. It has opened a much wider market to the products tributary to the line of the Northern Pacific and the business has increased. I have no figures to show, but it is my impression the business has increased very considerably, and is bound to increase from month to month, and from year to year, as the result of the acquisition.

Fol. 3417.

Q. Why does this existing arrangement between these roads tend to create or promote business beyond what a mere connection and joint tariff would have done?

A. It is among the possibilities that a joint tariff and interchange under the same might produce a large business, similar to that perhaps that we are now doing, but it is uncertain and insecure, and people establishing large industries, and seeking a market, want to be sure of a secure one, that it may not be subject to the whims of management, that might possibly see in another part of the country a chance to get a few cents more on a carload of freight and divert the lumber business now coming from the state of Washington, say to Texas, or some other point where a supply could be obtained under a division of rates with the Burlington road. That might make it equally as well for the Burlington road, but at the same time would cause the Northern Pacific a great loss.

Beginning of Negotiations.

Negotiations were commenced with the directors of the Burlington Road in January, 1901, and concluded in April.

There was no connection between the dissolution of the Northern Pacific voting trust and the purchase of the Burlington stock.

MR. MORGAN:

Q. When was it first decided to dissolve the voting trust of the Northern Pacific?

A. I think in October, 1900.

Q. Why was that decided ?

A. I came to the conclusion that the condition of the company was such that it could be safely turned over to the stockholders, and for the reason that I thought the time was approaching when it would be desirable to retire the preferred stock, and I preferred that that question should come up before the stockholders then rather than the voting trustees, and that was one of the leading reasons which induced me.

Q. Was the question of retiring the preferred stock ever submitted to the stockholders ?

A. No, but I mean that they should act upon it.

* * * * * *

The retiring of the preferred stock, of course, was in the hands of the directors, but those directors were elected by the voting trustees. There was an election in October, 1901, to elect directors. I preferred that that election should take place by the stockholders themselves, rather than simply by the voting trustees.

Fols. 1285–1287.

* * * * * *

When the Northern Pacific was reorganized, the times were very bad, and the indebtedness of the Northern Pacific—the old company—was very large. It was not possible, it was not desirable, and I don't think it would have been possible at that time, with the credit of the Northern Pacific in the market, or the public opinion of the value of the property, to get a syndicate up large enough to raise an almost indefinite amount of money. At the same time, provision had to be made to take up bonds and stock of the old company under the reorganization. Consequently in making up the plan Mr. Coster and myself, together with Mr. Stetson, who advised us on the legal points of the question, decided this point, that if we could issue a preferred stock, which would be a temporary security upon which we would not have to pay interest unless the road earned it, and which at any time we could retire if we wished to. that that would be a safe transaction, and that plan was decided upon, and such a security was issued in the shape of the preferred stock. That preferred stock, as you will see by the plan of reorganization, which I have agreed to submit to you, was used to take up obligations in the shape of bonds, notes, and old debts of the original Northern Pacific Company, and it was successful, and from the day that that plan of reorganization was issued, we never had one moment's doubt that within a very few years, and before the expiration of the time fixed for the voting trust, that the common stock would have reached a point in its price where it could be sold at par, or better, and the preferred stock retired, which restricted not only the income of the property, but also restricted certain lands which were set aside, and upon which the preferred stock was, to a certain extent, a lien. Consequently, it was always considered, and always known, by everybody connected with the Northern Pacific, that the amount of preferred stock which was outstanding was simply a temporary loan until we should issue the common stock at par and take it up, and, consequently, in dealing with the question, the question simply was when the directors of the Northern Pacific should decide that it was expedient to do it.

Fols. 1291 to 1294

MR. STEELE:

Q. Do you know how it happened that a plan of retirement was adopted that prevented the preferred stockholders from participating in the benefits, and obtaining convertible certificates?

A. I know how it was adopted. It was adopted by a vote of the board of directors.

* * * * * *

Why it was adopted was, it was considered by us, my firm, who were fiscal agents, and by the board of directors, as a fair, equitable, wise and expedient plan to pursue.

Q. And it was also considered by your firm that if any other plan was adopted, or if the preferred stockholers were given equal privileges in the retirement, that it would throw the control into this other interest (the Union Pacific) that had the $78,000,000, was it not?

A. No, sir.

Q. That was not considered at all?

A. We never took that into consideration at all.

Fols. 1214 to 1216.

Q. Do you know why it happened to be taken up and acted on at that particular time?

A. I do; it had been intended from the time of the reorganization to retire the preferred stock as soon as the company became financially able to do so. The voting trust by its terms continued until January, 1902, but in the fall of 1900 the company had become very prosperous; it was very strong, and it was deemed by the voting trustees that they had fulfilled the purpose of their trust, and that they could properly dissolve the voting trust on the first day of January following, which was 1901. The only uncompleted object of the reorganization was the retirement of the preferred stock, and they intended at the time that the voting trust was dissolved that the preferred stock should be retired on the first of January, 1902, that being the first date when it could be retired under the provisions of the charter, by-laws and stock certificates.

Fols. 1217–1219.

The Burlington purchase was not made with a view of organizing the Northern Securities Company, or unifying ownership of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific shares.

MR. HILL:

"Q. In planning and carrying out the purchase of the Burlington shares, was it any part of that scheme, so far as you know, that the shares of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Companies, or any of those shares, should be put into a holding company?

"A. That was no part of the Burlington transaction; it was not considered. I don't know that it was thought of. I know it was never discussed, and I don't think it was thought of or cut any figure whatever in the Burlington purchase.

* * * * * *

But the question of the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern ever being put into a common ownership was not thought of in that connection nor until long afterwards.

"Q. At the time of making the Burlington purchase was there any purpose on your part or, so far as you know, on the part of your associates, or Mr. Morgan and his associates, of increasing your holdings of Northern Pacific stock so as to obtain a controlling majority of that stock?

"A. There was no effort made to increase the holdings of the Northern Pacific by the stockholders of the Great Northern that I know of, and I am very well satisfied that had such been the case I would have known of it. In fact, some of them had sold their stock as the prices advanced. As to Mr. Morgan's views about increasing his Northern Pacific, I do not think Mr. Morgan's people increased their holding of Northern Pacific up to and during the time the Burlington transaction was being considered.

Fols. 2720, 2724.

Q. Between March and the 1st day of May, 1901, had you and others representing the Great Northern and J. Pierpont Morgan & Co. been buying stock in the Northern Pacific?

A. I had not. I don't know that any one else had for Mr. Morgan or the gentlemen you have named.

Fol. 180, p. 46.

Q. At that time, in April, (conclusion of the Burlington purchase), how much common stock did you and your immediate associates hold in the Northern Pacific?

A. I should think, on the 1st of April, somewhere from 33 to 35 millions.

Q. And about how much of that was held on the 21st of April?
